WILL MEET AGAIN TODAY

SENATORS SUPPORT DAVIS

He Gets Letter of Assurance From Lodge and Is Supposed to Have Produced It at Session.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The International Communications Conference met again today and the danger of a break over disposal of the 18,000 miles of German cables was averted temporarily at least. No statement was made as to any ground for agreement, but it became known that the foreign delegates had canceled railroad and steamship reservations for their departure home. Negotiations between the five powers will be continued tomorrow morning.

France and Japan are held responsible for the deadlock. Great Britain and Italy have been willing to co-operate on the basis of a restoration of the pre-war service for which the United States Government is contending. But the French delegates have been insisting upon control of one of the former German cables to the United States, while the Japanese delegates have been insisting on control of the Yap-Shanghai cable which the Japanese have diverted to their shores.

If the present arrangement is sanctioned or allowed to stand, the United States would be despoiled of important pre-war rights and would be cut off from direct cable communication with Central Europe and China. There would be no direct cable communication with Germany, Central Europe and Scandinavia and American business and news messages would have to be routed through England or France. There would be no direct cable communication with China, except via Manila, which would be subject to interruptions.

Lodge Assures Davis.

The State Department has definite assurance in a letter written by Senator Lodge, as Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, that the Senate will support the Government to the limit in the stand taken against the contentions of France and Japan. Senator Lodge's letter was written last Friday and was delivered to Acting Secretary Davis after he had appeared before that committee in secret session.

Armed with this letter, the American delegates met the delegates from England, France, Italy and Japan in plenary session held today in the Diplomatic Room at the State Department. The session lasted from 10 o'clock in the morning until after 2 o'clock in the afternoon. No agreement was reached in today's session, but it is still hoped by the American delegates that Japan and France will realize that the American Government is in dead earnest in the matter and insistent upon the restoration of its pre-war rights in the matter of the German cables. Another session of the conference will be held tomorrow afternoon.

"Members of the Senate committee," said one of its prominent members to a representative of THE NEW YORK TIMES tonight, "are amazed over the action of France in joining Japan against the demand of the United States that its pre-war rights respecting German cables in both the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans should be restored. What members of the Senate don't understand is why France should be in alignment with Japan in opposition to us.

"What the United States wants is an absolute restoration of the pre-war service of the German cables. We want direct cable service to Central and Northern Europe such as we had through these cables before the war. We want direct cable service to China such as we had through the Yap cable. Nothing else and nothing less will suit the Senate."

Sees Reprisals Unnecessary.

When asked whether this Government would undertake reprisals, this Senator, while not caring to be quoted by name, said:

"We will find ways for obtaining what we want. We do not feel like making threats in the matter. That is unnecessary as well as unwise in the present delicate situation. The stand which the State Department has taken is most admirable. It has the unanimous support of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. It will have the solid support of the United States whenever it is necessary to bring the issue to a showdown."

The Japanese and French delegates as well as the Italian and British have communicated the facts regarding the latest development in the situation to their home Governments. The coming week will undoubtedly disclose whether the French and Japanese Governments are willing to respect the rights upon which the United States Government insists or whether the preliminary communications conference will break up without agreements.

Two cables of great importance are involved in the situation as it affects the transatlantic communication service. In the Pacific the controversy concerns the cable from the Yap station which formerly linked Shanghai with

Lecointe Sets a New Record, Flying 2½ Miles in 46 Seconds

PARIS, Dec. 12.—Sadi Lecointe, the aviator, today broke the world's airplane speed record for four kilometers (two and one-half miles). Flying at Villa Coublay, Lecointe negotiated the distance in 46 seconds, or at the rate of 194.5 miles per hour.

On Dec. 16, 1919, Lecointe covered a distance of one kilometer at the rate of 190 miles an hour. For some seconds of this flight he reached a speed of 226 miles an hour.

88 NEW WARSHIPS IF NO PEACE LEAGUE

ASKS EXPANSION IN PACIFIC

Secretary Says Japan Has Begun Five More Capital Ships and Plans Eight Others.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Approval of another three-year naval building program, involving the construction of eighty-eight vessels, if the United States does not enter the League of Nations or a similar world organization, is given by Secretary Daniels in his annual report to President Wilson, made public today.

"If the United States is not to enter into any agreement with the other powers of the earth, which are now bound together in the League of Nations," says the Naval Secretary, "I feel compelled to approve the recommendation of the General Board that Congress authorize another three-year program to be begun as soon as the capital ships now under construction are launched."

The three-year program recommended by the General Board to be under way by 1924 includes the construction of three battleships, one battle cruiser, thirty light cruisers, eight gunboats, eighteen destroyer leaders, twelve mine laying submarines, six cruiser submarines, four airplane carriers, three destroyer tenders and three submarine tenders.

"If the United States takes its stand with other countries in an organization to prevent war and promote peace," Mr. Daniels says, "our present navy, with the addition of some special types, will be adequate for our defense and the prevention of aggression."

No specific recommendations for appropriations for new construction during the next fiscal year are included in the Secretary's report, but his estimate of the cost of maintaining the naval establishment for the coming year is $679,515,731, exclusive of any sums Congress may add for new building. This is $240,000,000 more than was appropriated for the present fiscal year. Mr. Daniels says that the sum "is not really an increase," but is "necessary to carry on the construction of ships already authorized and the completion of shore establishments already begun by direction of Congress."

Wants Big Pacific Establishment.

The most pressing problem confronting the nation with regard to the national defense, the Secretary continues, is the immediate necessity for increasing the naval shore establishment facilities on the Pacific Coast.

"The day will never come," Mr. Daniels says, "when a powerful fleet will not be based in the Pacific, and it is essential that ample provision be made not only for the Pacific fleet, but for the whole American fleet in its stated periods of tactical exercises on the west coast."

Among the new Pacific Coast projects now under consideration for which Congress has been or will be asked to provide funds are a deep water docking and repair base, a submarine base and other developments at San Francisco; an aviation base at Sand Point, King

HOOVER COMMENDS LEAGUE TO HARDING IN TALK AT MARION

FEARS REOPENING DISPUTES

Warns of Renewing "10,000 Questions Closed in Documents Already Executed."

Special to The New York Times.

MARION, Ohio, Dec. 12.—The entrance of the United States into the League of Nations, after certain changes considered necessary in the covenant and the Treaty of Versailles have been accepted, was urged upon Senator Harding by Herbert C. Hoover, who came here today in response to an invitation from the President-elect to confer upon questions relating to the foreign policies of the next Administration.

After his conference, Mr. Hoover made it plain that he had not altered his views regarding the League. He told Senator Harding that while he considered a number of provisions of the League and the treaty objectionable, they should be modified or erased, and that the United States should enter by salvaging instead of scrapping the League and negotiating a new association. The same result would be accomplished, he said, without reopening "ten thousand questions closed in documents already executed." Mr. Hoover would retain the machinery of the League.

"We discussed the whole gamut of international and national troubles without arriving at any definite conclusions," Mr. Hoover said after his talk with the President-elect.

It developed that in the hour and three-quarters during which Senator Harding and Mr. Hoover were together in the former's office this forenoon they touched upon foreign relations, Cabinet appointments, agricultural, business and labor conditions, European relief, Far Eastern famines, and the investment abroad of the American foreign trade surplus provided the protection of American citizens and capital there is assured.

Cabinet Portfolio Not Offered.

"In your discussion of these problems," Mr. Hoover was asked, "was any mention made of the men best qualified for their solution?"

"Naturally, the discussion would not be complete without taking that subject into consideration, too," he replied.

From good authority, it was learned that the President-elect made no offer of a Cabinet portfolio to Mr. Hoover.

Motoring here from Columbus, Mr. Hoover arrived at Senator Harding's home at 10:45 o'clock. Senator Harding, who had been awaiting his arrival for nearly an hour, walked with him across the lawn to the Harding headquarters, where they entered upon their discussion immediately.

Colonel George Harvey, who has been Senator Harding's guest since Friday and who was a caustic critic of Mr. Hoover's pre-convention campaign, was not on hand to greet the former Food Administrator. The shades of the guest room window in the Harding home were tightly drawn. Later, as Mr. Hoover was about to re-enter his machine, Colonel Harvey appeared on the front porch and the two shook hands over the railing.

Senator Harding and Mr. Hoover dined with Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Sawyer, and later Mr. Hoover motored back to Columbus.

Mr. Hoover announced that Senator and Mrs. Harding would have 250 "invisible guests" at their Christmas dinner this year, having subscribed $2,500

Four Italian Armored Car Crews Desert And Join d'Annunzio's Forces in Fiume

TRIESTE, Dec. 12 (Associated Press).—The first break in the regular Italian Army in favor of d'Annunzio occurred Saturday, when four armored cars started from Udine. Three of them succeeded in reaching the palace of the poet-commander in Fiume.

The fourth car was prevented from reaching its destination by a sentinel, who threw under its wheels obstacles which cut the tires, bringing it to a salt. The crew of the car, however, escaped and managed to reach Fiume on foot.

General Caviglia, the Italian commander, on Saturday went to Abbazia, Istria, where he had a conference with the commanders who are opposing the forces of d'Annunzio.

It is stated that, owing to the immovable position of d'Annunzio, the Governments intends to send an ultimatum to him containing the threat of an offensive action. It is reported, however, that d'Annunzio would welcome any military demonstration.

The defections from the army and the recent joining of the poet's forces of naval craft, it is believed here, will hasten decisive action. General Caviglia's mission to Abbazia is considered in this connection.

There were wild scenes in Fiume Saturday when members of the Autonomous Party, who are d'Annunzio's sworn enemies, were beaten by Legionaries in reprisal for their having passed resolutions condemning the poet. Socialists were also attacked.

The old National Council has passed a resolution declaring that its members will remain true to d'Annunzio.

ROME, Dec. 12.—A message to the Idea Nationale from Fiume describes the arrival at Spalato, Trau, Porto Re and Buccari of detachments of the recently defeated South Russian army of General Baron Wrangel.

Buccari is only about five miles from Fiume. Cattaro, it adds, has been occupied by 7,000 of these troops, who are armed with machine guns.

It is the impression in Fiume, the message says, that the Belgrade Government wishes to use the forces in order to threaten Croatia in case a separatist movement occurs there, and to threaten Fiume if d'Annunzio becomes too aggressive.

Commenting on the message the Idea Nationale says:

"It is true that Slav mobilization in the Adriatic is beginning with the Treaty of Rapallo not yet ratified. Wrangel's mercenaries and Russian refugees have invaded and betrayed Dalmatia, abandoned by Italian troops."

Penrose Mentions J. M. Beck for Cabinet or Ambassador

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 12.—Senator Penrose announced here tonight that he expected to meet within a few days Harry M. Daugherty, who was President-elect Harding's campaign manager; Senator Watson of Indiana, Senator McCumber of North Dakota, John T. King of Connecticut, former National Committeeman, to talk over Cabinet material among other matters.

The Senator announced also that he expects to meet shortly James M. Beck, who was formerly Assistant Attorney General. In this connection the Senator said that Mr. Beck has been mentioned for the post of Ambassador to England and also as a possible candidate for Secretary of State. He said he hadn't talked to anyone about Mr. Beck, but that he had considerable regard for Mr. Beck's ability. He was apparently not of the opinion that Elihu Root would be seriously considered for Secretary of State. It is said that Dr. David Jayne Hill, one-time Ambassador to Germany, is among the possibilities for Secretary of State.

The Senator again expressed the opinion that Senator Knox would not leave the Senate.

Senator Penrose was out on the Boardwalk three hours today. He said he had not felt so well for some time, and he looked the part.

GOV. SMITH JOINS BIG TRUCKING FIRM

JUBILANT AT PROSPECTS

For First Time in Twenty-five Years He Will Not Be in Public Office.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Dec. 12.—Governor Alfred E. Smith is going back to his first love—trucking in New York City—on Jan. 3 of next year. On Jan. 1 he will retire to private life and on Monday morning will assume his duties as Chairman of the Board of Directors of the United States Trucking Corporation. The Governor said tonight that it would be the first time in twenty-five years that he had not been in public life or on a public payroll.

The Governor was jubilant at the prospect of getting back into business. He said there was an immense field for this sort of work in New York City and he hoped to develop the business and expand it. He goes with the largest trucking concern in the world, he believes. He will be associated with lifelong friends and is assured the co-operation of the president of the corporation, James J. Riordan and his associates, all of them practical truckmen.

On Jan. 1, 1895, Alfred E. Smith became a process server in New York County. In 1903, while still a process server, he was a candidate for the Assembly and he ran every year successfully up to 1915. In 1914 he ran for the Assembly and also for the Constitutional Convention, being elected to both. His record there is well known to the people of the State. The years 1916 and 1919 were the only years that his name was not on the ballot. The first year mentioned he was Sheriff and the next time he was Governor.

Governor Smith is getting ready to move and inside of another week all of his personal effects will have been taken from the Executive Mansion in Eagle Street to New York City. His Oliver Street home is being made ready for him and there he will live with Mrs. Smith and their children.

Speaking of the new company with which he is to be associated, the Governor said:

"The formation of this company came about as a result of a study of the commercial trucking business which led a number of our New York bankers and business men to believe that this field of work offered a splendid opportunity for the introduction of large corporate organization, consolidation of facilities and establishment of widespread and responsible service at a minimum of cost which would result not only in commercial gain but also public benefit.

"In the development of the company, a leading part was played by the United States Distributing Corporation, a holding company, which has a controlling ownership in the trucking corporation and takes an active part in its management. The trucking corporation brought out and merged the business and equipment of twenty-eight of the largest trucking firms existing in Greater New York. As a result, it has more than 2,000 employes, 2,500 horses, 2,000 trucks, 300 motors, immense equipment for stevedoring work, the hauling of structural steel and building materials, and other special facilities fitting it to handle everything from needles to locomotives.

"It has numerous branch offices well located to cover all parts of the greater city. Its work is zoned so as to obtain minimum hauls and to work in return loads as frequently as possible. It is competent to meet all sorts of emergency calls, being able to supply hundreds of trucks, day or night, on an individual call as easily as it can supply a single one.

"Nevertheless, there is still a large field ahead for developing the trucking business up to the standards of other well organized lines of industry. It is

ACCIDENT, SAY COMPANIONS

BULLET PIERCED A LUNG

Party, Including Joseph G. Farrell, Had Been Six Weeks on Transcontinental Tour.

Special to The New York Times.

FRESNO, Cal., Dec. 12.—Peter J. Dooling Jr., son of Congressman Peter Dooling of New York City, was almost instantly killed when shot by Hugo Engle, also of New York, in this city early this morning. Dooling and Engle, together with Joseph C. Farrell, another New Yorker, were completing the final leg of a 4,000-mile trip across the continent with San Francisco as their destination when the tragedy occurred.

The investigation by the police has not been completed, but it is the belief that the shooting was purely accidental. As a result no arrests have been made, but the two companions of Dooling are being kept under surveillance.

The three, traveling in Farrell's automobile, arrived in Fresno from Los Angeles at 1 o'clock this morning. After obtaining a supply of oil and gasoline and a light lunch they departed for San Francisco, which is but 200 miles away. Dooling was assigned to do the driving until 5 o'clock and his two companions sought rest in the rear seat of the machine.

Engle, on lying down, found that a 22-calibre rifle was disturbing him and was putting it out of his way when the trigger caught in an article on the seat, causing the rifle to explode. The bullet passed through the front seat and entered Dooling's body, passing through his right lung and lodging below his heart.

Engle jumped to the front seat and stopped the machine, which was out of control. Farrell dragged the prostrate body of his chum and companion to the rear seat. Dooling became unconscious almost immediately. Engle immediately turned the car back toward the business section of the city and sped to a hospital. The wounded youth was pronounced dead by Dr. Weise when he was taken to the sanitarium.

The body was taken in charge by Coroner John Lisle, who announced that a Coroner's inquest would be held tomorrow to determine responsibility for the death. The prevailing opinion is that the death was accidental, as stated by Engle and Farrell, although certain circumstances lead the police to believe that there may have been other circumstances surrounding the tragedy.

Farrell, a chum of Dooling's ever since the two were able to talk, and a most intimate friend of the family, is prostrated with grief. It was at his solicitation that Dooling left New York on the trip, which was to have consumed three months' time. Farrell will return to New York as soon as possible. Farrell intends to bring his friend's body with him.

Engle said he had planned the trip to come to California to enter the automobile business in San Francisco. He induced Farrell to accompany him and at the latter's suggestion Dooling was induced to join the party. The latter two had planned to make the trip for pleasure. They had planned to spend a month traveling here, a month returning and a month in touring the Pacific Coast. They had planned to return by boat to New York.

Five weeks ago they left New York. The trip was taken via the Southern route, and much time was spent en route. It was a trip of much disappointment, however, as their machine was plundered on several occasions and they met with many minor mishaps. They had planned to arrive in San Francisco this morning, in time to join Mrs. Engle and her son, who were waiting for the party.

Peter J. Dooling Jr., who was a curb broker, left his home here six weeks ago with Engle and Farrell for the transcontinental tour, expecting to return to New York a month hence, according to his father, Representative Peter J. Dooling, who was seen last night at his home, 460 West Forty-third Street. Mr. Dooling, despite efforts to communicate with the Fresno authorities, had only the bare fact that his son had been shot.

Young Dooling, one of six children, was 25 years old, and served two years in the navy during the war. With the rank of Junior Lieutenant he was stationed on one of the army transports carrying troops overseas. According to Representative Dooling, Joseph G. Farrell was an automobile accessories dealer, and Hugo Engle, a friend of Farrell's being merely an acquaintance of his son.

"Peter had known Joe Farrell for years," he said. "They went to school together, and they played around this neighborhood as boys. They went to the High School of Commerce, and after their graduation the friendship continued, while my son was studying in Stevens Institute in Hoboken. Engle, Farrell and my son had been looking forward to their long automobile trip for months, and six weeks ago today they started away from here in Farrell's machine.

"Peter wrote frequently to his mother, and he often mentioned how they would shoot rabbits and other small game for their meals, which they prepared when they camped out for the night on the way to the Coast."

Congressman Dooling said that the first news of the tragedy came to him at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, when a brief message from Mr. Farrell said that Dooling had met with an accident. Another and later telegram recorded his death, and finally a message came from J. T. Lyslie, Coroner at Fresno, stating that Dooling had been accidentally shot in an automobile outside the city. The Coroner declared that every indication was that the shooting had been accidental and that an inquest on Monday probably would result in that verdict.

Dooling was a member of Liberty Council, Knights of Columbus. Through active participation in this organization and in athletics he was widely known on the west side.

CORK IS SWEPT BY INCENDIARY FIRES; PROPERTY LOSS ESTIMATE, $15,000,000; MILITARY PARTY SHOT AT FROM AMBUSH

LONDON, Dec. 12.—An agency dispatch from Cork says that special military patrols were on the streets tonight with instructions to shoot on sight any one found engaged in looting. Some looting of damaged premises has taken place, and in at least one case attempts were made to break open safes by means of revolver shots. So far as can be ascertained no lives have been lost nor have any injured persons been treated in the hospitals.

DUBLIN, Dec. 12.—There has been no official confirmation of a report that fighting occurred during the burning of Cork between the police and military. The only official message bearing on this report was a statement that the Auxiliaries had been fired upon intermittently between 8 and 11 o'clock last night.

The Labor Commission is planning to send two members to Cork on the first train tomorrow morning. The Laborites incline to the opinion that the proclamation of martial law will greatly improve the security of the people and that it was instituted primarily with the object of checking excesses by the new force of irregular police and bringing them under control.

CARUSO BETTER, WILL SING TONIGHT

Enrico Caruso, who ruptured a blood vessel in his throat Saturday night during the Metropolitan Opera Company's Brooklyn performance of "Elisir d'Amore" and was forced to abandon his rôle, was so much better yesterday that his physician announced that the famous tenor would be able to sing at the Metropolitan Opera House tonight.

The only reservation made by the physician, Dr. Philip Horowitz of 65 West Seventy-third Street, was that his patient would be able to return at once to the operatic stage "barring accidents."

Dr. Horowitz discussed the tenor's mishap most optimistically. He said that not only had the hemorrhage stopped entirely, but that he did not expect any renewal of it. Further, he said there was nothing in the nature of the breaking of the tiny vessel to suggest the probability of future trouble of the same sort.

"The little accident was of the sort that might have happened to any one," said Dr. Horowitz, "and does in fact happen to numbers of persons. The only difference was that in Caruso's case the natural congestion of the throat and the great muscular exertion, both inevitable attributes of singing, converted what otherwise might have been only a very tiny hemorrhage into sufficient bleeding to cause discomfort.

Injured Vessel a Very Small Vein.

"The vessel which burst was a very small vein, of hardly more than capillary size. It was situated not, as at first reported, below the vocal cords, but at the base of the tongue and above them in the larynx. Naturally the blood which exuded went into the trachea and choked Mr. Caruso when he kept on singing.

"A very small scratch from swallowing food of some sort might well have caused the bleeding. Had it occurred from some such cause in a person not vigorously exercising the throat there probably would have been no more than a single drop of blood and the whole thing would have been forgotten."

Mr. Caruso remained in bed all day in his apartment at the Hotel Vanderbilt and Dr. Horowitz refused to allow him to have visitors, thinking it better that he should give his throat complete rest if he wished to use it tonight when he is to carry the part of Don Alvaro in "La Forza del Destino."

The tenor rested well. Reassured by the failure of the bleeding to set in anew and satisfied from his physician's prognosis that he had no cause for worry, he recovered rapidly from the severe nervous strain of the original anxiety lest his voice might be affected permanently, and the gallant effort to keep on singing despite his condition. Mrs. Caruso was with him all day and, though Dr. Horowitz called in the morning and again in the evening, he did not think it necessary to remain throughout the day.

The tenor's secretary, Bruno Zirato, unlike his employer, did not rest quietly. News of the mishap which brought the Brooklyn performance to an untimely close, it developed, had caused a thrill of sympathy and apprehension around the world. It was Mr. Zirato's task to convey the tenor's gratitude for the sympathy and to allay the apprehension. It was a big task.

Widespread Interest Shown.

The occurrence had, in fact, served as a demonstration both in the rapidity of modern news handling and in the universal interest in Caruso. Though it was after 10 o'clock when word of the suspension of the Brooklyn performance reached Manhattan, and Sunday papers go to press early, correspondents of South American and European papers

DR. GRANT REOPENS BREACH WITH BISHOP

HE ATTACKS CONSECRATION

The time when it was necessary to consecrate a church has gone by, according to the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street. "Should Churches be Consecrated?" was the subject of Dr. Grant's sermon yesterday morning. The rector asserted that the consecrating of churches was a relic of paganism. He declared it was the unanimous opinion of himself and of the wardens and vestrymen of the Church of the Ascension that no formula said by a Bishop eighty years ago, at which time that church had been set apart from a common to a sacred use, should today limit free speech on the part of all who attended the Sunday evening open forums held in his church.

Incidentally Dr. Grant declared that the clergy formed the closest labor union in this country and the Church was the closest corporation in the United States today.

He said the trade union was nothing in comparison with it. This was especially true of the Episcopal and the Roman Church, he said.

It was because of the truths which the Episcopal Church tried to advance on the subject of consecration and other such forms that the Right Rev. Frederick J. Kinsman, late the Episcopal Bishop of Delaware, quit the Episcopal Church and was now seeking admission into the priesthood of the Roman Catholic Church, Dr Grant asserted.

Dr. Grant suggested that "our Bishops should be the first to apply His teachings, because they consider themselves His successors."

It was the opinion of practically all who heard the sermon that this opens the entire controversy again between Bishop Charles S. Burch and Dr. Grant, which culminated last Spring in the Bishop decreeing that there could be no more speeches from the floor by lay people in Dr. Grant's forum and that the names of the speakers should first be referred to him for approval.

Plea for 100 Per Cent. Churches.

Dr. Grant argued that as $3,000,000,000 represented the tax exempt church property in the United States, those in control of the churches owed it to their respective communities to keep them open all the time. He said that there were 234,000 churches in this country and that they "worked" on a 4 per cent. basis, whereas they owed it to the Commonwealth to "work" on a 100 per cent. basis.

"I would have this church open all night every night, as well as all day every day, if I had my way and could get people to put in charge," declared Dr. Grant in concluding his sermon. "I would do this in order that the door would stand wide open and some one would be here to administer 'first aid' to anybody in need, to anybody who was unhappy, to anybody who was threatening suicide. I would ask anybody to come in, and I would let everybody say everything they wanted to say.

"In the name of Christ I ask you if you don't think that is very far-sighted Christian propaganda?" inquired Dr. Grant. He asked if his hearers did not think that he, who had the church so dearly at heart, and the vestry ought not to have the final say about how it is to be used.

"During the last two or three days the Church Congress of America, which is at least forty years old, has held a meeting in Rochester in which one of the topics discussed was, 'Does the Consecration of Churches Limit Their Use?'" said Dr. Grant. "I was invited

CITY HALL IS BURNED DOWN

FLAMES RAGE ALL NIGHT

MILITARY COMB THE CITY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CORK, Dec. 12.—At least $15,000,000 damage was done here last night by incendiary fires. Several large shops in Patrick Street, the City Hall, Carnegie Library in Anglesea Street and many premises in the streets intersecting Patrick Street were destroyed. All the buildings were substantial, occupying large areas.

As the fires blazed away today in the basements the large masonry walls fell into the streets and dividing walls toppled one on the other.

The spectacle filled one with awe. I saw Dublin immediately after the rebellion, but, great though the damage was there (and many journalists who had visited the war front likened it to Verdun after the first battle there, with its prolonged and intensive bombardment), the picture presented now in this city's principal thoroughfare is more appalling. A military officer friend, looking on the tumbled ruins and fires flickering out today, said to me: "I saw things to equal this only during my campaign in Flanders during the war."

Ambush of Troops the Supposed Cause.

Ambush of two lorries full of military police at 7:30 last evening is supposed to have been the cause underlying the outbreak of incendiarism. This daring attack was delivered at a place called Dillon's Cross, about 4,000 yards from the Cork military barracks. The futility of these ambushes is condemned by every one except the small extreme wing of Sinn Fein.

From early afternoon on Saturday large numbers of special constables and auxiliaries were arriving in the city, and as they marched to their quarters fully armed with rifles, revolvers and double rows of bandoliers full of ammunition, they made a formidable display. Some of these men accompanied by auxiliaries were in the evening motoring to the Cork military barracks. When they rounded Dillon's Cross on the old Youghal Road, two bombs were hurled at them and fire was opened on them from behind a dead wall facing a terrace of houses.

Twelve of the occupants of the lorries were immediately put out of action, sustaining serious wounds, from which there has been already one death. Fortunately, the drivers were not incapacitated, and though the fire was returned with vigor after some time, the lorries had to proceed with their wounded complement to the barracks.

Half an hour afterward the city resounded to revolver and rifle fire. Bands of auxiliaries with special constables cleared the streets.

All males were held up and searched, and in some cases they were roughly dealt with. Passengers were ejected from tramcars at the point of revolvers. Meanwhile women and girls were allowed to go unchallenged, but men and boys were lined up against a wall and searched. One of the last trams going to the power house was stopped at Father Mathew's Statue. This time the driver and conductor were ordered to leave it there and it was then set on fire.

Business Places Destroyed.

At 10 o'clock the extensive drapery premises of Grant's, owned by Lyons & Co., the Chairman of which is Sir Stanley Harrington, was set on fire. This spread to Haynes's jewelery shop, on the lower side, where Laneway interests, and back to the Central Meat Market. The drapery building is completely gutted. In the direction of Patrick's Bridge the following premises are also destroyed: Egan's, jewelers; Sumner, chemists; Munster Arcade, drapers, owned by Robertson, Ledlie & Ferguson; O'Regan's, drapers; Dartry, dye works; Durton's, tailors; Thompson's toy shop, Cash & Co., drapers, owned by Sir John Arnott; Scully-Connell, ladies' outfitters; Lee's boot stores, Roche's drapery stores, Joliff's, drapers; O'Sullivan's, cigar divan.

Here the destruction on the principal streets ends. But in the intersecting streets the shops, principally licensed premises, are also completely burned out, leaving an area to a depth of fifty yards a pile of brick, iron girders and other débris. Across the river in Anglesea Street the Carnegie Library is destroyed and also the City Hall and municipal buildings which form Albert Quay.

Citizens are filled with fear that there will be further fires, but I learn General Higginson has given an undertaking that troops will take immediate charge of the city and that there is no need for alarm. Another hopeful factor is the strong pronouncement of the Catholic Bishop Dr. Cohalan at the cathedral today condemning the ambushing of any Crown forces and intimating a notice to excommunicate from the Church any one for participating in ambushes. An authoritative act like this may early restore peace to this country, a condition yearned for by the people generally.

It is feared loss of life may have occurred, as persons connected with the premises burned are reported to be missing.

A terrible tragedy was enacted about 3 o'clock this morning when two brothers named Delany, living at Dublin Hill, were shot in their beds. One was killed outright and the condition of the other is hopeless. Their home was entered by a number of armed men. Another man, named Mahony, was taken from his house on Ballyhooly Road and severely beaten, the threat to shoot him when he had been placed up against a wall not being executed.

No trams are running today and the city is deserted.

DUBLIN, Dec. 12.—At midday today it was officially stated that the fires in Cork appeared to have started in two buildings only, whence the flames spread to the others.

Large Sections Devastated.

DUBLIN, Dec. 12 (Associated Press).—Several large sections of Cork were devastated by fire on Saturday night and today. The conflagration followed the shooting from ambush of a military party on Saturday.

On the south bank of the River Lee the Carnegie Library, the Corn Exchange and other buildings were razed by the fire, while in the territory between the northern and southern branches of the river much havoc was wrought by flames in the business section.

Late this evening it was reported that the fire was under control, but it was said that the damage done by the flames was estimated at between £2,000,000 and £3,000,000.

The fires extended to St. Patrick's Street from Cook Street to Maylor Street, and swept entire rows of buildings on both sides of Winthrop Street, leading from St. Patrick's Street to Old George's Street.

It was reported from Cork yesterday afternoon that newly arrivel parties of auxiliary cadets marched through the streets, holding up and searching pedestrians, and firing into the air following the ambush of auxiliaries within half a mile of the barracks.

Between 7 and 8 o'clock a period of intense quiet fell on the city, but near 9 o'clock uniformed men began to display great activity in various parts of Cork. At some points tramcars were held up and passengers taken out. It was reported that a number were beaten and others placed against the wall and closely questioned, but were finally allowed to proceed.

In the Summer Hill district, the scene of the ambush, shortly after curfew two brothers named Delaney are reported to have been taken from their homes and shot, one subsequently dying. During the hour before curfew terrorism held sway, and when the streets were emptied of civilians, loud explosions and rifle and revolver shots kept up until early morning. The explosions appeared to come from incendiary bombs, as persons who ventured to look from their windows saw fires break out in St. Patrick's Street and daylight revealed the full extent of the damage.

It is not improbable that lives have been lost in the fires. Already several persons connected with the destroyed houses and business premises are reported missing.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon people were just beginning to venture again into the streets. The whole city was then in control of the military, and it is understood that the officer in command assured the populace that the military would remain on duty indefinitely to prevent further destruction. The troops are in full fighting order, pickets with machine guns being posted at all vantage points.

Fires Burn Themselves Out.

BELFAST, Dec. 12.—A score of fires had burned themselves out in Cork by 4 o'clock this afternoon and the firemen were in possession of the ruins. At 6:30 this evening a special train left Dublin for Cork carrying Captain Myers, chief of the Dublin brigade, and a motor fire engine with crew.

A deputation of the citizens of Cork, says a dispatch received here, including the Protestant Bishop and the Town Clerk, waited on the officer commanding the Cork troops and requested him to take measures to prevent a recurrence of the appalling damage to property. He promised to send out special military patrols.

The destroyed City Hall in Cork was only excelled in point of size in Ireland by Belfast's great civic building. This was the third time it had been set on fire, the firemen being driven out at the point of revolvers. On the two previous occasions, the west wing, devoted to the Public Health Department, was burned, but no mistake was made this time, the hall being set alight in many places. The great hall, seating 3,000 and having a fine organ, shared the fate of the municipal premises.

No confirmation has been received here of the shooting of the Delaney brothers, but it is officially stated that one man was killed and eleven were wounded in the ambush which resulted in the reprisals.

The fact that no serious casualties were caused by the bomb is explained by the statement that preliminary warning was given to all occupants of buildings to leave prior to the attacks.

DIFFER ON THE CAUSE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The Daily Chronicle in an editorial article on the Cork fire says:

"Local opinion, needless to say, is disposed to connect the two tragic incidents of the wounding of the cadets and the subsequent firing of houses, but with the information at present before us, it would be foolish in the extreme to attempt to fix the blame for an act which may have been the height of criminality, which may have been sheer accident, or which may have been due to explosives carelessly exposed in houses, as we know they were exposed in Dublin. All that is speculation.

"For the moment we can do no more than lament this unparalleled disaster which adds to the misfortunes of a city that had already suffered from being the centre of the Sinn Fein conspiracy."

The Daily News which accepts the burnings as an act of retaliation for the ambush of the auxiliary police says:

"The significant and remarkable thing about this deplorable week-end crime is that immediately afterward the Roman Catholic Bishop of Cork not only fiercely denounced attackers of the police, but publicly declared that the future perpetrators of similar crimes would be excommunicated from the church. All who know the intimate relations of the Irish Catholic Church and the Irish people will realize that this is an extraordinary statement. It means that in the event of a truce becoming an accomplished fact, the hierarchy will have the support of millions of Irish men and women of all classes in turning murderers into outlaws among their own people. It means that the Government will indeed have the murderers by the throat, for in hunting them out by legitimate methods they will be operating in the midst of an actively sympathetic, instead of actively hostile, population."

CONDEMNS "MURDER GANGS."

Republican Leader in Monaghan Says It Is State of War.

DUBLIN, Dec. 12.—A proclamation declaring that "the public must at once realize that Ireland is in a state of war with forces of the British Crown" has been issued over the signature of the officer commanding troops of the "Irish Republican Army" in County Monaghan.

The proclamation, which sets forth that armed gangs in County Monaghan have been attacking and murdering inoffensive citizens, says that "while we extend the hand of friendship to all Irishmen, murder gangs and their guides and informers shall be summarily dealt with."

The proclamation further explains recent raids for arms carried out in County Monaghan by stating they were ordered in anticipation of a similar order by the British Government.

CORK IRELAND'S THIRD CITY.

Cork, the municipality of Lord Mayor Terence MacSwiney, who voluntarily starved himself to death, has been rated second only to Dublin as a centre of anti-Government activity by the Sinn Fein and in rioting and reprisals. One of the oldest cities in ancient Ireland, the city now going through its third fire within two months, has aligned its barely 80,000 population as "bitter-enders" for complete Irish independence.

Cork and its County, either in reprisal, riots or assassinations, has contributed liberally to the 673 persons killed or wounded in Ireland up to Nov. 27, according to a statement given to the British Parliament by the Home Office last month.

According to the cable dispatches from the scene, the flames struck at one of the city's most historic sections, now a place of commercial structures, artistic in architecture and built of Ballintemple limestone in red and dove gray. The fire, reported as sweeping from Cook to Maylor Streets, thence to St. Patrick's Street (also called Patrick Street), down Winthrop Street, on both sides, to Old George's Street, attacked spacious thoroughfares. Patrick Street is 120 feet wide and connects with the Grand Parade, which is tree-lined and 150 feet broad. Patrick Street, rated Cork's busiest thoroughfare, is lined with banking houses.

With the beginning dim in the sixth century, when St. Finbarr founded a monastery on the site where now stands University College, Cork has had seventeen charters, the first granted by Henry II. in 1185 and the last, carrying the appointment of a Lord Mayor, given by Queen Victoria in 1898. Broad concessions in these charters and the city's natural advantages gave Cork or "Corcaigh" in the Gaelic, a steady commercial growth up to the time when the movement from Ireland to this country considerably slackened its progress.

Now surpassed in commercial importance only by Dublin and Belfast, the city is located nine miles up the Cove of Cork from Queenstown. It is 165 miles southwest of Dublin. The city is built at the division of the River Lee and the chief business section is enclosed between the river's two channels.

Connecting the residential section with the business section, the scene of the fire, are three spans over the North Channel. They are a footbridge, North Gate Bridge and St. Patrick's Bridge, the latter a fine structure of dressed limestone and broader than any Thames bridge, except Westminister Bridge and widened London Bridge.

These spans lead directly into the exceedingly active commercial section, as on the South Channel do Clark's, South Gate, Parliament and Parnell bridges. Near to Parnell Bridge is the City Hall, reported destroyed by the flames. This building was two stories in height and constructed of Ballintemple limestone. With the grounds enclosed at one end, it took in virtually a blockfront. It was surmounted by a tower bearing a clock.

Adjoining this structure, and just around the corner, was the Carnegie Free Library, also reported lost. The library building was enclosed in spacious grounds, and, like the municipal building, was two stories high, with a cupola at one end. The building's dark stone was set off by gray limestone facings around its many windows. Near by are the five stations of the railways serving the city and county of Cork, the latter the largest county in Ireland.

An attempt to destroy the public buildings in Cork was made on the night of Nov. 29 when fire of incendiary origin was discovered in the same area where the present flames raged. According to correspondents who arrived in the city while the fire was still in progress, fifteen buildings were destroyed, and only prompt action by fire brigades of citizens prevented the City Hall from being lost. Charges were made by Sinn Feiners and their sympathizers that the fires had been set by "Black and Tans" in retaliation for the non-return of three British officers who had been kidnapped several days before from a train near Waterfall.

As far back as last June violence began to appear in Cork. It was in that Brig. Gen. Lucas and Colonels Danford and Tyrrell.

Finally, on Nov. 30, came the murder of sixteen police cadets who were shot down by 100 Sinn Feiners who ambushed the cadets in military lorries. Following this outrage many fires broke out in the city causing great damage.

Rupert Hughes, America's famous novelist, compares D. W. Griffith with Shakespeare. Mr. Hughes says: "Nothing in the history of art and literature surpasses Mr. Griffith's film." See "Way Down East" today (matinee at 2:15) at 44th St. Theatre.—Advt.

CORK CITY HALL, DESTROYED BY FIRE.

month that a party of masked Sinn Feiners captured Brigadier General Lucas and Colonels Danford and Tyrrell of the British forces in Ireland. Colonel Danford was shot down when he sought to escape from his captors, who announced that they were acting in the name of "the Irish Republic."

Several weeks of comparative quiet intervened in Cork County, while violence cropped out elsewhere. Then came a week of killings, the Sinn Fein asserting that their deeds were but retaliation for machine guns being placed on the tops of buildings where the organization was known to have been attempting to set up courts. Late in June a patrol wagon, going through the Cork streets with Sinn Fein prisoners, was ambushed. An officer in command, seated beside the chauffeur, was shot and killed.

The last week in June saw a mail train nearing Cork held up and the entire train crew kidnapped by about 100 men. During the same week five policemen were killed outright and a score of others wounded, while Commissioner Smythe of the Royal Irish Constabulary was not dead at the Country Club by fourteen armed men, and in the same affray District Inspector Craig, also of the constabulary, was wounded.

In July a riot came in Cork in which many were injured. Street fighting took place in which women were participants. This affair had scarcely passed when a party of men went to a church in the suburbs of Cork and called Police Sergeant J. A. Mulhern, directing the British intelligence work in West Cork, outside. He stepped out of the church door, blessing himself from the holy water font, and was shot down.

On Aug. 8 came the announcement by the British authorities in Cork that a more determined resistance was to be expected. It was on this day that Lord Mayor MacSwiney was arrested, charged with having a seditious document in his possession. Following his conviction, the resentment of the people of Cork was evidenced in an outbreak of riotings. To counteract this, the military authorities began a house-to-house search for arms and alleged seditious literature.

This search fanned the flames of disaffection. In searching a dwelling in Cork the soldiers were fired upon by men posted in adjoining buildings. The soldiers returned the volley, and a man was killed and several wounded.

On Aug. 23 a pitched battle was fought in the Cork streets between citizens and the police and soldiers. The fight lasted two hours, and there were several casualties.

Throughout the month of September outbreaks were many in Cork, and there came many threats due to the gradual weakening of MacSwiney. On Sept. 28 the town of Mallow, near Cork, was sacked and forty buildings, including the Town Hall, were burned. The citizens of Mallow charged the British with the fire, and several days later the British Government posted warnings against reprisals.

No violence was reported following the burning of Mallow until Oct. 5, when soldiers in the streets of Cork were fired upon. A week later a motor lorry was ambushed near Mallow and the soldier-chauffeur seriously wounded. Within a few hours after this incident outside the city, Constables Kenney and Stawford, patrolling in the city, were shot dead and a patrol wagon, coming to the scene, also received a fusillade. The next violence was on Nov. 16, when a train was held up, as it was entering the city, and three British officers were kidnapped in the same style as had been

QUESTION PETER MACSWINEY

Officials Want to Know Why He Is Without a Passport.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—High officials of the State Department tonight denied that instructions had been sent to the American Embassy at London to refuse to grant a passport for the return to this country of Peter Joseph MacSwiney of New York, a brother of the late Lord Mayor of Cork, Terence MacSwiney. The statement was made in a newspaper article here today that MacSwiney had applied two weeks ago to the American Embassy at London for a passport and that the embassy had been directed by Acting Secretary of State Davis to refuse to grant him a passport.

This allegation was denied by a high official tonight, who stated that the embassy at London had cabled to the department saying that MacSwiney had applied for a passport, and that all the department had done in the matter had been to cable to the embassy directing it to report the facts. What the State Department wants to know is that MacSwiney, if he is an American citizen, did not present to the embassy a passport for visé when he wanted to return to this country, whether he had a passport when he left this country; why and how he left this country without a passport, if he had no passport, and the other facts in the case.

The law requires Americans leaving the country to obtain passports. If Americans are being smuggled out of the country to Ireland or elsewhere without passports, the department wants to know it. Officials say they have no desire to keep MacSwiney, if he is an American, abroad, but that if he is an American he should properly establish that fact and also explain why he has no passport, if he went abroad without one.

KIDNAPPED AND ROBBED OF $70,000 IN GEMS

ALBANY, Dec. 12.—Hyman Glasser of Brooklyn, a jewelry salesman, was released tonight after being detained by the police, who are investigating his story of assault, the theft of $70,000 in gems and kidnapping. The gems, he said, were the property of three New York jewelry firms.

Glasser reported to the police of Rensselaer early today that on arriving in Albany last Thursday at 3 A. M. from Buffalo his attention was attracted by a woman's screams from an approaching taxicab. He said that the machine stopped as he came opposite him, and that he rushed out to it, throwing open the door. As he did so he was struck over the head, he told the police, and rendered unconscious.

It was not until Saturday morning, Glasser said, that he recovered consciousness and found himself confined in a cellar. Late last night, he asserted, he was put in an automobile by two men and a woman and after being driven for some distance was put out in Rensselaer. The Rensselaer police turned him over to the Albany police.

Glasser started for his home tonight, agreeing to return within a few days to assist the police in their investigation.

to the $33,000,000 fund which his organization seeks to raise by Christmas to sustain until the next harvest 3,500,000 children in Central Europe from the Baltic to the Mediterranean. The children are to be cared for in 17,000 institutions under the auspices of the Red Cross, the Jewish joint distribution and other relief organizations co-ordinated by a commission of which Mr. Hoover is the head and Franklin K. Lane is Secretary.

Economic stability in Europe, Mr. Hoover said after his conference with Senator Harding, cannot be expected until there is a settlement of the German indemnity upon a basis where the German people are willing and able to pay, until the Russian people settle once more into the habits of production, and until there has been established comprehensive credit machinery.

Urges Loans to Foreign Consumers.

Unemployment he laid to the falling off in exports. Europe, unable to buy without credit, can no longer import goods in quantity from the United States.

"When payment is demanded, no further orders can be expected," Mr. Hoover said. "We should lend money to the fellow who consumes the goods, not to the producer."

For this reason he opposed rural credits and favored placing credits abroad for the reason that trade would be stimulated and the farmor would receive greater returns from the increased demand.

"We have reached a point in this country," Mr. Hoover went on, "where we have a productive capacity beyond import necessities. If we are to maintain productivity, we must provide for some balance of trade other than goods. This surplus must be reinvested in enterprises abroad.

"Our situation is comparable to the plight in which Great Britain found herself in 1860, when she could not continue the prosperous state of her own productivity without investing extensively in foreign countries. Consequently she put her surplus into productive enterprises abroad rather than throw it back to curtail production at home."

While Mr. Hoover regarded investment in public securities abroad to a limited extent as a security, he favored the employment of the American foreign trade surplus abroad mainly in undeveloped countries.

"Before this can be entered into," he said, "it must be definitely understood that there will be ample protection of American citizens and capital abroad.

"The world cannot survive unless all countries get back to productivity," Mr. Hoover concluded, "and the sooner this is grasped by the people of all nations the better."

58 BRANCHES QUIT IRISH FRIENDS HERE

Resolution Denounces British for the Burning of Cork, Comparing It to Louvain.

Representatives of fifty-eight branches of the Friends of Irish Freedom met last night at the Lexington Theatre, and after listening to impassioned addresses in which the speakers denounced "the politicians of the Irish movement," unanimously adopted a resolution seceding from their organization and joining the newly organized American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic. The act was heralded not as a "split" in the Irish movement, but as a consolidation of the forces in this country working for recognition of the "Irish Republic."

More than 3,500 men and women crowded into the auditorium, and at 8 o'clock the doors were closed. An overflow meeting of 2,000 was addressed by those who appeared in the theatre. The speakers included Mgr. James W. Power, Father Rickard McCarthy, who arrived here recently "by the Sinn Fein route"; Jeremiah A. O'Leary, Father J. Tierney and John McCarthy.

The meeting last night was said to represent upward of 25,000 members of the Friends of Irish Freedom who have been increasingly dissatisfied with the "Cohalan-Devoy" rule in their organization. The speakers explained that the Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic was formed at the suggestion of Eamon de Valera, President of the Irish Republic," who desired an organization which would cooperate harmoniously with him.

Resolutions were adopted declaring that the Friends of Irish Freedom had failed to co-operate with the "duly accredited representatives of the Irish Republic" and denouncing the organization as being in control of a "small group of self-exploiting politicians," who have "betrayed its objects." Another resolution denounced the British for the burning of Cork, and compared it to the burning of Louvain by the Germans.

Mgr. Power denounced those who would, he said, "raise a mortgage on the sorrows of the Irish people and keep the money for themselves." Mention of the name of Lloyd George was greeted by boos and hisses.

Father McCarthy said he came here recently "from the war zone" and described conditions in Ireland. He pictured the "Irish Republican Army" as fully prepared for any eventuality, well drilled and disciplined, "and, take it from me, there are no spies among them." He said the army represented the bloom of the Irish race and included men from the professions, farmers, merchants and laborers.

He said that one "Black and Tan" was overhead to say that he was serving twenty years in prison for the murder of his wife when he was released and paid £7 a week "to kill Sinn Feiners."

There are no "assassinations" in Ireland, according to Father McCarthy. Instead, "there is a court-martial, the evidence is heard and the sentence carried out."

"We are the law and order government in Ireland," he continued. "We are the one body of men who do not carry out reprisals for reprisals' sake alone."

Jeremiah O'Leary asserted that the flames that leaped skyward from Ireland "sent a very sinister suggestion to the British interests in America which are engaged in holding down public opinion." He was delighted that while the war was going on "to make the world safe for democracy, for the rights of humanity," he was in the Tombs "as a protest" against American aid to Great Britain.

AVERT A BREAK ON GERMAN CABLES

the main cable from San Francisco to the Dutch East Indies. The former German cable which ran from Yap to Shanghai has been diverted by Japan so as to transfer its Shanghai end to Tokio. Both of the former German cables from New York have been diverted—one to England, the other to France.

Before the war there were two subsidized German Government cables running from New York to Emden, Germany. They were the only cables between this country and Germany, the only direct cable link between the United States and Central and Northern Europe, and it was over these German cables that this country had direct cable communication with the Scandinavian nations. They were known as Emden Cable No. 1 and Emden Cable No. 2. England is now using Emden Cable No. 1 for its own purposes, while France is using Emden Cable No. 2.

Cable Diverted to England and France.

Both cables were cut during the war to deprive Germany of this means of outside communication. The British cut the American end of Emden Cable No. 1 at a point 600 miles off the American coat and, then, by splicing on another cable length, ran the European end of the cut cable into Halifax, establishing a new Canadian landing. The British at the same time cut the same cable at a point where it run into the English Channel, and diverted it to Penzance, England.

The French Government cut Emden Cable No. 2 and diverted the European end to Brest and shifted the American end from New York to a point on the Long Island coast. This cable is now being operated by France in direct cable service between France and the United States. The American Government insists that the cable should be restored so as to give the United States the pre-war direct communication which this country had with Central Europe over that particular cable.

England has made a proposal to compose the difference over the present British-controlled cable. The exact nature of this proposal has not been disclosed, but it is understood that England is willing to restore this cable provided some arrangement is made by which the service now going over this cable from Halifax to Penzance can be diverted to another transatlantic cable.

The Italian Government has been aligned in support of the United States. It also is seeking direct cable communication with the United States, and demands that as a growing Mediterranean power she must have a direct news and commercial connection with this country. At present Italian Government business or news dispatches to and from this country and Rome must pass through France. There they are subject to French censorship. Italy is anxious to have a new cable laid from Italy to the Azores, with the view of connecting it there with the former German cables to the United States.

Public Official Bonds
What they are and what they do

A Public Official Bond is one which guarantees the public against any loss through misapplication of funds by a public official.

There are two ways in which a Public Official may qualify into office:

1. By giving bond signed by friends or acquaintances.
2. By giving bond signed by a duly licensed incorporated surety company.

The first method often entails unlooked-for hardships. It invariably places the official under personal obligations. It also impairs the bondsmen's own credit.

The second method, as practised by the Fidelity and Deposit Company, applies modern, impersonal business-like methods to the transaction. It eliminates the element of speculation. It places the official under no obligations. It protects both the official and the public. Losses paid by the F&D impose no hardships on any individual.

F & D Public Official Bonds guarantee the faithful performance by the officer of all the duties required of him by law. They are generally written for the full term for which the officer was appointed and elected. They also insure the Prompt Payment of Claims without refuge behind technicalities.

VANDERLIP TELLS WHAT RUSSIA WANTS

OIL ONE OF GREAT ASSETS

Export Would Break Gasoline Prices, He Says—Denies Rockefeller Is Backing Him.

Washington B. Vanderlip, American mining engineer and promoter, just back from Russia with concessions and contracts which he says offer the people of this country vast new riches in world trade, found time amid a series of flying engagements yesterday to emphasize his belief that the United States should enter into trade relations with the Soviet Government and to correct some current impressions about himself and the nature and extent of his negotiations.

As to himself and the things published about him since his sensational announcement that he held contracts whereby the United States could sell $3,000,000,000 worth of equipment and supplies to Russia, he appeared not to be hypersensitive. His resentment was particularly manifest only at persistent circulation of the report that he went to Russia armed with a letter to Lenin or the Soviet Government signed by President-elect Harding—a report which he has denied emphatically. Mr. Vanderlip took the occasion in an interview with a reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES to say that his name is Washington Baker Vanderlip, though foreign dispatches invariably have made his middle initial D and not B.

With regard to the huge foreign enterprise upon which he expects the syndicate of Southern California capitalists, who, he says, are his associates, to embark, if this Administration or the next one can be induced to sanction the resumption of Russian trade, Mr. Vanderlip was much more earnest.

Tells What Russia Would Buy.

To emphasize his declaration that it was no chimerical project that was agitating trade centres of the world, but rather a concrete business proposition, Mr. Vanderlip gave out a detailed list of the materials which he says Russia is ready to buy from American merchants and manufacturers if he can effectuate the arrangement whereby his syndicate is to act as fiscal agent for the Russian Government. This list, which he has estimated as offering to American interests a total of three billion dollars in new export business is as follows:

500,000,000 tins meat and other conserves.
35,000 tons resin.
5,000 sets automatic block system.

How Russia Could Pay.

Asked how Russia was to pay for this vast store of material, comprised in what has been described as the biggest single order in the history of the world, Mr. Vanderlip said that not only was there incalculable wealth in the Kamchatka and Siberian tracts to which his syndicate has received concessions—this wealth being in the form of oil, coal and fisheries, but in addition there were the priceless oil stores and daily yield of the Black Sea oil fields in the Caucasus region.

He declared that besides great reserves which had accumulated during the last few years while Russian commerce had been all but paralyzed actual present-day production in those fields had been restored to 80 per cent. of the pre-war output.

A theory which had been put forward by local economists who had studied Mr. Vanderlip's announcements and the revelations concerning them conveyed in cable dispatches in advance of his arrival was submitted to him. This theory was that the Kamchatka, Siberian concessions were but a red herring which the Bolshevist Government had forced Mr. Vanderlip to draw across the trail, the real lodestone attracting American business men being the oil of the Batum fields, immediately available for export.

Mr. Vanderlip dealt with apparent frankness with that theory. He said there was no question about the existence of the Batum stores and of their tremendous value or of their availability for shipment to this country in American tankers. He said, moreover, that once the petroleum supplies of the Caucasus region, some 1,200 miles from north to south by 200 miles in width, were being moved "the price of gasoline in England would drop from six shillings to two and six." The price in this and in all other countries, he added, would break accordingly, since the commodity had to be sold in world markets.

Denies Batum Concessions.

But while Mr. Vanderlip laid great stress on the Batum oil as one of Russia's great assets and said alluring pictures of the richness of the whole Caucasus region in oil, hardwood timber, manganese and other products were not overdrawn, he denied most emphatically that Lenin had granted him any concessions in that region.

"I have no Batum concessions," he said. "My concessions are in Kamchatka and Siberia, as I have stated. My only interest in the Batum oil is that as fiscal agents for the Russian Government my syndicate would handle the payments for it."

When the further suggestion was made to Mr. Vanderlip that it was more than anything else oil, rather than money, that the Russian Government had to offer in exchange for the princely industrial outfit it sought to purchase in America, he repeated that Russia had vast stores to offer as a basis of negotiation with American interests.

Asked if it was true, as had been suggested, that the real object of his sojourn of some three weeks in London was to effect some kind of business arrangement with the hundreds of British oil companies which were operating in the Black Sea district and whose properties were expropriated, it being from wells drilled with British and French capital that the oil reserves now in the hands of the Soviet were derived, Mr. Vanderlip said he had absolutely no such object.

"It is true," he said, "that I received offers from British interests, interests so close to the Government I can mention no names. I did not seek them and I have not dealt with them, though I am still being pursued with offers to enter into an arrangement."

It was largely because of this keen British interest, said he, that he had been forced to maintain such extreme secrecy with regard to the details of his various propositions.

"For any one in New York to affect to know any inside details of my arrangements is absurd," he said, "because my own syndicate members do not know them. I had all sorts of codes, so that I might communicate with them, but you can't trust such things to cables or wires. The British pick everything like that from the wires or from the air. Having had their concern over the possibility of great Russian oil concessions passing into the hands of American business men made so manifest, I did not think it advisable to advise my associates until I meet them face to face."

In proof of his assertion that British labor as well as British capital was agitated over the "three billion dollar order," Mr. Vanderlip exhibited a large circular distributed by the "Hands Off Russia Committee," of 11 Soho Street, London, this month, which proclaimed in big type that while British workers were unemployed the order was to go to the U. S. A. This circular, addressed to secretaries of trade councils, local labor parties and local councils of action, concluded:

"The National 'Hands Off Russia' Committee appeals to all trade union branches, trade councils, local labor parties, local councils of action and Socialist Party branches to send resolutions to the National Council of Action (33 Eccleston Square, London, S. W. 1), urging the council to send an ultimatum to the Government declaring that unless peace and full trading relations are established with Russia by a specified date, the council will call for a national 'down tools' policy."

"There have been reports here that the real backer of your project is John D. Rockefeller Jr.," Mr. Vanderlip was told. "Is that true?"

Not Backed by Rockefeller.

"That is absolutely untrue," he replied. "I have not had any negotiations with Mr. Rockefeller. In 1903 my cousin, Frank A. Vanderlip, introduced me to John D. Rockefeller Sr. and John D. Archbold, and I tried to interest them in Russian oil. Mr. Rockefeller laughed at me. He told me there already was too much oil in the world. He said that in some of the Pennsylvania fields they were letting it flow into the creeks for want of a market for it. You must remember that at that time there were perhaps not more than a hundred motor cars in the world.

"I hung around 26 Broadway after that until I became a pest, but I could not get them interested. It got to a point finally where they did not even answer my letters and I dropped it. I did not renew my efforts in that direction before I went to Russia this time."

The interview was shifted to a discussion of what might be termed the diplomatic phases of the venture. The discussion was brief, as Mr. Vanderlip had a succeeding engagement, but in his quick, dynamic, fluent fashion he found time to discuss hurriedly cabled representations of Lenin's real attitude and ulterior motives with respect to the concessions and contracts.

A Copenhagen dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES, published Dec. 11, was shown. It said that a special dispatch to the Politiken from Riga "says that at a conference of Communist organizations Lenin replying to attacks on the Soviet Government on account of concessions given to foreign capitalists, declared that Soviet Russia, now as before, must be ready to war against the bourgeoisie. Should such a war break out all capital invested in concessions would naturally become the war booty of the Soviet Government."

"That is pure British propaganda," was Mr. Vanderlip's comment. "Dispatches from Riga and Helsingfors are inspired from Downing Street."

Asked next about the much-discussed Lenin speech in which, according to published versions, Lenin declared that his real purpose in offering the Kamchatka and Siberian concessions to American interests was to [illegible] Japan and the United States in furtherance of the general Bolshevist scheme a [illegible].

"I cannot credit Lenin ever having made any such speech. He is one of the most astute politicians in the world, and you cannot expect sensible men to believe that he would make a public declaration of that nature. And when I told him frankly in our heart-to-heart talk that there was no chance in the world of a Soviet revolution in America, he admitted quite cheerfully, as I told abroad, that it was not to be expected in a country where there virtually was a motor motor car for every man."

That all Bolshevist propaganda would cease in this country the moment an arrangement for renewed trade relations with Russia was made between the two Governments, was Mr. Vanderlip's final declaration. He called attention to the provisions to a similar end of the arrangement between Great Britain and the Soviet Government—an arrangement which he said he had learned finally had been signed on Saturday.

"I saw the proposals submitted to President Wilson some time ago, but which did not culminate in any arrangement," said Mr. Vanderlip, "and such a provision was embodied. It will be embodied now if an arrangement is concluded."

Talking of Lenin, Mr. Vanderlip mentioned that he had seen a copy of THE NEW YORK TIMES on Lenin's desk.

"I asked him why it was there," he continued, "and Lenin, who with his broad mouth and his prominent teeth reminded me a little of Theodore Roosevelt, replied with a grin that he needed it to keep informed of 'assassinations and revolutions in Russia.' A moment later he said more seriously that he liked its beautiful editorials, and that he always read THE TIMES, The Chicago Daily News and The Los Angeles Times and thus succeeded in keeping abreast of the news of the whole world.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 12.—According to a special dispatch from Helsingfors, the Soviet organ Pravda states that Lenin in a speech at a meeting with American Socialists declared that an American syndicate asked for the concession of Kamchatka for a long term of years. "The American representative admitted that the United States, in case of war with Japan, would need a base in East Asia, and made us understand that if we would sell Kamchatka to America, America in return would recognize the Soviet Government," Lenin continued. "The treaty for the cession of Kamchatka has not yet been signed, but the Soviet Government is willing to accommodate America, for the more the relations between Japan and the United States are strained the better our prospects become."

GERMAN TRADE WITH REDS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Dec. 12.—The German Government intends to send a trade commission to Russia at the earliest possible date. Permission will be granted for a Russian commission to come to Germany at the same time.

At present transit difficulties stand in the way of trade between the two countries, the only route which is open being via Reval. Nevertheless goods to the value of nearly 300,000,000 marks already have been sent to Russia. Free transit was stipulated for in Russia's treaty with Esthonia and Letvia, and it is hoped to complete the opening of trade routes by the treaty of Riga. This is one of the chief considerations which induces the Soviet Government to make concessions to Poland.

Business men here are hoping for a big trade revival when the treaty is ratified. They are already encouraged by the fact that important orders have just been placed by the Russian Government with German chemical and agricultural machinery firms. The Russian representative in Berlin confirms the statement that negotiations are proceeding with the German Foreign Office.

BOUGHT SCHWAB BOX; WOULD REVEAL PLOT

MONGOLIA SAILORS ACCUSED

BERLIN, Dec. 12.—A gold casket, part of the estimated $1,000,000 worth of jewels stolen in America and disposed of in Germany by sailors, was found in Berlin. A German, formerly a resident of Chicago, purchased the box and now offers to go to America and give testimony involving sailors of the liner Mongolia, who either stole the jewels or acted as aids for the New York fences.

The Chicago Tribune's correspondents supplied the American agent here with details which led to action where the Berlin police had failed. The present owner of the Casket asked the agent's protection and the visé of a passport for a trip to America, where he hopes to settle and become an American citizen. When this aid is given he will expose the smuggling plot, he declares.

The casket, besides the initials "C. M. S.," bears this inscription: "Sparrow Steel Point."

The box belonged to Charles M. Schwab. Confirmation of this is partly given by a telegram from H. A. Jackson, President of the Chicago Pneumatic Tool Company, to Berlin, asking the company's representative to recover the box for Mr. Schwab. The Berlin police have nothing, but the New York police have cabled to several persons asking information.

The present owner of the casket declares he has received a telegram of warning, which he believes comes from sailors, who are engaged in the smuggling operations by which jewelry and other valuables stolen in America are sent to Hamburg and other cities to be sold.

On Nov. 30 when word of the discovery of a gold box in Berlin, bearing the initials "C. M. S.," came to this city, it was ascertained that a gold, monogrammed cigar box, similar to the cabled description, had been presented to Mr. Schwab by the City of Baltimore and was a recognition of Mr. Schwab's work at his shipbuilding plant at Sparrow's Point, Md.

to speak on that topic there, but had to decline.

"It is without question that what happened here last Winter prompted this discussion at the congress. What happened here was the limiting of the method of carrying on our forum for thirteen years by prohibiting persons in the audience from publicly expressing their views.

"I changed my phraseology from what was used at the Church Congress because it is a little more definite, 'Should We Consecrate Our Churches?'

"The reason we were thus limited is contained in two prayers in our Book of Common Prayer and repeated by a Bishop at the consecration of the church." Dr. Grant read the prayer and then asked, "Should the repeating of that prayer by a Bishop curtail the use of this church, particularly if the rector and vestrymen of the church believe it should be used to a very large and liberal extent?"

It is the duty of a church to be of the greatest possible use to a community. Can some one come in here and read a formula that shuts this church up most of the time and that shuts out many of the people who want to come here?

"Of course there is the theory of Apostolic succession," remarked Dr. Grant. "This is that any Bishop who has been properly consecrated or any priest who has been properly ordained is a miracle worker. This teaches if a Bishop comes here and uses the forms I have mentioned that something supernatural happens. "This theory is held weakly by the Church of England and it is held in the Episcopal Church of America so weakly that only recently Bishop Kinsman resigned to enter the Church of Rome. He could not find a strong enough belief of these things in the Episcopal Church to keep him within her fold.

"The consecration of churches was not a Christian, but a pagan institution. Read the article in the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

"The way to make a church sacred is through the width and breadth of its use to humanity. We hear too much today of the words 'secular' and 'sacred.' Can the priest with his formula come along and make a piece of wood 'sacred'?

"It seems to me that in modern times we don't have to make things sacred or to call them sacred. There are things we know are good for us. We don't have to call in anybody to say a thing is sacred when it 'ain't' sacred. We don't have to hear a lot of fancy names pronounced. But as members of this congregation and as readers of the New Testament, we can say what Peter said.

"And I suggest our Bishops should be the first to apply his teachings, because they consider themselves his successor.

"If these poor little groups of people standing on a street corner in the pouring rain listening to some one who is giving them a little light, it is time that the church put an umbrella over the soap-box orator and let his audience come in out of the rain. And when that gets into the systems of our bishops, then our churches will be filled.

"'Should churches be consecrated?' A man said to me this Summer that he was one of a committee to build a cathedral in one of our great cities. He told me those in charge were not going to permit the nave to be consecrated, because they wanted it open for the freest discussion of all questions that touch in humanity.

"With all the people outside waiting to come into our forum, I ask whether this church should have to stay closed because of a formula which was repeated here eighty years ago. If so I think there are many churches that should be closed up, and that Mr. Rockefeller's Interchurch World Movement ought to be renewed, because his purpose was to put the churches of the country on a business basis."

"ONE BIG UNION" AT FORUM.

Strike Leader Criticises Labor Radicals—Rector Predicts Open Meetings.

The union movement in America is in a backward state because of the activities of the radical element among the working class, declared William Z. Foster, who organized the steel strike last Winter and is now Secretary and Treasurer of the Trade Union Educational League, last night at the Forum of the Church of Ascension, Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street, before a large audience. The speaker declared that the "American radicals are the biggest bunch of nuts in the world."

Only about 1 per cent. of the membership in trade unionism, he said, is really actively carrying on organization work, and this active minority has always been singled out by propagandists who tried to convince them that trade unionism is hopeless and urged them to join organizations like the I. W. W.

"The result," he continued, "has been a constant bleeding process in the trade union movement, from which the unions have suffered tremendously. The most progressive-minded men and the most active in its membership have been taken away and instead of working for progress in the union have joined other movements and spent their time criticising trade unionism."

The subject of Mr. Foster's address was "The Aims of the Trade Union Educational League." He described the organization as an unofficial movement made up of the rank and file of trade union workers. It is to work among individuals, the purpose being to stir to action the militant unionists, with the ultimate goal of bringing all the unionists throughout the country into one big organization.

The trades unionist movement in England he described as a common-sense, practical proposition. The radicals in England have established a free press, he said, but they have not reached that point in this country.

Declaring that he was glad that he was a radical and stood for progressivism in trades unions, Mr. Foster pointed out that radicals in this country have not understood the revolutionary processes, but have had Utopian ideas and have been wasting their efforts trying to bring about impossible movements.

The Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, rector of the Church of the Ascension, earlier in the meeting, thanked the members of the Forum for their constant attendance at the meetings, although they have not been allowed to discuss questions from the floor. He said that personally he would be glad to accord them that privilege. He also said that he believed the time would soon come when speaking from the floor would be again resumed.

County, Wash.; a submarine, destroyer and aviation base at Port Angeles, Wash.; a submarine base at Los Angeles; a submarine and destroyer base at Astoria, Ore., and a very extensive development of harbor and repair facilities in Hawaii. In all, the report declared, projects that ultimately will reach a cost of about $160,000,000 are urgently needed for the Pacific Coast proper.

Characterizing Hawaii as the "crossroads and key to the Pacific," Mr. Daniels recommends the creation there of a fleet-operating base capable of accommodating the entire American Navy with all auxiliaries. Facilities for a fleet of 1,000 vessels could be developed in Hawaii, the report asserts. It adds that "the strategic location of Hawaii is realized, its possibilities have been carefully studied and set forth by naval experts and its development on a broad scale as a fleet operating base cannot be too strongly recommended."

Despite "sporadic criticism" in this country and abroad of the completion of capital ships authorized before the war, the battleship remains the "backbone" of the fleet, Secretary Daniels declares. The war proved that the time has not come for the abandonment of capital ships, he says. In support of his declaration he points out that recent British building programs have included funds for dreadnaughts and battle cruisers and that Japan "has laid down five capital ships since the armistice and it is understood that eight others are projected for the near future."

Favors Merging "Little Navies."

A strong plea that all marine activities of the Government be consolidated in the navy in the interests of economy and efficiency is made by the Secretary. He declares that "America should have but one navy" and that at present there are various "little navies" under Government departments whose activities could be far more advantageously directed under single control.

The Navy Department now operates a total of 979 vessels, Mr. Daniels points out, while the War Department maintains a fleet of 730, exclusive of 1,245 other vessels of various types used in harbor work; The Treasury, 101 ships; The Department of Commerce, 147; the Shipping Board, 1,510, and miscellaneous divisions more than 200 others.

Amalgamation with the navy of the Coast Guard and the lighthouse and life-saving services is particularly urged by Mr. Daniels. He also says that "it would be to the advantage of the army as well as the navy if all United States transports were manned by the navy in time of peace as well as war."

In reviewing the operations of the fleets during the year Mr. Daniels asserts that "no policy adopted in recent years has a sounder military basis or has been more completely justified than that of maintaining two great fleets, one in each of the great oceans we are called upon to defend, with provision for their operation as one single fleet."

Gratifying progress was made in target practice, in the training of new recruits and maneuvering during the year, the report adds.

Reviewing the remaining work under the 1916 building program, Mr. Daniels says that construction is going forward as rapidly as can be expected under the conditions encountered. All of the destroyers of that program have been completed except twelve which it was decided not to construct because of a surplus of this type of vessel. The ten scout cruisers are "going forward rapidly" the Secretary states, and good progress has been made on the submarines except the nine fleet submersibles of which but three have been started. Eleven battleships and six great battle cruisers also remain under construction.

The navy's work abroad during the year was reviewed in detail by Mr. Daniels, particular attention being given to the forces in the Adriatic and Near Eastern waters in connection with carrying out the terms of the armistice, "a delicate task in view of the political and racial rivalries involved." The work of the forces in Turkish waters under Rear Admiral Mark Bristol, American high commissioner at Constantinople, is highly praised, Rear Admiral Newton McCully is complimented for his conduct of a mission in South Russia.

The Secretary renews his previously voiced opposition to consolidation of army, navy and commercial aviation and recommends the creation of a separate bureau of aeronautics in the Navy Department. In connection with his review of the activities of naval aviation during the year, Mr. Daniels asserts that the United States is "still far behind other countries in lighter-than-air craft" and urges a continuation of the development of this branch of the aerial service.

Mr. Daniels again recommends Government ownership of all radio facilities used in trans-ocean and ship-to-shore traffic. The earnings of navy radio stations from commercial traffic during the year were more than $1,100,000, the report says.

The safeguarding of the navy's oil reserves is vigorously urged by Mr. Daniels, who declares that the assurance of an adequate oil supply for the navy is vital to the service.

Marines in Haiti Defended.

Mr. Daniels devotes a considerable portion of his report to the marine occupation of Haiti and to the investigation now being conducted there by a special naval board of inquiry. He gives in full the various reports of investigations by Major Gen. Lejeune, Brig. Gen. Barnett and others, which have been published, and declares that "the duty of maintaining order and suppressing revolutionary movements has been performed in a spirit which has received the highest commendation from all who have familiarized themselves with the true history of the service of the marines in Haiti."

Referring to agitation in the navy to "recognize and militarize" the Navy Department, Mr. Daniels says that "the impression appears to prevail in some quarters that what was sound enough and strong enough to win the World War is not sufficiently safe to risk in time of peace." Reviewing the whole history of the department to show that efforts to end the power of civilian Secretaries are not new, the report declares that every trial of the general staff system has resulted in failure and return to civilian control.

"Underlying 99 per cent. of the attempts to bring about changes in the present organization of the Navy Department," says Mr. Daniels, "is the desire to make of the civilian Secretary a 'rubber stamp.'"

A NAME vs. TESTS

LAST year the United States Bureau of Standards applied 19,548 tests to 5,000 samples of paper to determine weight, thickness, tensile strength and folding endurance. One is glad to know the Government is so careful about the paper it buys.

But many business men—paper dealers, bankers, lithographers and engravers—have no bureau of standards to test the paper they buy. They have something better to go by—the name of the paper maker.

Because CRANE'S Bond can pass the tests of any bureau of standards the name "Crane" is an excellent reason for omitting all other tests.

U. S. OFFICERS SAVED 1,800 WAR CAPTIVES

THEN MADE THEM HAPPY

Open Letter in Press of Austria and Hungary Expresses Gratitude to 27th Regiment Staff.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The State Department has received from the American Mission at Budapest a translation of an open letter to the press of Austria and Hungary, written by Lieutenant Colonel Ferdinand Reder, of the former Austro-Hungarian Army, expressing thanks on behalf of himself and his comrades for succor and kindness which they received while prisoners of war at the camp of Krasnaja Rjetschka, near Chabarovsk, in Eastern Siberia, from the officers of the Twenty-seventh United States Infantry, which was commanded by Colonel C. H. Morrow.

The letter of appreciation was made public by the Department today as follows:

"On my return from Russia, where I spent six years as a prisoner of war, I feel it my first and most sacred duty to state emphatically in the name of the 1,800 Austro-Hungarian war prisoners of the camp of Krasnaja Rjetschka, near Chabarovsk in East Siberia, that we owe our lives to the American officers of the Twenty-seventh Infantry Regiment, to Colonel C. H. Morrow, Captain E. Larkins, Captain Surgeon Dr. Burdett and First Lieutenant John James.

"At the beginning of October, 1918, influenza broke out in our camp. The physical condition of the prisoners was at that time so reduced, in consequence of the wretched accommodations and the miserable and insufficient food provided by Russian authorities, that the disease spread with frightful rapidity. Hardly anybody was spared, and there were soon 1,800 serious cases. The men who were not dangerously ill had to nurse their bed-ridden comrades. No medicines were available, the shortage of food was more and more terrible, and we were all convinced our camp would soon be one vast cemetery without a living soul to tell the sad tale.

"At this horrible pass, when we were all a prey to despair, Colonel Morrow and Company E of the Twenty-seventh Foot Regiment, under the command of Captain Larkins, arrived and took charge of our camp. This happened on the 8th of October, 1918. The Americans brought provisions for a month and soon effected a complete change in the conditions of our camp.

"Through the energy, untiring activity, kind heart and clear insight of Captain Dr. Burdett our miserable hospital was soon transformed into a model establishment. Under the new régime the epidemic was soon quelled and our death rate, which had been appalling, sank to a minimum.

"After having thus saved the lives of the prisoners, the noble, generous and wise American commander, Colonel Morrow, set about making these lives worth living. Workshops of all sorts were arranged, schools founded, a library, a theatre, baths, a coffee house, were built and grounds for every kind of sports were laid out. Funds were provided by the Americans. The prisoners were happy to do the work. If I tried to describe all that was accomplished in our camp under American protection I should have to write a book. At some future period I may be induced to do so, and every page of the as yet unwritten book will be bright with deeds of American kindness and good sense, glowing with the warmth of our gratitude.

"Here I only wish to quote the words spoken to me at parting by a foreign visitor, after having looked over our camp: 'I have seen camps of war prisoners all over the world,' he said, 'but not one so beautiful, so well organized, conducted and provided for.'

"After all those weary years we felt raised to the dignity of manhood again, and we began to love the life to which we had been restored. And, now we have returned to our dear ones at home, we should like all the world to know that we owe our lives, our health and happiness, our power for good in this world, to the noble American officers of the 27th Foot Regiment, to the great American nation.

"(Signed) FERDINAND REDER,

rushed dispatches which, when they reached their destinations, were relayed to even further points. As a result a little flood of communications from far places began to come into the hotel early yesterday morning, and gradually swelled in volume.

Men and women with famous names, occupants of high place and humbler devotees of that golden voice conveyed by wireless and cable and telegraph and long distance telephone their regret at what had happened. Many begged for assurance that the voice they loved so well was not to be hushed, and others, crediting a few alarmist reports which unfortunately got abroad, were inclined to be funereal in their commiseration.

New Yorkers, with their readier access to the singer's abode, were equally diligent in manifesting sympathy and interest and for hours the telephones in the Caruso apartment were working continuously and dozens of cards were being sent to the rooms. In addition such an abundance of flowers was showered upon the tenor that his apartment soon became both festive and fragrant.

So many were the inquiries that Mr. Zirato found time to tell of but a few of them. One of these was a telegram from Mme. Tetrazzini in Washington. She declared it was "impossible to credit" the reports which had reached her and begged to be reassured. She was. The Philadelphia Public Ledger telegraphed the sympathy and concern of opera subscribers in that city and begged for a personal word which would assure them their idol soon would sing for them again. The word was sent.

Gatti-Casazza, General Manager of the Metropolitan, was one of the very few callers who were admitted to the Caruso apartment.

Fearing that the boy might be alarmed by reports of his father's condition, Mr. Zirato sent a telegram describing his exact condition to Rodolfo Caruso, who is at school at Culver, Ind.

Increase 88%

How can property owners pay for the service their tenants demand when millions of dollars in rents are tied up in the Municipal Courts?

ANALYSES already presented of the six typical cases cited herewith have shown an increase in taxes of 90%; in the cost of coal, 158%.

Such labor is necessary to give adequate service to tenants and to maintain their comfort, for their safety and their health.

To furnish this service, to pay taxes, to buy coal, and to defray other operating expenses, it was absolutely necessary to increase rents.

PARIS MOVIE FIRMS DISCUSS HIMMEL

French Company Young Promoter Said He Founded Is Alleged Not to Exist.

HIS ASSERTIONS DENIED

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—Under the title "Bluff or Serious Business?" the Matin publishes today a three-column article about the company recently incorporated in the State of Delaware and called the Franco-American Cinematograph Corporation.

The founder of this corporation, which aims at taking control of the whole moving picture business of the world, and about which there has been much talk that it will have $100,000,000 capital, is a young man 22 years old, called André Himmel. At length the Matin tells what purports to be the history of M. Himmel and of his actions in connection with the flotation of the company. His real name, the Matin states, is Himmelfrag.

Yesterday at a meeting in Paris of the principal directors and owners of French cinematograph firms presided over by the president of the trade society, a report on M. Himmel's corporation was read to the members by Pierre Marcel, Director of the Compagnie Universelle Cinématographique and former official of the French Ministry of Fine Arts. Marcel described how Himmel came to see him in February last to try to negotiate with him for the cession of his company. The report then continued: "I did not know M. Himmel. He told me that he was the founder of the Société Cinématographique de France which had already bought," he said, "all the cinematographic enterprises in Italy, Spain, England and the Balkans. He mentioned among others an Italian company in Rome, and a New York company having as President General Peppino Garibaldi, which has since denied the statement of Himmel.

"He mentioned also the purchase by the Société Cinématographique de France of the firm of Fabiola, and then to support his statement gave me a number of documents, including a prospectus of that society with the names of its directors, all certainly well-known French personalities, and two letters from the Minister of Commerce officially accrediting M. Himmel.

"I at once perceived that these letters were forgeries. One of them, written in doubtful French and addressed collectively to Messieurs les Minister, Messieurs les Ambassadeurs and Messieurs les Directeurs et Chef de Service des Administrations Publiques, and beginning with the word 'Messieurs,' informed persons concerned that M. Himmel was officially commissioned to restore to the French cinematograph its former supremacy. It was childish, and a public school pupil would not have been taken in by it.

"Moreover I discovered that the Société Cinématographique de France had never existed except on paper, and as for the firm of Fabriola, its publisher had received altogether from Himmel a check for 12 francs 50 centimes.

"My mind was made up. I hastened to warn the various persons whose names M. Himmel had mentioned as belonging to his directorate, and I heard no more about this young man until recently, when we learned about this affair of which he calls himself the general manager and which forms the subject our meeting today.

"There are two serious questions before us. Either the bluff begun in France by Himmel is now being carried on by him in America, and it is to France's interest to unmask him and block it, or this bluff may succeed and the French cinematograph industry risks falling under control of American capital. In both events, measures ought to be taken by us."

The result of the meeting, says the Matin, was that it was decided to name two delegations, one to protest tomorrow at the Foreign Office against official support given to the young man and to ask that the French representatives in America be immediately warned against him. The other will ask the Ministry of Commerce to ascertain whether the letters presented by Himmel to Pierre Marcel and other persons, including Ambassador Jusserand, as coming from the Minister of Commerce, are authentic or fictitious. In either case the Syndical Chamber will take such action as it deems necessary.

André Himmel, a boyish looking Frenchman in his early twenties, accompanied by two associates, M. Fichet and M. Delouche, reached his hotel, the Ritz-Carlton, at 12:30 o'clock last night. When a TIMES reporter stated his errand M. Himmel invited the reporter to his apartment, where, with the aid of M. Fichet and M. Delouche, the cable dispatch from Paris was translated for the young Frenchman.

Throughout the reading of the cable, which was necessarily slow due to the desire of M. Delouche and M. Fichet to put it into good French, young Himmel laughed.

"That's an old story," he commented in French as he walked about the parlor of his suite. "I have heard that little tale before."

When the translation of the cable had been completed and the reporter asked M. Himmel for a statement, the three men joined in the response that no statement could possibly be made at once because of a promise made to "the Board of Directors." M. Delouche then sat down and wrote in French a brief statement, which M. Fichet put into English as follows:

"M. Himmel denies categorically the cable which has been communicated to him. He can't anwer in detail because he must conform to a decision of his Board of Directors. The Board of Directors decided yesterday when they welcomed M. Himmel at the pier to make a public statement on Monday."

When the reporter attempted to stress the importance of making a statement to appear with the cable, M. Himmel said in French:

"We are not worrying about that story, and we will take our own time. We are not criminals, you must understand." He declined to answer further questions, and as the reporter was about to leave he said:

"So that story first appeared in the Paris Matin? That is Stephane Lausanne's paper. I do not know M. Lausanne very well, but I am well acquainted with Marcel Knecht."

"I repeat that we are not criminals, but business men, and business men have their competitors. This is entirely a business matter. Our competitors evidently saw their chance while we were sailing over here. Why, Pierre Marcel, the man mentioned in the cable, came to me and tried to sell out his company to me. I refused to listen to his offer and this is the result. At all events, what the Board of Directors think should be told will be told in the statement we will give out tomorrow."

BLUE LAW LEADERS REFUSE TO DEBATE

ELMER E. FRANKE SPEAKS

The Rev. Dr. Harry E. Bowlby, Secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, and the Rev. Wilbur Crafts of the International Reform Bureau, declined the invitation extended by Elmer E. Franke, an evangelist, to appear at the Broadhurst Theatre last night and defend their position in reference to the Sunday blue laws. A capacity audience laughed with Mr. Franke when he read a letter of reply from Dr. Crafts in which he quoted the reformer as saying in declining the invitation:

"I could not trust you for courteous Christian treatment. I advise you to go to Missouri."

John Ferguson, State Secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, answering for Dr. Bowlby, wrote that since the organization was not interested in blue laws, no one representing them would be present to debate the question. Mr. Ferguson suggested that Mr. Franke learn the real purposes of the organization. The Rev. Dr. David J. Burrell, to whom a similar invitation by registered mail had also been extended, did not reply.

"The real object of the Lord's Day Alliance and kindred reform organizations," said Mr. Franke in his lecture, "is to bring about a union of Church and State in America. And the Sunday laws are the entering wedge. When cornered they admit this. They will tell you they do not want a church and State, but are seeking religion and State. What the difference is I fail to see.

"Some day the members of Congress will have the manhood to meet the decision of Justice Brewer of the United States, in which he declared that the United States was 'a Christian nation.' I am opposed to linking up Jesus Christ with the State. The reformers tried twenty years ago to get Congress to pass laws touching on this point, and now they are again renewing their efforts. Yield to them once and you will soon have professional spying committees looking into your windows to see if you have gone to church or are observing Sunday as they believe. The whole idea of these reformers may be summed up in the resolution:

"'Resolved, That the meek shall inherit the earth.

"'Resolved, That we are the meek.'"

Mr. Franke asked what about the Jews and Christians, such as the Seventh Day Adventists, who recognized Saturday as their Sabbath, or those among us who recognized no day and yet were good citizens, despite their unbelief.

Mr. Franke detailed his experiences covering more than thirty years fighting Sunday laws. Giving names and places he told how in Tennessee, Arkansas and Maryland men whom he knew had been sent to jail for such offenses as gathering fodder for cattle and performing indoor tasks of a necessary nature on Sunday.

Mr. Franke in announcing a third sermon in opposition to blue laws said he hoped to get a larger theatre. There were many standees in both the orchestra and balcony at last night's service.

William A. Brady, President of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, replied bitterly yesterday to the recent decision of the International Reform Bureau to remove "the menace of the movie" and to rescue the industry from what they were quoted as describing as "the hands of the devil and 500 un-Christian Jews."

Mr. Brady characterized the organization as a "small group of self-appointed guardian angels," called the statements of the Rev. Drs. Wilbur F. Crafts and Edward E. Clark "admirable examples of bigoted fanaticism run riot," and continued:

"These self-styled reformers, whose Christian-like qualities are self-evident in their profiteering in morality, demonstrate conclusively the lengths to which they will go and the means to which they will stoop to accomplish their ends when they attempt, as they are now doing, to arouse race prejudices against the Jews. I am not a Jew. I am a Catholic. And I make no brief for the Jew except that which is due the record of his race in this country, and that is a record of which the Jews and all other citizens may be proud."

Mr. Brady accused the Crafts organization of forgetting that every organization associated in upbuilding the morale of the American Army in France was "only too glad in having the hearty co-operation of the industry in supplying motion pictures that the men in France might be decently entertained on Sunday nights."

The attack went on to take issue with contentions that there are any number of immoral pictures being exhibited in this country, Mr. Brady asserting that when these "self-appointed saviors" of the nation say there are, "they are saying that which is not so, and they know it."

The Brady statement pledged the association to eradicate from the industry those who transgressed the code of business and ethical conduct.

Mr. Brady expressed the willingness of the industry to meet the reformers before Congress.

"If these slanderers, Jew-baiters and Catholic-haters are not silenced," said Mr. Brady, "we propose a fight to a finish with no quarter. We will put our case on the screen in every nook and corner of this great country and bring home to the American people a realization of what these self-appointed censors of public conduct and morals are trying to bring about."

The supreme officers of the Knights of Columbus have decided to print millions of pamphlets to supplement their speakers' campaign against blue laws.

The Rev. Dr. John Haynes Holmes at the Community Church service in the Lyric Theatre said the psychology of repression of the new movement was unsound, its fanaticism arrogant and hypocritical, and its specific proposals based on an utterly false and superstitious idea of what Sunday is.

Preaching in All Souls' Unitarian Church, the Rev. Dr. William L. Sullivan decried the campaign and warned against organized bodies of clerics being allowed to gain predominance in politics.

Spanish Occupy Moorish Mountain.

MELILLA, Moroco, Dec. 12.—A report from General Silvestre says the Spanish troops have occupied the highest point of Mount Mauro, in the Spanish zone in Morocco. The position dominates all the surrounding district.

The 1920 Imported Havana Cigars

Least Expensive—Relatively Speaking

While other commodities—most domestic cigars among them—have gone up 100%, Imported Havana Cigars have increased only about 40% in price within ten years.

Yet, this year's cigars stand out in quality. They are made from the 1920 Havana Tobacco Crop, the best since 1905. They'll improve with age.

And remember, they will not come down in price—not within a year's time anyhow, perhaps not then. Imported Havana Cigars are a luxury—but not an extravagance.

SMOKER DIES IN FIRE IN ARMY HOSPITAL

VICTIM BLAMED FOR BLAZE

Nurses Stand by Helpless Cases Amid Flames While Surgeons Act as Rescuers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Alvin Messenger, a Sergeant in the Seventh Coast Artillery, was burned to death today in a fire which swept the four psychopathic wards of Walter Reed Hospital, and a number of other patients were slightly injured. The fire was confined to these wards, which are not connected with the hospital proper.

The hospital authorities say that Messenger's violation of the rule prohibiting smoking cost him his life. It is believed that he threw a lighted cigarette or cigar near some inflammable material which ignited the bed clothes. The fire was traced to his room and evidences were found that he had been smoking. Messenger arrived at the hospital last night from Panama. The hospital officials are inclined to believe the fire was purely an accident.

An early report that several other soldiers were missing proved incorrect, as all of the patients were accounted for when a check was made except Messenger.

The clothing of three war surgeons was almost burned from their backs in their absolute disregard of danger in removing their charges. One surgeon is reported to have been badly burned. Wards 43 and 44 were destroyed and it estimated that the loss will be $20,000, not counting the loss of valuable instruments used in the treatment of psychopathic patients.

Major L. W. Webb of the hospital staff said tonight that when the blaze was detected the hospital staff, including physicians and nurses, manned the fire apparatus and made brave efforts to extinguish the flames. But the fire spread rapidly and an alarm was sent to the district fire department. Three companies responded and extinguished the fire, preventing its spread to the main buildings.

Major Webb said that seventy patients in the wards destroyed were removed with some difficulty. For a time they were grouped around the lawns, clad only in thin hospital attire. One soldier, under treatment, climbed to the roof of one of the burning buildings and refused to come down voluntarily. Only by the effort of six men was he dragged to safety. The hospital staff remained calm and undisturbed. Nurses stood by their patients quieting their fears, while wounded men dragged their maimed bodies to safety. In one of the wards there were thirty-nine patients suffering from shell shock and highly nervous diseases. Some of them fought desperately to get back into the flaming wards.

Had the blaze started in some of the wards where veterans lay in long rows, strung up in frames and spread-eagled in plaster casts, awaiting union in joints and bone grafts, it would have been far more difficult to have saved them. Most of the patients in the wards destroyed could walk.

Surgeons at the hospital fear mentally "disturbed" patients who saw the fire will be set back for a long time by the shock they sustained.

SEEK MONON MANAGER AT SUICIDE INQUEST

H. C. May Was Friend of Mrs. Reynolds, Who Died in Gas-Filled Room.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—H. C. May, general manager of the Monon Railroad, was sought today by Coroner Hoffman as a witness at the inquest into the death of Mrs. Minnie Viola Reynolds, widow of a wealthy Chicago coal dealer, who was found in a gas-filled room in her luxurious apartment at 1,340 North Dearborn Street Saturday.

May was in Chicago today, although he appeared at none of the places he usually visits. Further investigation of telegrams, letters, post cards and other memoranda found in the apartment associated only one name, that of May, with the woman's personal affairs.

All indicated that the railroad executive, known in Lafayette, Indiana, and among his associates as a man of exceptional devotion to his family, had spent much of his time in Mrs. Reynolds's company. May has a wife and two children, a girl of 13 and a boy of 9, at his Lafayette home.

Coroner Hoffman said that he wished to examine May to learn if there was a possible motive for suicide. If he does not appear voluntarily it is probable a subpoena will be issued for him.

Miss Mae Middleton Reynolds, a vaudeville actress, living at 1,301 North Dearborn Street, after viewing the body, told the police she was positive that Mrs. Reynolds was the woman she saw quarreling with a man Thursday night at Dearborn and Gorthe Streets.

"My window was open," she said. "They were arguing. The woman accused the man with being friendly with another woman in California. He denied this. She said the woman was now in Chicago. Then he threatened to slap her. Then they separated."

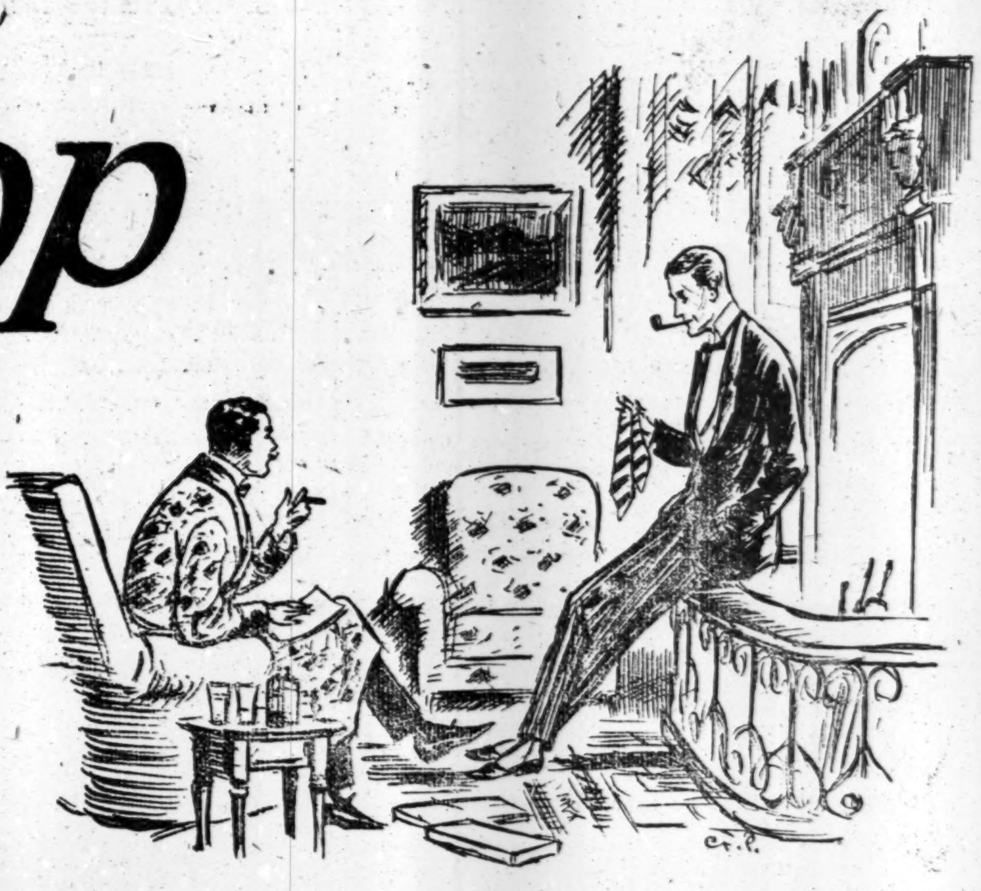
The Man's Shop

Atop the Lord & Taylor Store



ONE should not look a gift horse in the mouth; but one does—if it is a scarf, or a jacket, or a dressing gown, or a box of shirts, or golf stockings, or any of those things a man really cares about.

At Christmas women feel this—at the same time knowing how men appreciate well selected additions to their wardrobes. Every woman has hoped that the day would appear when she might go to a shop and select a manly gift for a man which would evoke from him no smile of indulgence.

Next to his business, his affections and his library, a sensitive man's chief satisfaction lies in what he wears. The Man's Shop has been established—its assortments have been collected from the world's ends—with this type of conservative, well dressed man in view.

Gold ornaments are not essentially refined jewelry; neither is a tie with Christmas colors necessarily the scarf such a man would select. So there have been excluded, from every nook and corner of The Man's Shop, the garish and the commonplace.

Those who are thronging the Murray Hill section these busy days, where the Lord & Taylor store stands a commanding figure, are invited to step into the Express Elevators and be landed immediately on the special floor devoted to this shop, in which men are finding a sincere purpose and a new atmosphere. It is filled, not with Christmas possibilities, but Christmas certainties.

Express Elevators to Gifts Which Express Men's Natural Preferences

NEXT to the house gowns and smoking jackets' which every bachelor and benedict, every man of mature years and every student in college holds in esteem, are the evening dress things which always need replenishing.

It may be evening gloves, a waistcoat, evening shirts, a top hat, a stick or a muffler.

In The Man's Shop they may be tried in the special Evening Dress Room—a practical rehearsal of their correctness, under actual evening lights and conditions.

There is a selection which at once convinces you that the subject is receiving the attention and treatment which the man himself appreciates and approves—not the ordinary things seen in every window.

If it is a walking stick for morning or afternoon, or a pair of walking gloves, there is the same liberality of assortment and assurance of correctness.

Gloves, of course, are prime favorites as Christmas gifts, with men as well as women, and the average man regards himself as particularly fortunate who is remembered with a few judiciously chosen pairs.

For many years this store has been known from coast to coast for its ability to furnish gloves, as well as stockings, of immaculate correctness and quality.

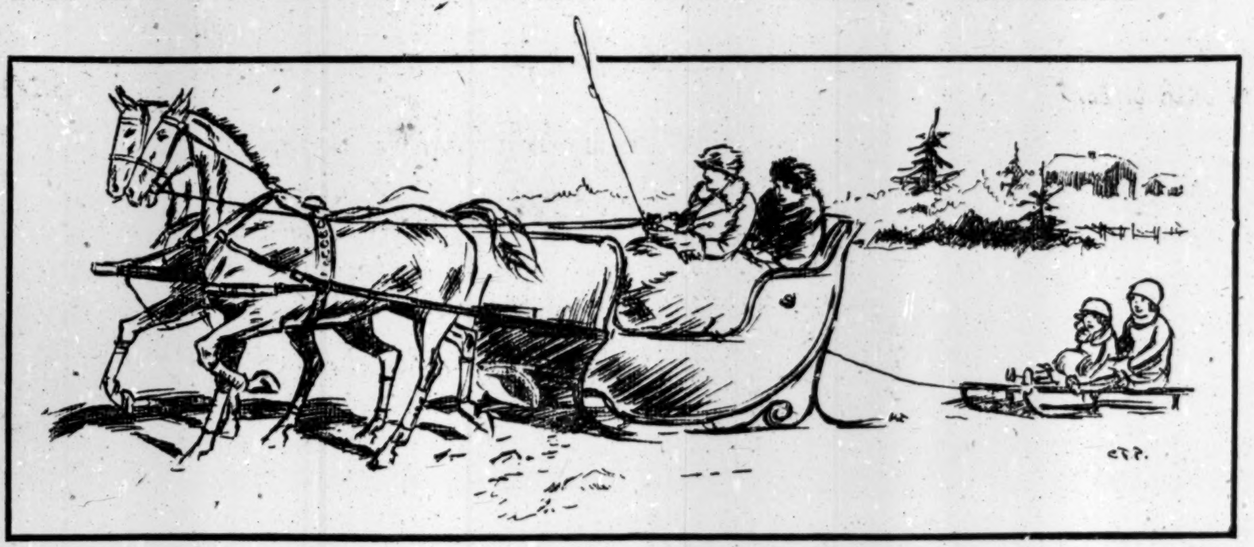
As to men, this well earned reputation has been transferred to The Man's Shop, and now is justified to the highest degree. Buckskin gloves in the various lighter and butternut shades; hand-stitched English cape gloves; mocha gloves in every desirable style; wool-lined and fur-lined gloves and gauntlets; and woolen knit gloves.

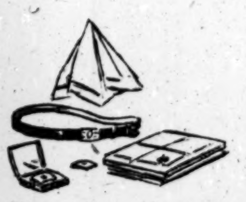
Dressing gowns in finest French silk brocades; in English flannels and cheviots; in plaids and stripes; and in those lighter silks which one may use on a sleeper—an assortment one might look for in London.

Smoking jackets in brocades, silks and velvets—for the comfortable evening at home, or to throw on when the dinner coat is discarded.



Christmas in city or country—fur coats and brushed wool mufflers, coonskin caps and gloves, contribute to the music of the sleighbells

When it comes to belt buckles, belts and handkerchiefs, it would be difficult here to commit an error, if the tastes of the recipient are at all understood.



There are gold and silver buckles, selected with due regard to present usage—some with initials and others with spaces for monograms. Some of the most effective are in varicolored gold, in narrow stripes.

Handkerchiefs of the finest white Irish linen—plain, with initials, or with colored borders and colored spot initials. Unusual assortments of French colored handkerchiefs and the English silk handkerchiefs so much in use abroad.

Among the mufflers are those from Zurich, of softest crocheted silk; the brushed silk and brushed wool imported mufflers for motoring and skating; and a large selection of knitted mufflers, of both silk and wool, quite unlike those ordinarily seen.

Where is the man who does not need a new umbrella at Christmas time? And where is the one that is not extra particular about the stick, and the way it rolls? Here is the one with a handle that helps set off a tweed suit, and the one which may be carried in the evening—a collection selected with discrimination.

The golf jacket with sleeves, and the golf waistcoat without sleeves—the scarf for golf, and the cap—the shaggy jacket of brushed wool, and the sweater in all its accepted forms.

It has been the purpose of The Man's Shop to present in its completeness this branch of the golfer's wardrobe—and it has been accomplished without stint. Many of these things were made in Scotland—and all have been selected with full knowledge of the preferences of American and English players.

Shirts, in The Man's Shop, are regarded as of more importance than that usually accorded them—in the matter of tailoring, as well as material and color. While the selection is versatile in the extreme, it has been assembled with a knowledge of the conservatism demanded—a knowledge well fortified by the custom shirt department conducted by this shop. As gifts, these shirts will unquestionably meet approval.

In hosiery, one may select in The Man's Shop the best productions of Scotland, England and America—from the finest silk socks to Scotch golf stockings of the difficult-to-find kind.

This includes a very complete variety of the woolen socks which many men now prefer in Summer as well as in Winter—from the thinnest to the heaviest weight.

Both silk and woolen socks may be had with distinctive clocks, or without.

No Christmas would be complete without pajamas entering the lists of gifts. From the variety here shown, one would think the whole of Pajamaland had been invaded and all the desirable pajamas carried off.

Pajamas of silk from the Far East, pajamas of madras, pajamas of English flannels for those who are cold of blood, and extremely aristocratic imported pajamas of cottons so fine they might easily be mistaken for silk.

Here are long-jamas and short-jamas, big-jamas and slim-jamas—and all made on the lines and trimmed as men of the world demand them.

Slippers—not the sort that make a man smile, unless the smile is one of satisfaction. Slippers to slip on with the bath-robe—slippers that add a feeling of ease to the lounging robe—slippers for the Pullman and slippers to relieve one's evening dress shoes.

With all the other foot luxuries, here are also foot-warmers for the motor car—in sets with lap-robe and motor pillow of the same warm plush—one of the many gift things in the motor livery department.

Tom Logan golf shoes, scarfs for evening dress wear, our one-stud-to-show English style evening shirt, a postboy's waistcoat for sport use—hats, travel ulsters and overcoats, underwear, or even a suit of clothes, if one is very practically inclined. Where else will you find so many gifts a man really wants?

CLOTHING MAKERS ASSAIL SOVIETISM

Sees Collapse of Market Near if Workers Do Not Drop Plan to Rule.

RABBI OFFERS TO MEDIATE

Employers Would Smash Union at Public's Expense, Says Amalgamated Chief.

A collapse of the New York clothing market is imminent unless the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and its 65,000 members involved in the present controversy renounce Sovietism, grant the manufacturers the piece-work system, the right of discharge, banish walking delegates and accept certain minor renunciations, according to a declaration of principels made public yesterday by the Clothing Manufacturers' Association of New York through its President, William Bandler.

While the manufacturers were preparing the summary of the principles to which the manufacturers' association stands committed and Sidney Hillman, General President of the Amalgamated, was waiting in the union offices, 31 Union Square, to peruse his opponents' statement and to formulate a reply, Rabbi Nathan Krass, who numbers many clothing manufacturers in his congregation, charged in the Central Synagogue that lack of faith on both sides was the cause of the present conflict in one of the city's largest industries and offered to act as mediator in the crisis.

It was also pointed out by persons familiar with the new struggle that many manufacturers had and would suffer serious losses, and further, that the east side was facing one of the hardest Winters in its history as a source of labor in the needles trades—this, in spite of savings accumulated during the lush days of the war when labor to make army equipment was in demand and could command its price.

"Neither side seems to have faith in the other; each is trying to get the better of the argument," Rabbi Grass declared frcm his pulpit. "That is the crux of the whole problem. 'Though your sins be as red as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow.' Labor has many shortcomings with which to enter this fight, but the manufacturers are not angels either. During the war there was profiteering among manufacturers. To be sure, they raised wages, but at the same time raised prices in greater proportion, and many of them in those days took employes away from their competitors. Some one will probably send up a question asking me to name these firms, but I will not make them public, because I have no desire to malign anybody. But I have the facts right here and I will be glad to show any data I have to persons interested.

"Although there is an amicable working agreement in the clothing trade in Chicago, Baltimore and Rochester, conditions in this city in the past have prevented the two forces from getting together on a common ground. I offer to act in the capacity of mediator and agree to meet any committee selected by either or both sides if they would care to listen to me. I am usually interested in existing differences between capital and labor in the clothing trade because the needle industry is in the hands principally of Jews.

"The Jews have an unparalleled opportunity of showing the world that they are able to solve a great economic problem without resorting to a prolonged strike. Let others war, but the children of Israel should try to choose the saner or more equitable methods of solving their difficulties. We do not want the world to say we are harbingers of unrest and responsible for discontentment."

The declaration of the manufacturers is introduced with the statement that in order to meet the public's demand for a reduction of clothing prices, and in order to save to New York City the clothing market with its annual output of $200,000,000, and to furnish employment to about 60,000 workers, it is imperative that there be a complete change in the fundamentals which control the local labor market, "that industry be restored to a bisis of business efficiency, and that there be eradicated the evil practices in which the industry is steeped and the perils that threaten it."

"Many of the larger manufacturers, recognizing the absolute impossibility of continuing in the manufacture of clothing in this centre under the union's domination, have given up their business here and established themselves in other places, where they hope to be permitted to manufacture under less burdensome restrictions," says the statement.

"There is, and can be no hope for the saving of the New York clothing market unless:

"1—The relationship between the employers and workers, dealing together, either individually or through the association of the former and the union of the latter, be re-established upon a most complete renunciation by the workers of what is and has been the fundamental revolutionary doctrine and purpose of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union as stated in its constitution, as follows:

"'To put the organized working class in actual control of the system of production, to the end that they shall be ready to take possession of it.'

"The manufacturers in the clothing trade do not intend to lend themselves to the establishment of Sovietism in their industry.

"2—That due rewards be given to workers on the basis solely of service, efficiency and competency; that each worker be held responsible for a standard of production and be paid on a basis which will permit the New York clothing manufacturers to successfully compete with other markets where the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union has established and permits different standards; that the present week work system, with its attendant evils, including the willful curtailment and natural limitation of output, which is an incident of that system, soldiering on the job and limitation of apprentices, be completely eradicated from the industry.

"3—That there be renounced the present doctrine of life tenure of employment to workers, without regard to efficiency or competency, and that there be restored to employers the right to dispense with the services of unnecessary, incompetent and inefficient workers.

"4—That there be restored to the manufacturer the right at all times to determine where he shall buy and where he shall cause to be manufactured his product; that the present rule of prohibiting employers from dispensing with the services of an independent contractor or to change from one contractor to another be abrogated.

"5—That the walking delegate, examples of whose tyranny and terrorism and other vicious practices are daily brought to the public mind in the pending investigation in the building trades, be forever banished from the clothing market.

"6—That the relationship between the workers and their employers, acting individually or collectively, be fixed by agreement of the parties themselves; that no oueside agency be constituted, with legislative power, to determine the destinies, rights and obligations of the workers and employers in this industry. The association is not opposed to the arbitrament of disputes under definitely written contracts made by the parties themselves, but is unalterably opposed to the creation in any individual of an industrial receivership, with power and authority to legislate for workers and employers as to the terms and conditions of labor."

The sixth "condition" refers to the Impartial Chairman, to whom, under the old agreement disputes of nearly all classes were submitted for a decision.

Two of the "larger manufacturers" who had transferred their business to other cities, it was learned last night, were the firms of Cohen, Goldman & Co., said to have been one of the largest makers of men's suits and overcoats in the New York market, which moved out of town in August, and Epstein Charles Douglas & Co., another big clothing concern.

"It will be a hard Winter for us as well as for the workers," declared a manufacturer last night when he was told that, according to persons familiar with the situation, both sides would suffer. "Our expenses will continue just the same—the overhead expenses, I mean. But we are confident that we are masters of the situation and before the week is out a good percentage of the manufacturers operating 'inside shops,' those who have their own factories and do not let work out to contractors, will be working.

"The workers have not saved very much. Tailors and cutters and other workers who come to work wearing $15 silk shirts, fancy shoes and expensive clothing, and who have been living high during the recent wave of extravagance, cannot have saved a great deal. A great deal of borrowing between workers goes on in the industry."

Amalgamated Replies to Charges.

In answer to the various charges contained in the manufacturers' statement, Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated later made public the following statement:

"That the purpose of the present ruling group in the Clothing Manufacturers' Association is to destroy law and order in industry, and go back to the state of chaos and anarchy which existed in the days of the sweatshop, is now made evident. These manufacturers want to have nothing to do with government in industry. They have summarily dismissed the Impartial Chairman and scrapped the impartial machinery for the adjustment of grievances. They seek to destroy not only the peaceful and orderly method of meeting the problems of the industry, but also the machinery which affords to the public the opportunity to learn the facts. The issue in this controversy is clear. On the one hand the employers' contention is for control by them alone of working conditions in the industry, based on their one-sided claim as to the conditions prevailing in the New York market, while on the other hand the union's position is for joint control by the workers and employers, with impartial arbitration by a representative of the public.

"This form of government has prevented stoppages in production and strikes and has provided for a peaceful method of adjusting all the grievances which may arise. The manufacturers' plan for reducing prices is to unload the blame upon labor, curtail production and set out to smash the union at the public's expense. The plan of the Amalgamated has urged for ten weeks in vain for the manufacturers to adopt was for a joint investigation of the facts to determine the sources of higher prices. The plan of the Amalgamated meant peace, continued production, and a permanent reduction in clothing prices by the elimination of excessive profits and reduction of waste.'

BOSTON CLOTHIERS SPEAK.

Assert Demand Is for a Day's Work for a Day's Pay.

BOSTON, Dec. 12.—A fair day's work for a fair day's pay, and not low wages and long hours or a return to sweatshop conditions is asked by employes in the garment making industry by the Clothing Manufacturers' Association of Boston, according to a statement issued tonight. The manufacturers announced last week that they consider existing agreements with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America abrogated.

"Deliberate restriction of output for the sake of making places for more employes must be stopped," the statement said, "and the manufacturer must know at the beginning of the season the labor cost on which he can count in completing contracts into which he enters."

The statement declares that "This war, if it may be so termed, which the clothing manufacturers here and in other centres are waging, is not a war for the sweat shop, but a war for American principles in industry, for the right of every man to earn wages commensurate with his skill and habits of application, free from the domination of labor leaders imbued with the doctrines which have made Russia's condition today one of 'chaos.'"

JAIL 5 MINGO MEN FOR DEPUTY'S DEATH

Two More Arrests and Holding of All for Trial Expected Today.

TENT COLONY FIRED ON

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., Dec. 12.—Charged with being implicated in the death of Burman Hatfield, a Mingo County Deputy Sheriff, whose body was found just across the McDowell County line on July 14, five men were arrested at War Eagle this afternoon and brought to the Mingo County jail here tonight. They are John Jenkins, John Collins, W. H. L. Asberry and Steven Collins of Matewan and Joe Collins of Alma Thacker.

At the Sheriff's office it was said two more arrests would be made tomorrow in relation to Hatfield's death. It was said the seven men would be taken to Welch, McDowell County, tomorrow where they would be held for trial.

Sporadic firing this morning into the Lick Creek tent colony of striking miners near Williamson from the mining village across the Tug River at Aflax, Ky., was reported to David Fowler, mine workers' representative in charge of the Mingo district strike, this afternoon. The facts were referred to the military authorities controlling the district and an investigation was started immediately. No casualties were reported.

The investigation of the sanitary conditions of the tent colonies by State health authorities is regarded with indifference by union officials, although they said they were prepared to give aid and co-operation in making the investigation. A "safe and sane" way to help striking miners in the tent colonies, if the State was inclined to investigate the conditions, Fowler asserted, would be for Governor Cornwell to compel the coal operators "to sit at a conference table" to settle the strike. Regarding the arrival in Williamson of Dr. George M. Taylor of the State Health Department, who will investigate the Lick Creek tent colony tomorrow and the reports from Charleston that the Governor believes tent colonists should be removed to Williamson, Fowler in a statement declared:

"Miners and their families living in tents are determined to fight the battle to the finish. I have talked with many miners and the various committees from the colonists after having read press reports as to conditions in the colonies, and they have reported to me that they are willing to remain in tents. Our reports show that the health of the tent colonists compares favorably with that of the miners living in houses of the coal corporations.

One hundred new tents arrived in Williamson yesterday, union officials said. Forty have been sent to the colonists at Sprigg and ten to Nolan. The remainder have been put in storage at Matewan. Workmen were busy today erecting tents at a new colony at Vulcan. Reports from Charleston that homeless Kentucky miners were coming to West Virginia could not be verified at union headquarters. Leaders said that if Kentuckians were coming across the river they had no knowledge of it.

Coal operators reported that all mines affected by the strike were operating now with the exception of half a dozen and they said these would be put in operation as quickly as labor could be brought in. Approximately 200 new men have been brought into the Mingo fields within the last week, the operators said, and more were looked for this week. Committees of strikers are permitted to approach the men as they get off the trains and endeavor to persuade them to go to union fields. In this they have been successful at times, furnishing transportation to the Kanawha fields, but the operators point to their success by the number of mines being placed in operation and increased production figures.

Government prohibition agents, assisted by local agents under the leadership of U. G. McFarland, Chief of the Eastern District of Kentucky, captured two men in Pike County, Kentucky, near Devon, W. Va., yesterday accused of operating a moonshine still. Several gallons of whisky, a great quantity of mash and five stills were taken, the agents said.

these constructive possibilities that particularly interest me. Additional warehouse facilities must be provided; constructive measures should be taken toward further reducing traffic congestion on marginal streets and on crosstown routes; there must be further development of port facilities; means must be devised for handling all freight moving through New York City with greater expedition and ease and at a rate that will tend to promote the commercial supremacy of the port of New York. I should like to help in solving these problems and I believe that I can do my part most effectively through my connection with the United States Trucking Corporation.

"My association with the Trucking Corporation involves a personal association also with the controlling interests of the United States Distributing Corporation, which also owns the Sheridan-Wyoming Coal Company, Incorporated, one of the largest coal mining companies in the West, and the Tongue River Trading Company, which does a substantial merchandising business in the same territory. On the directorate of the Distributing Corporation are: George F. Getz, its President, and Frank S. Peabody, two prominent Chicago business men, as well as Harvey D. Gibson, President of the Liberty National Bank, Grayson M. P. Murphy, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company; E. V. R. Thayer, President of the Chase National Bank, and H. E. Ward, President of the Irving National Bank."

The United States Trucking Corporation was formed in January by an amalgamation of 75 per cent. of the trucking interests in this city. Its organizers described it as "a $10,000,000 corporation." The company was formed with a capital of $2,000,000 in preferred stock and 80,000 shares of common stock without par value.

The objects stated were to better traffic conditions in this city and to expedite the delivery and forwarding of goods. Under the old system, it was said, there was much unnecessary duplication in hauling work. The new corporation has tried, by the establishment of a system of depots, to prevent trucks from returning empty after deliveries and thus to effect considerable economy in labor and vehicles.

The separate trucking companies which were combined into the United States Trucking Corporation included the Meade Transfer Company, Oscar S. Brummer, Inc., E. R. Lowe Company, William Casey, Inc., Monahan's Express, Healy & Callahan, Edward F. Kelly, S. Hannon, Halvey Brothers, H. L. Sweet, Daniel & Kennedy, D. Gilroy & Sons, J. Laurence, R. J. Mulligan, James F. Stanton, J. J. Sullivan, J. J. Gillan & Co., R. H. Thornberry, Matthew J. Sullivan, John F. Lange, P. Reardon, Inc., Paul Veani, Richard Fitzpatrick and Korwin Brothers.

The President of the United States Trucking Corporation is James J. Riordan, and managing directors include J. S. Reardon, William J. McCormack, George Daniels and Edward F. Kelly.

The offices of the corporation are at 393 Canal Street, within a short distance of Governor Smith's home district.

On a cold snappy day is your engine almost impossible to start after a few hours on the street? Does your engine buck and misfire now and then? Do you often find that you are disgusted with the low mileage you get on the gallon in traffic? That's because low-grade gasoline vaporizes slowly.

Starting in cold weather demands fast vaporization

You can avoid these common driving troubles that come from using ordinary gasoline. Tydol, the Economy Gasoline, vaporizes fast. It will operate on the wasteful mixture required by ordinary fuel, but for quick starting, high mileage and snappy pickup you can use the lean 15 to 1 Tydol mixture. Drivers are finding a new satisfaction in winter driving when they use this fast vaporizing gasoline.

Fill up the tank with Tydol—forget cold weather troubles—sail through traffic with every piston delivering full, smooth power. At the end of the run you will find an extra gallon or two in the tank.

SOCIALISTS DEMAND END OF 'USURPATION'

ESPIONAGE LAW MUST GO

With Immediate Repeal of All War-Time Laws and Release of War-Time Prisoners.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—The Socialist Party National Committee tonight issued a manifesto declaring that the "repudiation of the present Administration in the recent election does not assure the people against a continuation of the usurpations of power and violations of the Constitution now in effect in Washington," and asserts that the party intends to "stand up and assert itself and remedy these conditions."

The manifesto contains a series of demands which it says would annul various present laws which the party looks on as "the encroachments of Wall Street's autocracy and its political agents."

"During the last four years there have been unbelievable usurpations of power on the part of the Administration and of unbelievable cowardice on the part of the American people," says the manifesto.

"The political autocracy at Washington has violated every principle, precedent and tradition of the American people and deprived them of the rights and liberties guaranteed by the Constitution. The National Executive Committee now reasserts the fundamental principles of liberty embodied in the Constitution and calls upon the American people to support it in the following demands:

"We demand restoration of the Constitution of the United States.

"We demand immediate repeal of all war-time laws, especially the vile and infamous Espionage law which has created a secret police whose crimes against liberty are unparalleled.

"We demand the unconditional abolition of all war-time powers and restoration of representative government.

"We demand immediate release of all war-time prisoners.

"We demand immediate restoration of the fundamental American rights of free speech, free press and free assemblage, and we denounce the brutal and lawless interference therewith and hereby declare that we shall resist the same by all means within our power to protect our Constitutional rights as American citizens.

"Upon these principles, which involve the Constitutional rights dear to us all, we make our appeal to the American people."

Pope Sends a Christmas Blessing.

Christmas greetings from the Pope to the Knights of Columbus and to all Catholics and other citizens of the United States were received last night at a meeting of the supreme officers of the Knights of Columbus held in the Hotel Commodore. Pope Benedict, in a brief message, blessed the United States and the Knights of Columbus for their works of charity.

PACKARD

Until you have seen, and carefully examined, the new Packard Single-Six, you cannot know how much of intrinsic and enduring value can be built into a moderately priced automobile. For this car, every inch of it, is genuinely and scrupulously Packard; Packard in quality and substance; Packard in action and form. Not a line of its design, not a factor of its engineering, but enjoys authority from the superb performance of those 70,000 earlier Packards that have gone before. Come see it. Drive it. Know for yourself its character. Nothing excelling its basic goodness has ever gone forward bearing the Packard name.

Mollycoddle Salesmen! Pussyfoot Advertisers!

Today is none too soon for both to return to hard training

BY CHARLES W. HOYT

One night in February, 1918, a score of sales managers, members of the famous New York Sales Managers' Club, met to discuss a curious and unusual subject. As printed in their program, it read something about adjusting sales departments to a wartime basis. What they really talked about was "How Shall We Keep Our Salesmen Busy?" Ordinarily the answer would be "Put Them To Work, Selling Goods."

These sales managers had a lot of good salesmen on their hands, for whom they did not have any real, honest-to-goodness selling. One man said that he had called in all of his men and put them to work in the shipping room. Another said he had invited his men to don overalls and take a job in the factory. Still another reported that he had made good use of his salesmen in tracing lost freight, missing cars and negotiating with the railroads for assistance. All of this was fine, but none of it developed a man's marketing instinct very much.

At previous meetings of the New York Sales Managers' Club such topics had been discussed as: "Intensive Cultivation of a Territory vs. Hitting the High Spots," "Holding Salesmen's Conventions" and "The Use of a Standard Sales Manual." That was in the days "before the war," when sales managers and salesmen had to use the sales sides of their brains.

Sales Engineering—a Joke!

Two years before the war my book, "SCIENTIFIC SALES MANAGEMENT," was published. We were in a period of over-production, when about everybody needed help in sales work. Many people, for the first time, realized the value of sales, directed and planned from the home office, so the book proved to be most acceptable, over twelve thousand copies being sold, mostly to sales-managers and other executives.

And then we landed, without much warning, right in the midst of the greatest Sellers' Market in the world's history. In such a situation, any such practices as Sales Engineering, Intensive Selling or Scientific Sales Management were a joke. BUT ARE THEY TO BE DISREGARDED NOW?

Are They Like Jeffries?

About four years ago, those who are supposed to do the selling and advertising of our goods BROKE TRAINING Ever since they have been inactive, market-wise,—they have become flabby, soft. They no longer possess the "come-back" of the old days. They accept turn-downs mildly. They can't stand punishment. Are they like Jeffries?—or can they come back? Now is none too soon to start training.

For the past four years the job of the average sales manager has been to advise customers what proportion of their orders would be filled and to apologize for the delay in shipping the balance. I recently interviewed fifty retail customers of one of our clients. What they told me about the shipments of our customer could be expressed in two words, which this newspaper would not print.

The direction of salesmen has consisted in telling salesmen what not to sell—in telling them to get a new order and at the same time to apologize for not shipping the last order.

For the past four years retail clerks, in waiting on customers, have become accustomed to telling what they were out of, and have acquired an indifferent attitude toward the customer's wants. It is not so very long ago that if you went into a store and asked for something unusual, such as woolen socks, linen underwear or English cretonnes, you were shown a nondescript assortment and informed "these are all we have." But today the goods are here on sale, but the salesmen are missing.

Strange Sealed Orders

Four years ago advertising agents and managers began to receive strange, unusual orders from the manufacturer. At first they didn't like the orders. Lately, I am inclined to believe, many of them are thriving on this sort of pre-digested diet. "Be careful! Watch your step!" said the bosses. "Don't mention any specific product in our advertisements, because if you do our dealers, whose orders are already long delayed, will protest." Advertising men accordingly (and quite correctly for such times) wrote advertising to build up "prestige"—"favorable acquaintanceship"—"national consciousness"—and similar things for which names were invented. Said those who planned, "We must talk about how long we have been in the business—how well we treat our help—how carefully we build our product."

As a result of eating this pre-digested food, those who did the building and the planning have become somewhat spineless. Isn't it time, before it is too late, that the advertising men go into training and try to prepare the sort of advertising that the times demand?

What's Wrong with Us?

In a statement prepared for the December, 1920, issue of the Guaranty Trust Company's publication, THE GUARANTY NEWS, Mr. Sabin, President of that Company, says:

"There is so much in the present situation to inspire confidence and hope for the future that it is little short of criminal for any one to paint the picture so blackly, through either ignorance or intent, that these vital facts are obscured. To cite a few pertinent facts: This country will harvest this year one of the largest crops in its history; its transportation congestion has been relieved and its railroad system is for the first time in a decade on a sound financial and operating basis; we have passed through a national election and assured four years of sane administration of public affairs; our banking system has withstood the greatest credit strain in its history and is on a sound and workable basis; the accumulated surplus of five years of splendid prosperity is stored in many ways for our continued use; the markets of the world demand our products and a great mercantile marine is prepared to transport them; this country has not been overbuilt or overextended in any of its underlying activities, and faces no program of readjustment along these lines such as usually precipitates panic conditions. We are in a sounder financial, industrial and political condition than any important nation in the world."

Another Alibi

Six months ago a Connecticut manufacturer laughed at me for suggesting an aggressive going after business. Said he: "What's the use? I can sell the goods easily enough, but I can't ship them. About every other day some new embargo goes into effect. I believe it would be a mistake for me to spend a lot of money on salesmen, only to discover, about next December, that the railroads cannot or will not deliver them."

It is now December, but they are not talking that way along the line of that railroad today. But they are producing another alibi, namely, that "conditions" aren't right.

The fundamental conditions are right; but there are some other things which need to be set right. There are forty-nine States in the United States: forty-eight regular States and one irregular State, namely, the "State of Mind." The state of mind of those who market must be set going along the proper channels; including manufacturers' or jobbers' executives, sales managers, salesmen, advertising men, retail merchants and retail sales clerks.

Inactivity—a receipt of results without an adequate amount of work—has made mollycoddles of the sales force. Soft-pedaling, on advertising specific products, and the writing of "Up-Stage" copy has made pussyfooters of the advertisers.

Much talk has lately been addressed to the workers, telling them that they must go to work. This talk has been addressed to the wage-earner—to the factory-hand. Equally well should it now be addressed to all those who market; otherwise there will be little need for many factories to make the product.

To Presidents and General Managers:

A study of the conditions ruling—a look at the outlook rather than at today's situation—should convince you that we are facing prosperous times. "The turn will come," say many authorities, "before 1921 is very old." If you believe this, now is none too soon to bring your forces up into line. Everybody connected with your sales and advertising should be called in and properly instructed. The proper message should go forth from you to your salesmen, and from them to the retailer. Both should be shown the sales possibilities that exist in the products which you make. As for your advertising, demand that it be so built and placed that it, also, carries the real, definite sales message into the field which, in your judgment, the situation demands.

To Sales Managers:

You should immediately satisfy yourselves that the fundamental conditions which underlie the possibilities for business in your products for 1921 are right. You should convince yourselves that you are not obliged to "mark time" and accept ordinary results from your men. Then you should call your men in and give them your message. Remember the old conditions when you used to teach salesmen how to sell your product? Remember the days when intensive selling was your forte? Remember the meetings when discussions were held as to how to sell the retailer? The time has arrived to return to those early methods and to go after business aggressively.

To the Salesmen of America:

During the past four years your chief occupation has been to "Take Orders." From now on your job should be to "Sell Goods." For a long while you have been inactive. You are like a colt that is confined in a box-stall. Your powers, physical and mental, have withered through lack of action. A few setbacks set you to puffing. You lack your old time stamina. You must get back into shape. You must no longer mildly accept the stories which your retailers give you about lack of business. You must be ready to show that it is in their power to secure business for your products, if they only will.

To Advertising Managers and Agents:

You have been writing advertising of the prestige-building sort long enough. Your powers as salesmen, through the use of massed salesmanship or printers' ink, have diminished. Your sales ability has suffered, just as a man's arm confined in a sling suffers after a few months' inactivity. You need to go back into training. From now on you should write and place advertising which creates desire. You should make those who read your advertisements dissatisfied until they have followed your suggestions. You should write and place advertising which will bring orders into the retailers' stores or into the offices or into the factories which you represent. The time to start doing this is now and not six months hence.

To Retail Merchants:

You have been skimming the cream off the top of the milk long enough. It's time to deserve the business you secure. Be a real merchant, with a firm belief in the good old adage, "Quick Sales and Small Profits." Buy your goods well, merchandise them well, and turn your capital over many times per year. If you don't do it, somebody else will, and people will say of you: "That fellow doesn't know that the war is over. He's a 'has-been.'"

During the past four years it has been easy to sell and advertise goods. In many instances neither advertising nor selling was necessary; but now both are necessary, and needed in Big Quantities. It took very little to start and keep up in the sales in the past. From now on big horse-power must be put behind the sales and the advertising to secure the same results. This is a big country, with the wants of a great many people to be supplied. The people have waited during the past few months for liquidation. Nobody has bought anything which they did not need, preferring to await lower prices. But there are many wants unfilled, there are many retailers' shelves depleted. The wants exist. They are waiting for intelligent direction from salesmen, advertising men and retailers.

Hoyt's Service, Inc., Believes

The time for action has arrived. We welcome the return of the necessity of advertising to sell merchandise. We have helped many firms lay strong foundations through institutional, prestige-building, consumer-acquaintance-forming advertising. Now we welcome the necessity, or rather the opportunity, of drawing dividends, or "Cashing In" on this work.

We welcome the opportunity to "merchandise the advertising," which means, to make the advertising secure orders before it appears in the papers, by first selling it to the salesmen, the jobber and the retailer. We welcome the instructions of our customers who, until recently, have been months behind on deliveries, that we are to advertise specific products. We shall welcome instructions to put prices in their advertisements.

We are ready to participate in salesmen's conventions run in the old time way, with the addition of the new spirit gained by our war experiences. We are glad that we shall no longer listen, at such conventions, to the explanations of the management to the salesmen, as to why their last year's sales were not shipped, and to hazy promises for next year. We hope to listen to the sales manager as he tells the men what he wants, what he expects, and what they can expect if they fail to deliver.

From now on, in sales and advertising: "Let's be done with Mollycoddling. Let's put a stop to Pussyfooting."

Hoyt's Service, Inc., is in a position to handle, expeditiously, the building of advertising plans for 1921, of about six additional firms. We would welcome an opportunity to explain our methods.

A MIDDLING POLICY.

Senator Harding admits that "it may seem impracticable," but announces that he is seeking "a middle ground between the pro-Leaguers and the irreconcilables." This recalls the old professor of theology who was famous for always hunting for a via media. One of his lectures was said to have begun: "There have been, young gentlemen, two schools of thought on this subject—the theists and the atheists. Between the two we, as usual, will take a middle course."

From the nature of the case, from the very definition and settled attitude of the irreconcilables, they will scorn and reject Mr. Harding's middle ground, if he finds it. They know only the end—the bitter end. They may not, as reported, have served an ultimatum upon Senator Harding, but they are not concealing their intention. "Does anybody suppose," asked one of them in Washington the other day, "that this question of the League of Nations can be solved by a kindly man with a smile putting his arm around my shoulders?" They are not to be conciliated by a change of names. "Association" is just as hateful to them as League. No deft shifting of phraseology in the Covenant, or of emphasis, will appease them. It is still, in all its parts and guises, the "wicked" thing, the "accursed" thing, and they are bound to fight it to the last gasp.

This being so, it will be of no avail to Mr. Harding to move over toward the middle, with the thought that if he does not go too far he may placate the irreconcilables. If he departs so much as an inch from their position, they will oppose him. He cannot escape a break with them, so that he might as well frame a policy worth while in itself, and defensible on its merits, so as to make himself as strong as possible against an attack bound to come if he does anything at all not to the liking of the group in the Senate which demands all and will yield nothing.

Sometimes there is wisdom and safety in compromise, and sometimes there is only folly and disaster. One who has to deal with men who will not compromise had better be somewhat uncompromising himself. Proverbial sayings do not always apply. "In medio tutissimus ibis." But that depends on how many are behind the fences shooting at you as you stick to the middle of the road.

REPUBLICAN ECONOMY.

Mr. McCumber, acting Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, puts before the country figures about the Federal finances that are subject to revision and correction, but the people need to have the subject called sharply to their attention. Secretary Houston estimates the revenues for the fiscal year 1922 at $4,859,000,000. Mr. McCumber thinks they won't be half that sum unless business is a good deal better in 1921 than it has been in the last two months of this year.

Senator McCumber seems to have had three purposes in mind: To give notice to taxpayers that they mustn't expect from Congress any relief in regard to inventory losses or postponement of the Dec. 15 instalment of income and excess profits taxes; to scare off raiders on the Treasury; and to fill Congress with a rigid resolution of economy.

The taxpayers are used to being disappointed. Organized raids on the Treasury, no matter how empty, are bolder. To the farmers Mr. McCumber offers "some kind of relief" through the revival of the War Finance Corporation and the closing of "the intake pipe." The Republicans seem to have nothing but protection and exclusion as economic and financial remedies. This proposed bestowal of the American market on the farmers is delusive. It offers them what they practically have. It is painfully noticeable that the Republicans always seem more interested in the revision of the tariff than in that of much more important taxes.

Mr. McCumber asks the bonus-seeking soldiers not to demand immediate action, to be patient, to consider the financial troubles Congress must struggle with. What is the use of saying that to men who know that Mr. McCumber's chief, the Chairman of the Finance Committee, about or quite the most influential man in the Senate and the Republican Party, Boies Penrose, advocates a Federal bonus? Mr. McCumber is everlastingly right in asking the appropriate committees to "cut to the bone," and it is to be hoped that he speaks to willing ears. So far, however, the Republicans of the Sixty-sixth Congress have done only a lip-service to economy. In the campaign an absurd clatter was made about the achievement of the Republican Congress in slashing $2,500,000,000 off the department estimates. That was pure humbug. Estimates are made to be slashed. The Sixty-fifth Congress cut some $5,560,000,000 from the department estimates. Actual economy hasn't interested the Republicans in this Congress. They love to bewail Democratic "waste" and "extravagance," but the long session is too long and the short session too short for any attempt to perform their large promises, and they try to shelter their inertia with the extraordinary plea that it isn't worth while to attempt constructive and far-reaching economies while Mr. Wilson is in the White House.

The present condition of the Treasury and of business, the present temper of the people, make Federal economy imperative. Even in this last session of the Sixty-sixth Congress appropriations should be pared to the last cent consistent with efficiency, and the Sixty-seventh Congress must make mighty economies. Those 200,000, or whatever the present enumeration is, of superfluous officeholders must "go." The excess profits tax must "go," and if a general sales tax law is enacted, as it should be, the specific sales taxes should be repealed and the surtaxes on incomes. Not as an additional tax, but as a fair and universal substitute tax, is the general sales tax desirable. It isn't reduction of taxes to add new to old. Will the Republicans in Congress keep that in mind, or will they lay new taxes, yield to the rush for new appropriations, forget to "cut to the bone"?

It is a chilling message that Mr. McCumber brings to the eager millions that trusted in the superstition that good times were Republican and the Republican Party an infallible miracle man. A most intricate and difficult task is laid upon the Republicans. They will need all their foresight, judgment, prudence much more than they have shown in opposition. The Democrats will loyally co-operate with them in measures of wise taxation and retrenchment. The country, having far more momentous things than partisanship to concern itself with, expects severe economy and gradual economic and financial improvement. In particular, it expects the Republicans to fulfill their promises.

NAVAL EXPANSION COST.

In his annual report, published today, Secretary Daniels says that "if the United States is not to enter into any agreement with the other Powers of the earth which are now bound together in the League of Nations, I feel compelled to approve the recommendation of the General Board that Congress authorize another three-year program, to be begun as soon as the capital ships now under construction are launched." It may be submitted that the American taxpayers would feel compelled to disapprove of such a recommendation, for the reason that the Treasury is now heavily burdened, and for the reason that the United States Navy is today the most powerful in the world, and, with the completion of the three-year building program authorized in 1916, will be far more formidable than ever; unrivaled in the world on any reasonable computation, stronger than the British Navy, greatly surpassing the Japanese Navy. Secretary Daniels himself says in his report:

> The navy today is incomparably stronger than ever before, and its power will be greatly increased by the battleships and battle cruisers now building.

He adds: "We now have more than 300 modern destroyers, swift, sturdy, dependable, an unexcelled fleet of anti-submarine craft." It is also an "unexcelled fleet" of anti-battleship craft, judged by a salient lesson of Jutland. Even the General Board does not include destroyers in its new three-year program. We have enough and to spare of these formidable torpedo carriers. Our "modern" destroyer fleet is the envy of the British Admiralty, which will never forget that the destroyers of Admiral von Scheer's High Sea Fleet saved his capital ships at Jutland. Of the completion of our first three-year program, which was halted by the necessity of rushing destroyers into the water during the war, Secretary Daniels says:

> Work is now proceeding upon all sixteen of the capital ships authorized in the "three-year program," and all keels have been laid except of one battleship and of two battle cruisers. Three battle cruiser keels were laid on the same day, Sept. 25, 1920.

In the year ending Oct. 1, 1920, the 32,300-ton battleship Tennessee (14-inch guns) was placed in commission and eighty-four destroyers and twelve submarines were built. Construction of destroyers has now stopped altogether, the navy having more of this type than it really needs. Great Britain has practically stopped building warships and has reduced her fleet to a minimum. Japan makes no effort to compete with the United States in fleet expansion, and is far behind. In his annual report in 1916 Secretary Daniels said: "It has never been suggested seriously that our nation should attempt to equal in the number of ships the greatest navy in the world." In that year was authorized the first three-year program, which called for the building of 156 war vessels, including sixteen capital ships, "the largest number ever provided for at one time by any nation," says Mr. Daniels in his latest report. The shadow of war was falling over the country, and rapid expansion of the navy was then justified. In his report of 1917, the United States having entered the war, Mr. Daniels, referring to the three-year program, said it was "big enough to assure America 'incomparably the strongest navy in the world,'" and would call for "liberal appropriations by Congress." They were then warranted, for the war had to be won and no one knew how long it would last.

Two years after the armistice Mr. Daniels says officially that "we have worked steadily" toward the ideal of the most powerful navy in the world, although at various times he has approved of conferences for the reduction of naval armaments; and he "feels compelled" to recommend still another three-year building program in case the United States does not join the League or have an understanding with other nations. The League is an association to prevent wars. Surely the United States does not need a navy big enough to whip "all creation." With the completion of the three-year program of 1916 the navy will be strong enough to defend the country in any conceivable emergency.

CANCELED CONTRACTS.

Calvin Coolidge went to the heart of the question of the canceled contract when he showed its relation to education. Only a part of any man's equipment, he said, and generally the smaller part, is received at school and college. The education that counts in a crisis is that which he receives from the environment of his after life. If that is open, clean and high-minded, he comes insensibly to accept standards according to which the repudiation of a business obligation is impossible.

As is his custom, Governor Coolidge saw the question clearly and expressed his verdict neatly and with precision. Fundamentally it is a matter of the morals of the business community. But the situation is not quite so simple as his comment on it. In ordinary times cancellations are not a serious menace; or, if they are, the law provides sufficient remedy. If a merchant cares more for the contract than for the customer, he sues. If not, he grins and forbears. Just at present an unprecedented factor is involved. To invoke the law may be to ruin the customer, and it is a matter of public policy that failures be minimized. But the merchant has his own standing to consider, and many of the cancellations are beyond question made wantonly by buyers who could stand by their obligations if they would. In their case the question of moral responsibility—or of education, as Governor Coolidge put it—is supreme, and supremely important both to themselves and to the community.

The six rules of business conduct formulated by Thomas W. Lamont were obviously intended to apply to the question of contract cancellation. Two of them especially should be pondered by every business man:

> We can resolve not to be frightened into panic by the wolf that may not come.

The convention of garment manufacturers lately in session here had a more practical remedy, and one that seems likely to be adopted in many lines of trade. It is to set up a court of arbitration in which questions as to contracts can be considered on the more human basis before a resort to law.

AUTOMOBILE FATALITIES.

According to statistics gathered by the Census Bureau, 3,808 persons were killed or fatally injured in automobile accidents in the United States in 1919. In the cities the great majority of victims are pedestrians, and it is the pedestrian whose safety the authorities are particularly concerned about. "Each year," says the census report, "it becomes more and more dangerous for a person to walk the streets." In an article, printed in September, Chief Magistrate William McAdoo declared: "It is no exaggeration to say that there is not a day in the year that those of us who use the streets are not in danger of life and limb, as I testify from my own personal experience." Evidence in the local courts in accident cases conveys the impression that pedestrians are generally at fault (in 78 per cent. of cases, the Police Commissioner has asserted), but it is to be suspected that the pedestrian's side, especially if he was killed or fatally injured, is not always as well presented as that of the driver. Moreover, the sweeping conclusion that the pedestrian is in most cases to blame does not take account of unfitness on the part of the driver to operate the automobile. However responsibility may be placed or calculated, what the public here wants is fewer automobile accidents in the streets of New York.

Magistrate McAdoo has made the subject a study, therefore recommendations from him are valuable. Mr. McAdoo thinks there should be more policemen in this city at the crossings. The time must come, as more and more automobiles will be used on our streets, when there will be policemen at every dangerous crossing (as at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street now) to keep people on the pavements until signals to the procession of cars are changed. Another recommendation by Magistrate McAdoo is the giving of authority to Magistrates to suspend or revoke licenses for cause. Stricter regulation of drivers in New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts, both as regards the issue of licenses and conduct while operating automobiles, has resulted in a marked decline in fatal accidents. In those States the Commissioners of Motor Vehicles are invested with powers that have a restraining effect upon owners who drive their cars as well as chauffeurs. It is undoubtedly true that the majority of drivers, both chauffeurs and owners, have a decent regard for the safety of pedestrians, but the incompetent and reckless minority must feel the hand of the law whenever they are responsible for killing and maiming. The pedestrians must have more protection. Some of them are old, some are feeble, deaf or defective in vision, and a human body is a very frail thing compared with a heavy steel automobile, which on the street or highway corresponds to the locomotive on a railroad.

Public opinion will demand of the incoming Legislature further amendment of the automobile laws. Education of pedestrians in the danger they run in not applying the principle of safety first to themselves is very essential, and of great importance is the propaganda carried on by such bodies as the National Safety Council in behalf of not only automobile and truck owners, but pedestrians and the authorities themselves. It will be a reproach to the American people if such figures as those presented by the Census Bureau are not steadily and surely reduced.

NEW YORK'S RATE CASE.

The New York Central Railroad has lost in two appeals of the State from the decision in the lower court that the Interstate Commerce Commission rates were the lawful rates. The Appellate Division and the Court of Appeals agree that the increase of rates during the war was lawful, but that the end of the war revived the pre-war rates fixed by the company's charter. The case presented the strongest phase of the claim of the States to regulate rates within their borders, and the weakest phase of the duty and right of the Interstate Commerce Commission to give the roads an income to restore their efficiency and credit, "the law of any State, or the order of any State authority, to the contrary notwithstanding."

On the naked question of the validity of the company's charter rate State courts could hardly decide otherwise. It is nothing to the State courts that the charter rate is below the interstate rate, and is diverting to the company business belonging to other companies, if the two rates were equal at any figure. The record did not disclose either the conflict of rates or the prejudice to interstate travel by the intrastate rate's giving the company more business than belongs to it. Therefore the decision expressly reserved to the company the right to raise the question whether the Federal law compels it to raise its fares to 3.6 cents a mile and lose the business brought to it by the charter rate of 2 cents.

Even regarding this particular case the present decision is only a step toward getting the question into the Federal courts, and there it will be overshadowed by the State's case against sixty-one roads, which was argued on Saturday. It is not to be forgotten that it is a conflict of statutes and not of constitutions. The Federal courts adopt the State courts' interpretations of State Constitutions, but not of State laws nor of the Federal Constitution. This was illustrated last week in a dog license case which attracted attention. The Federal Supreme Court declined to overrule the New York courts' decision that it was constitutional in New York to authorize a society to collect license fees. The Federal court refused to discuss the question whether it was constitutional to confer a taxing power on a private society, declining to interfere with the State's police power as interpreted by State courts. The question whether States can overrule the Interstate Commerce Commission either by statutes or by commission rules or by charter provisions arises under the Federal Constitution, and the opinion of the State courts is of little importance either way.

The seventeen State authorities who are proceeding as if the Esch-Cummins law had no bearing on these questions are not assisting in the solution of the question. The country is thinking now more of service than of rates, or of the excessive profits of some railways, or rather of some railway managers, by misconduct long ago which was ended by regulation.

THE NEEDIEST CASES.

No one can have read the detailed statements in yesterday's Times of the neediest cases calling for relief and aid in this city without feeling their peculiar appeal. They give carefully verified information. They show exactly what is required. They reveal in each instance an emergency of the sort to which it is the Christmas impulse to respond. The columns given to the matter in Sunday's Times are useful reading even for those who are not able to give anything to charity this year. It is well for us all to look through the windows which let us see into homes where misfortune has made poverty seem unusually helpless and hopeless.

The fact that great demands upon American generosity are made in the name of starving people in China and imperiled children in Central Europe should not lessen the urgency of the appeal for those in need at our own doors. There is no conflict between the two. It is only a question of proportion and immediacy.

For the work of relief in The Hundred Neediest Cases the time is short, and we can only express the hope that the response will be prompt and generous.

SINS OF THE SUPER-STATE.

More sound arguments against the League of Nations have been discovered by the women of the Republican Town Committee of Greenwich, Conn., somewhat singularly addressed to Senator Brandegee. The Covenant "hands over the government of the world for all eternity to five nations." Moreover, since representation in the Assembly is not proportional to population, "any little monarchy, such as the Hedjaz or Siam, has an equal voice with our great Republic." The logic of these statements need not bother us, for experience has shown that they are convincing and noncontradictory to all enemies of the League. But the ladies have some other objections.

"Thousands of women in Alsace and Lorraine and other States have been deprived of their vote under the 'Peace Treaty.'" Germany now has woman suffrage; France has not. Therefore by all means let Germany keep Alsace and Lorraine. The Covenant "suppresses black slavery and proposes only to exercise supervision over agreements on white slavery." Doubtless the rent of the Salle de la Réformation is being paid out of profits on the traffic in souls. "Time and again in the Peace Treaty option by a husband will cover his wife," and since America cannot very well compel all nations involved in these options of citizenship in transferred territories to amend their laws, let us refrain from ratifying the Treaty.

How the ladies overlooked it we do not know, but there is one more damning argument against ratification. Nowhere in the Treaty or the Covenant, so far as we have seen, is there any provision for compulsory extradition of wife deserters and alimony delinquents. Until that omission is supplied we do not suppose that Senator Brandegee or any other champion of woman's rights can be persuaded to accept this iniquitous document.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Perhaps It Is Now or Never. "Up-State" already is celebrating its brilliant victory over this city in the matter of daylight saving. Confident that as soon as Judge Miller takes his new chair and the recently elected Legislature gets to work the law providing for a Summer adjustment of the State's clocks will be repealed, our dear friends of the hinterland are exulting audibly over what they think the certainty that never again will they have to submit to the coercion of the metropolis in this matter—never again suffer the cruel pain that always comes to them when this city gets what it wants and enjoys it.

And really, that is about all there is to the up-State dislike for daylight saving. Other reasons are assigned, of course, such as the farmer's agony when forced to be an early riser, and the frightful dangers he runs when he quits his house before the dew has dried from the grass, but these reasons and the others that have been given are so obviously absurd that after fair and careful consideration of them one is forced to believe that the rustic's hatred of daylight saving is simply what the psychologists would call a "rationalization" of such unavowable emotions as jealousy and envy.

Anyhow, to say so helps an urbanite to read with an approach to equanimity the delighted prophecies of his speedy deprivation of his extra daylight hour with which the country press now abounds. From these articles it might be imagined that the one great issue settled at the late election was daylight saving—that Judge Miller was chosen because he was against it and Governor Smith rejected because he was for it. If that were so—and nothing could be much further from the truth—what a commentary it would be on Empire State intelligence!

Must Forbid as Well as Repeal. Up-State, which knows by experience the unpleasant possibilities that lie in counting chickens before they are hatched, may learn, in this matter of daylight saving, that like perils attend the celebration of victories before they have been won. After all, what the new Legislature will do with a law that has the enthusiastic support of "labor" in almost every one of its many varieties remains to be seen.

That it will repeal the law is by no means certain—is not even highly probable. On the other hand, suppose the law is repealed. It is next to inconceivable that with the repeal of that law will go the enactment of another law, forbidding New York City and the other cities in the State to save daylight for themselves by municipal ordinance, and, unless that is done, such ordinances are sure to be passed all over the State. Thereupon the villagers and the farmers will find themselves exactly where they were before. What the cities do the country must do, in this particular matter of time-keeping, for the cities are the markets, the buyers, and the sellers are obliged to regard their habits and their preferences.

If daylight saving really hurt the country or its inhabitants, of course its perpetuation would be out of the question. But it doesn't, as has been proved, now, for a good many years in a good many parts of the world—including this part.

A Newspaper Old but Still Growing. To express satisfaction over the completion of its new building, The Hartford Times added to its regular issue of Saturday a large and handsomely illustrated supplement, telling all about itself, and, incidentally, not a little history of its city and the State of Connecticut.

The building is in many ways a remarkable structure, one of the ways being that its architect has managed congruously with his plan to incorporate in its main façade the architectural material and features that once made the Madison Square Presbyterian Church in this city, better known as Dr. Parkhurst's church, such an admirable example of the work of Stanford White—one of the very best examples, indeed.

Of course, the new home of The Hartford Times does not look like that church, or any other, but still less does it look like a newspaper building as such buildings were almost everywhere until years comparatively recent. The "monumental" effect has been attained, but without sacrifice either of practicality or convenience as a centre of production.

The Hartford Times is one of the country's few really old newspapers, for it started as a weekly in 1817 and became a daily twenty-four years later. It has had, therefore, a continuous career of three years over a century, and the quality of that career is best demonstrated by the present influence and prosperity of the paper. Good newspapers rarely die young; the bad ones usually do.

Fighting for Power and Money. That bitter quarrels, with a rapid interchange of harsh accusations, have broken through the carefully smoothed surface of Christian Science ought to be, perhaps, a cause of sorrow outside of that strange organization as well as inside of it. The situation thus revealed, however, is likely to be a cause of mild satisfaction, rather than of grief, to people ordinarily sane and reasonable, for it is when the followers of Mrs. Eddy banish from their faces for a while the fixed smile that is the badge of their sect, and begin to talk about each other with really human frankness, that the uninitiate can get the clearest view of the cult, its personalities and their doings.

At present they offer the sorry and too familiar spectacle of heirs fighting among themselves for a great inheritance. Both power and money are in dispute, and no more than did Mrs. Eddy herself do her would-be legatees have any illusions as to the reality or the desirability of either. With regard to neither is there ever any chatter about "errors of mortal thought."

What the several groups of "Scientists" are saying about each other may not be true, but it all has a plausible sound, and it is excusable as well as convenient to assume in each case that both sides are right. That does happen, now and then.

Professor Adams's Views on Tax Revision.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My attention has been called to the fact that, in your issues of Nov. 30 and Dec. 1, you report me as predicting that the excess profits tax will not be repealed. This is a mistake. I hope and expect that the excess profits tax will be repealed.

What I did predict was that the income surtaxes and the most important sales taxes now collected—such as the taxes on the sale of tobacco, beverages, and the like—would not be repealed; and that if the sales tax were introduced it would thus add another tax to the progressive income tax and the more important sales or excise taxes now collected.

Many of the latter along with the excess profits tax should be repealed; and if they could be replaced by a general sales tax, the case for the latter would be very much stronger than it is. The argument for the sales tax would be even stronger still if it could be used as a complete substitute for the specific sales taxes which we now have and the income surtaxes, leaving as the dual basis of the Federal tax system the uniform tax on net income and a uniform tax on sales. This, as I have suggested elsewhere, represents a very debatable proposal, and from many standpoints an exceedingly attractive picture.

I fear, however, that it is only a picture; and that with the pressure for new appropriations the sales tax if adopted will come as an additional tax, added to the surtaxes, the specific sales or excise taxes now in force (or most of them), and, in addition, some new corporation tax designed to place upon corporations a tax equivalent to the surtaxes paid by individuals and in effect by partnerships.

T. S. ADAMS.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 9, 1920.

OLD MAN MEMORY.

One should make much mention of the mistletoe

With the hickory fire a-roaring up the flue;
Then post the stately butler—he's seen service many a year—
By the sideboard, where he'll know just what to do.

Have the guests pink-cheeked and hearty; they'll all arrive in sleighs,
Have the last one—Cousin Edward—drive a pair of spanking bays;

Put the vast and fragrant turkey in its place;
Then stop for just an instant all the noisy, happy whir
While the pastor pays attention to the grace.

Will you please excuse me, children, I'd been thinking back a while
For your poem, and I fell asleep just now—

HELP ON TAX RETURNS.

Officials Will Go About the Country to Explain the Forms.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—A county-to-county campaign by internal revenue officers to aid taxpayers in preparing their income tax returns was announced tonight by Commissioner Williams, to begin shortly after Jan. 1 and continue until March 15, the final date for filing statistics of income for the year 1920.

Revenue officers assigned to the work of assisting taxpayers, Commissioner Williams said, would be prepared to answer all questions relative to exemptions and income.

"The Bureau of Internal Revenue is urging taxpayers not to delay in filing their returns," the Commissioner said. "Merchants and business men are now casting up their accounts for the calendar year of 1920. With the facts and figures necessary to make a correct tax return fresh in their minds, the making out of forms should be an easier task."

Mr. Williams explained that tax requirements for the next payments will be the same as those for the year 1919, and he urged that all taxpayers begin at once to arrange for the filing of reports of their returns, as well as lay plans for the payments, the first of which will be on March 15.

PUSH ESCH'S CANDIDACY.

Republican House Members Urge His Claims to Commerce Board Post.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Republican members of the House have brought forward Representative John J. Esch of Wisconsin as a candidate for membership in the Interstate Commerce Commission and Representative George W. Edmonds of Pennsylvania for a post in the United States Shipping Board. In due time their candidacies will be brought to the attention of Senator Harding together with the statement that these two men by reason of the experience are especially qualified for places in the new Administration.

Mr. Esch, who is joint author of the Esch-Cummins Transportation act, was defeated in the primaries chiefly through the opposition of the La Follette faction and organized labor. He retires from Congress at the end of this session and his colleagues intend to recommend to President Harding his appointment to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. Edmonds was re-elected in November, and, while not desirous of leaving Congress, is willing to go on the Shipping Board, but will make no contest for the post. Members of Congress who have followed his course in the writing of shipping legislation say that his appointment would place on the board a man with full experience in shipping legislation and acquainted with the needs of American shipping.

HOPE FOR YALE AGREEMENT.

Special to the New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 12.—Efforts will be made by the Yale Corporation to agree upon a candidate for the university Presidency before the next formal meeting, which is scheduled for Jan. 8. Informal conferences will be held, and it is believed that the present deadlock can be broken. It has already lasted eight months.

While Secretary Anson Phelps Stokes has the lead in voting strength among corporation members, the Rev. Herbert Sloane Coffin of New York City has the support of the New York members. Dr. Hawkes of Columbia is favored by the non-secret society element among the alumni, while Dr. Fred Towsley Murphy of St. Louis, a distinguished surgeon, has been accumulating strength lately as a compromise candidate.

No vote was taken at the corporation meeting yesterday, and it is likely that none will be called for until an informal agreement has been reached.

AID FOR PARIS HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Robert Bacon Heads Committee to Provide New Building.

Formation of a committee to raise funds for a new building for the American Hospital in Paris was announced yesterday by Mrs. Robert Bacon, Chairman, who headed the group that made possible the American Ambulance Hospital in Paris during the war. She said the institution, now with a capacity of thirty-two beds, needed 100 and a building fund of $400,000.

Mrs. Bacon said the committee to assume charge of the plan included Henry P. Davison, Dr. Joseph A. Blake, Dr. Alexander Lambert, Dr. C. C. Burlingame, Dr. J. P. Hutchinson, Mrs. H. P. Whitney, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, Mrs. Junius A. Morgan, Mrs. Fairfield Osborn, Mrs. C. B. Alexander and Shaun Kelly.

CANADA BARS REFUGEES.

Minister Says Labor Conditions Forbid Relaxing Restrictions.

OTTAWA, Dec. 12.—Unsettled labor conditions and lack of employment in Canada, the Immigration Department declared in a statement today, prohibit any moderation of immigration restrictions in behalf of refugees from Central and Eastern Europe, now in Canadian ports seeking admission to the country. Unless present regulations prove adequate in handling the situation that has arisen, it was said, Parliament may be asked to take action.

Appeals from all sections of the country have been received by J. A. Calder, Minister of Immigration, within the last few days asking that immigrants now in port be allowed to enter. Friends have offered to provide bonds guaranteeing that the refugees will not become public charges during any specified period.

The department's statement declared that "any criticism to be made in this connection should be directed against those responsible for sending these people to Canada."

Efforts have been made recently, the statement said, to discourage immigration from the British Isles, "owing to approaching labor conditions in Canada." The individual money requirement recently was raised to $250. The department declared it "cannot see its way clear to relax its regulation in favor of immigrants from Europe, many of whom are without means and would be immediately seeking employment, thus aggravating a situation that is daily growing worse."

Dr. Withers Joins N. Y. University.

Chancellor Elmer Ellsworth Brown announced yesterday the acceptance by Dr. John Williams Withers, for the last four years Superintendent of Schools in St. Louis, of the deanship of the School of Pedagogy of New York University, in succession to Professor Thomas M. Balliet, who retired in June, 1919, becoming Professor Emeritus.

BOXING COMMISSION WILLING TO RESIGN

SUNDAY BASEBALL TO STAY

Issue Said to Have Been Practically Decided at Conference With Governor-elect.

To prevent the likelihood of the repeal of the Walker act, legalizing boxing, members of the State Boxing Commission have indicated a willingness to resign after Nathan L. Miller takes office as Governor on Jan. 1, according to information received yesterday by well informed local Republicans.

The commission, which was appointed last Summer by Governor Smith, was said to be certain to be reorganized unless the present members resign. If they should resign, it was said, the Governor-elect and the Republican Legislature might permit the Walker act to stand, although many of the up-State Republican leaders were said to favor the elimination of boxing, or the passage of a new law which would permit only amateur exhibitions.

The present members of the Boxing Commission are Joseph Johnson, Chairman, Edward W. Ditmars and Walter Hooke, with Charles A. White, son of the late "Charlie" White, well known referee, as Secretary. The members of the License Committee, which has an important function under the act, are Laurence McGuire, D. Walker Wear and Charles E. Walsh. It could not be learned whether the resignation of the members of this committee was also contemplated.

Carpentier Fight Here Not Likely.

A change in the control of the commission from Democrats to Republicans was said to make it no more likely that the Dempsey-Carpentier fight would be permitted in New York State. Governor-elect Miller's position is understood to be in favor of promoting sports, including boxing, but to be against the commercialization of sport. For that reason, it was said, the Governor-elect would undoubtedly disapprove any suggestion that the championship fight should be held within the State.

As a result of conferences between local Republican leaders and Governor-elect Miller last week, it was said to have been pretty definitely decided not to interfere with Sunday baseball. It was said to be probable that a tax on Sunday baseball would be imposed in the shape of a percentage of the price charged for each ticket. The Republican leaders also intend that this tax shall come out of the club owners instead out of the patrons of the game. They believe this can be accomplished because the Sunday baseball law is permissive and vests the power to legalize Sunday games with local authorities. The ordinance passed by the New York City Board of Aldermen stipulates that no greater charge shall be made for admission to baseball games on Sunday than on any other day.

Some of the up-State Republican leaders were said to have originally favored the repeal of both the boxing and Sunday baseball laws, but were reported to have receded somewhat from this position. The fact that the "sporting" element in New York and other large cities of the State generally supported Governor Smith at the last election and urged support for him on the ground that he had advocated both laws and that they were passed during his administration, caused considerable resentment among the up-State Republicans, who made little progress during the campaign with their argument that the laws were passed by a Republican Legislature.

Most of the other matters of interest to New York City, which will be taken up by Governor-elect Miller and the next Legislature, were said to be still undecided. These include the traction situation, upon which there was said to have been no decision, and the proposed reorganization of the Public Service Commission. The possibility of establishing one Public Service Commission for the entire State was said to be still under consideration.

Another matter which was said to be in abeyance was that of a legislative investigation of the city administration. Some of the New York City Republicans were reported to consider it of doubtful wisdom, both because of the fear that it might result in making Mayor Hylan a "martyr" in the public view and because, if the investigation should happen to eliminate Mayor Hylan as a candidate for re-election, Governor Smith might be drafted as a Democratic candidate and the Republican nominee would have to face the man whom the Republican leaders consider, in view of election results, as the best vote-getter in Tammany.

Governor-elect Miller, when seen yesterday at the Hotel St. Regis, declined to comment upon the result of his recent conferences with Republican leaders. "I have just been hearing things," he said. He added that he expected to remain here for several days before returning to his home in Syracuse.

CANAL GOVERNOR HERE.

Tolls for Year $6,200,000 Over Operating Cost, Harding Says.

Brig. Gen. Chester Harding, U. S. A., retired, Governor of the Panama Canal Zone, who arrived yesterday on the steamship Ulua to make his annual appearance before the Appropriations Committee of the House of Representatives, said the recent visit of President-elect Harding will be of benefit to the Canal, as he will have the advantage of personal knowledge of the subject. Canal tolls in September were more than $1,000,000, Governor Harding said, and for the last six months the average was about $915,000 a month. The surplus for the last fiscal year over operating expenses was $2,600,000.

Another passenger on the Ulua was Henry R. Carse, President of the Submarine Boat Company and the Transmarine Corporation of Newark, N. J., who said that between 50,000 and 75,000 tons of freight was tied up on the ship in Havana Harbor.

BEGRUDGE PRIZE TO WILSON

VIENNA, Dec. 12.—The Neue Freie Presse, commenting on the Nobel Prize award to President Wilson, says it is calculated to cause surprise.

Although Mr. Wilson's Fourteen Points originally meant much for the peace cause, it says, his subsequent laxity in executing his program and in giving way to "unheard-of oppression" apparently does not justify the award.

The Presse says it would have been more fitting to award the prize to Herbert Hoover, who has earned the gratitude of mankind as no one else has done.

PARTING OF FAMILIES FACED BY NEEDIEST

100 CASES OF DIRE WANT

CHARITIES UNEQUAL TO CALLS

The stories of 100 families who are in the deepest distress and want because of death, sickness and poverty were presented briefly yesterday in the ninth annual Christmas appeal by THE NEW YORK TIMES for New York's Hundred Neediest Cases.

The most common of sorrows among these families is that of the sudden death of the father during the year, leaving the mother and children destitute and frequently in broken health. Without help from the outside, the mothers will continue the struggle against Winter and starvation until, in the majority of cases, they break down and are sent to hospitals, while the children are taken from them.

With the generous help which is asked from readers of THE TIMES, these families will be saved from unnecessary hunger, cold and misery. The children of such families will still have their mothers and the mothers will still have their children.

Often the only way to save the lives of mothers and children who have been so unfortunate is to put them here and there in public institutions where they can best be cared for. It is a heartbreaking thing for them. It is the most expensive way of doing it for the community. The case is simple enough for any one who loves his own family. What better Christmas present can be found for children than their mother? What better Christmas present for the mother than her children?

Contributions Help in Many Ways.

Contributions from TIMES readers help in different ways, according to the straits of the different families. They will buy food, clothing, medicine, blankets, coal and other necessaries. But the biggest gift to most of them is that of their family life, their own home, the presence of their nearest and dearest—things that would be taken away from them for the preservation of their lives, except for the contributions which are to come for the Hundred Neediest Cases.

In a small town there are neighbors to know about and help families of this type. There poverty, hunger and want are not abstract terms, but are the lot of individuals who get direct contact and sympathy from other people. In the big cities, where neighborhood is a geographical expression and not a condition of personal acquaintance and good-will, things are very different. Those who are removed from contact with poverty and distress consequent upon it know that such things exist, but regard them in a vague, generalized way and fail to remember that they are terrible and crushing things for individuals.

The hundred narratives presented in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday are intended to translate the generalities in the minds of many into exact, vivid detail, by stating the facts of actual cases. Each family is now receiving some help from one of the four charitable organizations which is in charge of it. Such help is limited and not sufficient in itself to save the families from the big catastrophes which threaten it.

The reader is enabled to put himself in their position, to understand what their miseries have been and what further sorrows they may be spared. The reader can see exactly what his contribution will do to help any given family or individual. Every cent goes for the necessaries of life. Nothing is deducted for expenses of any kind. Whatever personal service is required is furnished by the four charitable organizations.

Readers Generous in Past Years.

During the past four years, TIMES readers have contributed so generously that, after the first hundred cases were provided for, another hundred or more families were assisted through the year's struggle with sickness and poverty. The hundred families and individuals, whose stories are presented, are little, if any, worse off than hundreds of others. They are selected as the "neediest," but the choice is not easily made from among the thousands of destitute in this city of nearly 6,000,000 people.

When enough contributions have come for one case, the additional money will go to others in like circumstances, except where specific directions are given by contributors.

The contributions for the Hundred Neediest Cases since the appeal was first made has been as folows:

1915	31,819.92
1919	106,967.14

Some of the typical cases of the hundred which were printed yesterday appear below. Contributions may be sent to THE NEW YORK TIMES or to the society named.

CASE. 3.

They sold his little shop when Jim died six months ago. That gave his wife and the four children $200, which paid for funeral expenses and left a little to live on. Mrs. Jim, whose vitality had been broken by the year's illness of her husband, left the children in charge of fourteen-year-old Edith and went to get work in a factory. She brings the bulky bundles home every evening and returns them the next day. With all her labors, however, she cannot make more than $10 a week. That is not enough, the Children's Society says, to let her keep her children with her. Mrs. Jim knows that what they say is true, but she is holding on to them with the tenacity of the cornered.

Father in Hospital, Mother Works.

When Hiram D. was taken away to the hospital with tuberculosis his wife, who had formerly been well taken care of by him, uttered never a word of complaint, but gathering her two boys and little girl to her, the oldest of whom is but 10, she told them that they must help each other get along until their father was well. She then moved them to an apartment where she accounted for half the rent by acting as janitress. During the long evenings she employed herself by cutting gold leaf. For months she kept this up with nobody knowing the extent of her needs. An increase in the rent finally brought her to the offices of the charity organization. She could not meet the added burden. The reports from the hospital are very hopeful. Next year Hiram will be back in his place as bread winner.

CASE 17.

Fighting Forefathers.

Their great-grandfather was killed in the Civil War, their English grandfather was not too old to give his life in the World War and their father fought in the American Expeditionary Forces. That is all that the three little Ware children can boast of. Today they stand alone, having been deserted by both their parents. Margaret, the oldest, is 8; Susan is 5, and the man of the family, Alden, is 4. All of them possess the fine spirit that comes from fighting forefathers. All of them show fire of resistance at the suggestion of separation. Before any thought can be given to finding a home for them they all need complete outfits of clothing. Alden insists that he needs tin soldiers more, but Margaret, who is wiser, speaks knowingly of woolen socks. It may be that good old St. Nick will bring them the things that sternly practical folk call unnecessary, together with the money that will provide for their necessities.

Total amount needed, $800.

Case reported by the State Charities Aid Association, 105 East Twenty-second Street. (Telephone Gramercy 1454.)

Collapses From Weakness.

Two days after her baby was born, Tina went to her job of office cleaning. She had to. There was nobody else to look after her three children. She managed to stick through until the work was done, but on the way home she collapsed. It was thus she came to the attention of the charity organization. Several months of illness followed. Nine-year-old Hal took care of her while seven-year-old Hedwig mothered the baby. Tina is not yet strong enough to resume her work.

Total amount needed, $300.

CASE 31.

Tired of Moving.

"Ain't I ever gonna have a real home, with a Christmas tree and a sled and skates and candy and everything?" It's hard to answer little Owen's question. He is only 8, but he has moved so many times he can't count them. Moving to Owen means more than moving to the ordinary child. It means changing the people he lives with. Owen was taken away from his parents when he was a baby because they didn't want him and didn't want each other. Ever since he has been traveling. Some day a real home will be opened to him. Then, maybe, he will have his wish granted. Just now he needs warm Winter clothing, a pair of shoes, new ones, he hopes, and extra milk to bring back the color to his cheeks which enforced traveling has removed.

Total amount needed, $350.

CASE 43.

Invalid Mother Needs Sons.

Any mother would be proud of three such sons as Duncan, Malcolm and James. Mrs. W. feels that the years she gave to their care were well spent even though it means that today she sits in her chair a helpless invalid. The home is neat and clean, plants growing in cigar boxes on her windowsill are tokens of her sons' care. Duncan is 15. In another year he will be able to do more than the odd jobs after school. He will become the breadwinner for the family. Malcolm, 13, will soon follow in his footsteps. There is a bright future ahead for this hardy little family provided they can be held together for another year.

CASE 88.

Prostrated Over Husband's Death.

They have nobody in the world but each other. Ethel is thirteen; her suffering has made age of little moment to her mother. Until the death of her invalid husband, Mrs. L. was able to hold on, hoping against hope, as she always did, that a miracle and her love would bring back the glow of health to the prostrated man. With his death, however, something snapped in her, and she took the place in the cot he made vacant. Mrs. L. is a good needlewoman; that is how she supported the sick man through his illness. When she is better she will be able to take care of herself and the girl. A weekly allowance of $7 is needed to help them over the hard spots until then.

No Money for Bread.

Fresh eggs and milk for the whole family were the doctor's orders when he examined Mrs. J. and her five children after Malcolm J. was removed to the sanatorium for the tuberculous. Mrs. J. looked at the doctor with a slow, pitiful smile. She nodded her head in agreement. Fearful lest the children would be removed to an institution, she did not tell him that there was no money in the house for even a loaf of bread. A neighbor reported them to the charity offices. It was then that their wretched plight was discovered. The children, all under 11, are weak and undernourished. They have no clothes with which to face the Winter's cold. With the care that he is getting Malcolm ought to be well before the end of next year. The thing that will most tend to hasten his recovery is the knowledge that his family is being taken care of during his absence.

Total amount needed, $500.

Describing the past effect of the annual appeal for the Hundred Neediest Cases, Director-General Bailey B. Burritt of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor said:

"A community movement which has had such a phenomenal growth as this, and which has become so fixed an annual community habit is deserving not only of generous words of praise, but of a careful examination on the part of public-spirited and community-minded citizens as to its deep and underlying significance. It is to this that the attention of thoughtful donors of 1920 would, it seems, be directed.

"During the eight years in which this annual Christmas appeal has been made, over 1,300 individuals, under the care of this organization, have benefitted from the liberality of Christmas givers to this fund. If the other associations whose families have also benefitted from the fund were included it would probably mean that the lives of some 4,000 people have been directly influenced.

"It (The Hundred Neediest Cases Appeal) has been the father of many a child during a critical period in the child's life. And it is now reaping some of the rewards that go with a fatherhood of this character. It has a record of boys completing their schooling and stepping out and accepting life's responsibilities. It can point with pride to girls who, through their character and their ability, have brought earnings to the family, as well as the joy and strength that go with independence of families through the support of its own members. It is full of records of proud mothers who have watched with fostering care the growth and development of these boys and these girls who have been not unmindful of the foster parent—'The Hundred Neediest Cases'—that has worked side by side with her in the task.

"This is a bit of its significance, when measured in terms of family life. This is the significance that, in my judgment, makes an appeal not only to the great and splendid emotional side of New York's philanthropic public, but that appeals as directly and effectively to the discriminating and intelligent person who likes to reason out his responsibility for others and act in the light of that."

Aid Comes From Every State.

The response to the appeal in past years has come from practically every State, from Canada and Cuba and, during the war, from France. The gifts from towns and cities near New York, from other big cities like Boston and Pittsburgh and from all Winter resorts frequented by New Yorkers have made up a substantial part of the total.

Many persons who were introduced to their opportunities for giving happiness to the saddest and most afflicted people of the city have remained actively interested in charitable work.

A further effect of the appeal in this way is stated as follows by Lawson Purdy, Secretary and General Director of the Charity Organization Society:

"Aside from the financial aid which THE TIMES appeal provides for so many families, its influence is directly or indirectly felt throughout the society.

"Every worker, feeling the current of interest behind her, is borne on to greater endeavors. Freed from the burden of raising funds to carry out her plans for these families, she can devote all her energy to restoring them more quickly to happiness and independence.

"Indirectly every family under the society's care feels this impulse in the more vigorous efforts which the workers are able to put to their problem.

"In comparison with the millions raised for charitable purposes during the last year, $100,000 seems a trifling amount. It is probable, however, that few drives have netted more in real relief and cheer than the $100,000 which THE TIMES raised last year.

"Year by year the amount raised and the public interest aroused are growing, until now the appeal is almost a national event, and its continuance means an ever-tightening bond between the rich and poor."

No aid is being received by any of the families in the Hundred Neediest Cases under the State Pension law.

Contributions are deductible from income tax returns.

Every cent goes to buy food, clothing and other necessaries, no administrative or clerical expenses being paid from the contributions.

EDMOND BLANC DIES IN NEUILLY, AT 59

FATHER LEFT $40,000,000

PARIS, Dec. 12.—Edmond Blanc, noted French sportsman, died at Neuilly today, at the age of 59 years. He was the owner of a famous racing stable and was seven times winner of the Grand Prix. His sister is the wife of Prince Roland Bonaparte.

The father of Edmond Blanc, the late François Blanc, may not unfairly be referred to as the greatest gambling house proprietor of the nineteenth century. Following his successful management of a gaming salon at Homburg, he in 1863 invested his gains in the purchase of the gambling concession at Monte Carlo from its then impoverished ruler, Charles III., obtaining control for a period of fifty years of the privileges that he developed into such a valuable property that at his death his fortune was estimated at $40,000,000.

Talk of a refusal of the Prince of Monaco to renew the concession ceased in 1913 when at the regal celebration of the golden jubilee of the gambling palace it was announced that the son, Edmond, had acquired the rights of his father, on somewhat less favorable terms, for another half-century.

The family history is as sensational as the methods by which the Blanc wealth was amassed. François Blanc, with his twin brother, Louis-Joseph, escaped a prison sentence by a mere technicality in 1837 as the result of one of the most remarkable swindles ever perpetrated, involving the bribery of the semaphore operators who flashed to the French provincial cities the stock market returns.

While later running his gambling house in Homburg, François married a chambermaid, Marie Hensel, who became the mother of the future Princess Constantine Radziwell, the late Charles Blanc, the late Princess Roland Bonaparte and Edmond Blanc. The Bonaparte marriage brought the Blancs into relationship with several royal houses, for the daughter of the Princess became the Princess George of Greece, and thus sister-in-law of the former King as well as of two Russian Grand Duchesses, as well as the niece of the then Empress Dowager of Russia, of Queen Alexandra and of the Dowager Queen of Denmark.

Edmond Blanc, who succeeded his father as the principal stockholder and genius of the principality of Monaco, for on his payroll were virtually all the officials of the State from the highest to the lowest, was a short, thick-set man, with a white mustache, who looked much older than his years. He entered the field of thoroughbred horse racing in France and established a stable second to none in the history of the turf. Yet, in spite of numerous racing victories, he was not made a member of the Paris Jockey Club. The shadows over the Blanc name continued too dark. Upon his attempt to enter the Chamber of Deputies some twenty years ago the National Legislature invalidated his election after exposing wholesale corruption in his campaign.

In 1890 Edmond Blanc married a former actress in the small Paris vaudeville theatres, the daughter of a carpenter named Marot. Her first husband, one Eugene Thomas, also a carpenter, was sent to prison for a year for his part in the communistic insurrection. His wife finally succeeded in having this earlier union dissolved.

CROWD SEES FIRE RESCUES.

Spectacular rescues by police and citizens thrilled a large crowd yesterday when fire swept the three-story brick office and dwelling at 43 West 126th Street, occupied by Joseph Cocker, an architect, and his family.

Mrs. Barbara Gannon, 43, a sister of Mrs. Cocker, was overcome by smoke in a front room on the third floor, from which she was rescued by Patrolmen Jerry Norcott and James Gorty. The policemen, who had reached the roof from an adjoining house, lowered a ladder down the front of the building and effected the rescue. Eleanor Cocker, 17, a daughter of the architect, also escaped by the ladder.

Mrs. Cocker, Joseph Cocker, 21, and Dorothy Cocker, 19, were slightly burned about the hands or face in descending a rear stairway from the second floor to the basement. They were treated by an ambulance surgeon. The damage to the house and contents was estimated at $7,000.

SUES TO FIX LOSS ON SUGAR.

Franklin Company Holds That Sale Contracts Were Repudiated.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 12.—Whether the Franklin Sugar Refining Company, a subsidiary of the American Sugar Refining Company, or forty-six wholesalers, grocers and confectioners in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, will bear losses approximating $10,000,000 due to the market slump in sugar prices, is to be determined by a test suit which has been brought in the Court of Common Pleas here.

The Franklin Sugar Refining Company has brought suit for $93,534 to cover losses incurred, it holds, by the repudiation of contracts for the delivery of 2,325 barrels of refined sugar to Reeves, Parvin & Co. This firm does a large wholesale grocery business here, with branch houses in Wilmington, Del., and Huntingdon, Pa.

Forty-five other wholesalers in this section who are supplied with sugar by the Franklin Company are interested in the matter, and will act as a unit in contesting the suit, Francis B. Reeves Jr., of the firm of Reeves, Parvin & Co., said tonight. Owen J. Roberts and other attorneys have been retained by the wholesalers to defend them against the claims.

The refiners and wholesalers tell of enormous losses that were brought about by the decline in the sugar market. Last June and July refined sugar was selling at 22 cents a pound, now it is 8¾ cents.

HANNENBERGS ARE OUSTED.

PASSAIC, N. J., Dec. 12.—Announcement of the expulsion of Mr. and Mrs. Marinus Hannenberg, parents of Miss Trina Hannenberg, 26 years old, who disappeared simultaneously with the Rev. Cornelius Densel, former pastor, on Nov. 12, was made at the morning service at the First Netherlands Reformed Church here today. The announcement was made at the close of the service by John Rose, Presiding Elder, who said:

"The Consistory at a recent meeting unanimously decided to remove the names of Mr. and Mrs. Marinus Hannenberg from the books of the church. You all know the reason. I need not explain."

Asked the exact reason afterward, Mr. Rose said he and the other members of the consistory felt that the parents of Miss Hannenberg had known of her alleged relations with the former pastor, and that they should have notified the consistory so that a scandal might have been averted.

Elder Rose also announced that Trina Hannenberg's sister, Lena, who recently married Jacob Cooper of Paterson had been placed on probation. "Lena is a nice girl," the Elder said when asked why her case received different treatment from that of her parents. Trina Hannenberg has already been expelled as a church member.

LEWIS'S BANK IS CLOSED.

Georgia Bank Department Takes It Over Immediately After Funeral.

MONTEZUMA, Ga., Dec. 12.—Immediately after the funeral today of former Representative Elijah B. Lewis, who shot and killed himself last Friday, the bank of the Lewis Banking Company, of which he was President, was placed in the hands of the State Banking Department and announcement made by the bank's Directors that the institution would not open for business tomorrow.

The Directors in their announcement said that liquidation through the State Banking Department was decided upon in the interest of the creditors. The bank's last statement showed deposits of $886,000, a capital of $100,000 and a surplus of $140,000. The Directors explained that the bank was unable to meet its obligations because of heavy loans on farm lands, combined with the slump in the cotton market, a poor cotton crop in this section and failure of the peach crop.

The First National Bank of Montezuma, of which Lewis also was President, is in good condition and will reopen tomorrow as usual, according to a statement by Chief Examiner J. F. Pole of the Sixth Federal Reserve District.

HEARN MANSION DESTROYED

Special to the New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Dec. 12.—The house formerly owned by Arthur Hearn of New York City, and sold by his widow, who married Domicio da Gama, former Brazilian Minister, to three New Yorkers, was destroyed by fire tonight. The house, one of the show places of this vicinity, was valued at $100,000.

George Darby, who reported the fire, said that a short time previously he had seen two men running away, and the police believe the fire may have been of incendiary origin. The house, inclosed by a brick wall, stood, with a casino and a garage on the edge of a twenty-acre estate. The place is unoccupied, and the firemen had to break down the iron gates to get to the blaze. The fire started on the front floor, and the house, a frame structure with a slate roof, was soon enveloped in flames. At 11 o'clock the firemen were still fighting the blaze.

Observe Tercentenary of Landing From the Mayflower.

The tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers was observed by about 200 prominent Jews at a meeting of the Judaeans at the Hotel Pennsylvania last night. The speakers were W. H. P. Faunce, President of Brown University, and Oscar S. Straus, past President of the American Jewish Historical Society, in conjunction with which body the meeting was held. Judge Samson Lachman presided.

Mr. Faunce said that he read with horror a book with the "heartless" title of "The Cause of the World's Unrest," and declared that the fifteen million persons of Pilgrim and Puritan ancestry as a whole, "reject as a pure fabrication" statements in that book and in books like it.

OLIVE SCHREINER, BRITISH AUTHOR, DIES

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Olive Schreiner (Mrs. S. C. Cronwright Schreiner), the author, is dead.

More than a generation ago "The Story of an African Farm" created a sensation in England and set its readers to wondering whom "Ralph Iron" might be. No one supposed that a work of such maturity, power and assured simplicity of style could possibly have been written by a girl of 19. Its author, Olive Schreiner, the daughter of the Rev. G. Schreiner, a missionary, was born in Basutoland, and it was to South Africa that she turned for most of her literary inspiration, conditions there sharing the main place in her thoughts with the lot of woman throughout history.

Her feministic views were early acquired, but owing to the tragedy of a burned manuscript did not see the light of publication until 1911, and then they were but incompletely embodied in "Woman and Labor," a work that had a decided influence in the campaigns for equal suffrage in England and America.

Although her early fame was not quite sustained by later writings, yet all her books revealed the same striking qualities, the effects achieved with clear, simple English and frequent use of allegory. "Trooper Peter Halket of Mashonaland" was a terrific arraignment of the Rhodesian policy. Other works were "Dreams," "Dream Life" and "An English South African's View of the Situation." After her marriage in 1894 she retained her surname.

GET $10,000 IN FURS AFTER ALARM RINGS

POLICEMAN TAKES GUNMAN

Follows Him in East Side Apartment and Clubs Him Down—Longacre Grocer Held Up.

Burglars braved the alarm system of the Holmes Electric Protective Association early yesterday morning, broke into the store of the Alaska Fur and Trading Company, at 41 Great Jones Street, and escaped ten minutes later with a limousine full of stolen furs before the Holmes operatives could arrive, or before policemen could be sent in response to the alarm. Exact information of the value of the furs could not be obtained at Police Headquarters, but it was admitted that it was between $10,000 and $25,000. The men jimmied open the front door.

The Alaska Fur and Trading Company carries a valuable stock, and an attempt was made to force a door in the basement a week ago. The burglars were driven away by the arrival of two Holmes watchmen.

The robbery of a grocer near Longacre Square by two armed men, the capture of a gunman after an attempted robbery in an east side apartment house, and further robberies by the masked auto bandits who have robbed and terrorized nearby New Jersey towns recently, were several of the Sunday crimes reported to the police yesterday.

Arnold Degner, grocer, at Seventh avenue and Fifty-fourth Street, who had his shop open at 5:30 yesterday morning because he caters to an all-night trade in this part of the theatrical district, was robbed of $563 and a check for $75. Degner was in his cash booth and his errand boy had gone to the cellar when two masked men entered and pointed revolvers at him.

"Come out of that cage," ordered one of the gunmen, who added: "If you make any noise I will be compelled to blow the heart out right out of you." The thieves got the money quickly and fled north on Seventh Avenue to Fifty-ninth Street, where they boarded an eastbound car. An automobile squad of detectives from the West Forty-seventh Street Station went in pursuit soon afterward, and stopped and searched a number of cars, but made no arrests. Degner said he believed he knew one of the masked men.

Policeman Heemsath heard two shots in the apartment house, 300 East Eighty-ninth Street, yesterday morning, and met Edward Curley, a newspaper deliverer of 1,582 First Avenue, running to the street. Curley said the shots were fired at him by a robber, who attempted to hold him up. When Heemsath got into the corridor another shot came from above, but he kept after the gunman and finally felled him senseless with his club. When the prisoner recovered, Heemsath locked him up at the Eighty-eighth Street Station on charges of felonious assault, attempted robbery and violation of the Sullivan law. The accused said he was Ray Courtney, 27, a clerk of 323 Eighth Avenue.

Six masked auto bandits, believed to be the same gang that has committed many robberies in Bergen County within ten days, invaded the Palisades Community Club at Hackensack yesterday morning, and took $150 in cash and jewelry from ten of the members. An abandoned car, thought to be the one in which the thieves escaped, was found by the police near the Edgewater Ferry, at the North River. In it was a blackjack.

The police of Millburn arrested and held three men yesterday, on the charge of stealing an automobile from Richard Cevwan, a paper manufacturer at Whippany, N. J. His car was stolen in Broad Street Newark. Burglars forced an entrance to the garage of Robert Wiss, a manufacturer, at 34 Littleton Avenue, Newark, and stole his $4,000 car. Three hours later the West Orange police found the car, abandoned, on the Northfield Road. In it was a safe that had been stolen from the National Grocery Store Company, at Newark.

The police said the three prisoners arrested at Millburn had been identified by the Postmaster of Westfield and M. D. Tuttle, brother of ex-Congressman Tuttle, as the three men who had robbed them on Tuesday of $140 after a holdup on the Springfield Road at Westfield.

Railway detectives at Metuchen, N. J., reported robberies of freight cars, after they had found a quantity of goods near the tracks of the Pennsylvania station, bearing labels of shipments to Western points.

Four arraigned in the Morrisania Court yesterday on charges of stealing the auto of Herman Eiche of 10 East 116th Street were held in $2,500 bail each by Magistrate Simpson for examination tomorrow. The prisoners said they were Harry Rega, 279 East 151st Street; Charles Russo, 572 Southern Boulevard; Anthony Paoluccio, New Brighton, S. I., and Frank Eacobacci, 801 East 149th Street, Bronx. Eiche said the car was taken from the garage at 525 East 152d Street, the Bronx. Policeman Hunt, who arrested them, said he had seen the four removing the auto.

Andrew Grosso, proprietor of a restaurant at 92 Vesey Street, was held for General Sessions in $1,000 bail in the Tombs Court yesterday on a charge of alleged violation of the gambling laws. Detective O'Connor told the Magistrate he had found nearly 100 policy slips and a list of prize drawings in a lottery in a cigar box in the restaurant. Grosso denied the charge and said the box and its contents belonged to the man from whom he had recently purchased the restaurant.

Louis Gerstein told the police he had been robbed of $100 in his store at 568 West 126th Street. A negro and a white man threatened him, he said, demanded his pocketbook, and when he handed it over they counted out the amount and returned the remainder.

Joseph Minero, 30 years old, of 1,746 Avenue Z, was held in $5,000 bail in the Coney Island Court yesterday on a charge of robbery. Maurice Weinberg, a grocer at 6,302 New Utrecht Avenue, Brooklyn, told Magistrate O'Neill that the prisoner was one of two armed men who had robbed him of $130 on Saturday night.

Anthony De Leo, who asserts he is an "aviator," arrested with two others on a charge of robbery yesterday in the barber shop and theatre ticket office at 1,568 Broadway, told the police he had inherited $30,000 from his father and had it "salted away." The police said De Leo had admitted he had been arrested in August and November on charges of burglary.

John Price, a laborer, of 410 Water Street, was robbed last night of all the money he had, 10 cents, he told the police, after two men had beaten him at Cumberland Street and Park Avenue, Brooklyn. Detective Hertig and Policeman Harron caught the assailants, who said they were William Lynch and William O'Connor of 115 Vanderbilt Avenue. They were held in bail of $5,000 each in the Gates Avenue Court.

Woman Dies by Inhaling Gas.

Leaving a note requesting that she be cremated, as her mother had been, Miss Anna Blatt, 32 years old, ended her life by inhaling gas at her home, 370 Park Avenue, West Hoboken, last night. She was found in bed with a gas tube in her mouth, the police say. The motive for the suicide was not learned.

BROOKLYN BROKER WOOED MISS TEVIS

SHE CAST OFF ALL SUITORS

Several days before Miss Betsy Tevis committed suicide at the home of her sister, Mrs. Joseph T. Talbert at 110 East Fifty-fourth Street, she started telling her friends, both men and women, of her infatuation for a young man whom she had met at a tea dance in the Hotel Plaza. She told some of her suitors that it would be useless to pay court any more because she had made up her mind to accept any proffer of marriage from her new acquaintance.

It was reported yesterday that Miss Tevis had been engaged for a month to a Brooklyn man employed by a broker in Broad Street, but some of her friends denied this. They said that the man whose name was mentioned was merely an old friend of the Talberts and that, while he was seen frequently in the company of Miss Tevis, he had not proposed marriage, so far as they knew. This man could not be reached last night.

According to the story, this broker met Miss Tevis through his employer, who was also an old friend of the family and had known the late Joseph T. Talbert while he was active in the National City Bank. He called frequently at the house in East Fifty-fourth Street and accompanied Miss Tevis and her friends to several parties.

Miss Tevis and this broker met one afternoon for tea at Murray's restaurant in West Forty-second Street, and she is reported to have told him then of her new friend, whom she had met a few days before at the tea dance at the Plaza and who had been a visitor at her sister's house. She told the broker that if he was thinking of asking her to marry him he was too late, because she had made up her mind to accept any proffer of marriage that might be made by her newly found acquaintance from New Jersey.

Friends of Miss Tevis, one of whom saw her on Wesdesday night, said that she told the same story to all who, she thought, might be visiting her with the intention of marriage, and to others of her women intimates. This information also was conveyed to an ex-army aviator from Roselle, N. J., who was thought by some of Miss Tevis's friends to have already won her consent to marriage.

Not more than an hour before Miss Tevis shot herself this broker telephoned to the house, and Miss Tevis seemed at that time to be in low spirits. She said that she had a headache and was very much disappointed that she had not heard from the Plaza tea dance acquaintance since the preceding Sunday. The broker is reported to have said:

"Oh, well, I guess you will recover all right. Just take some aspirin and get to bed and have a good sleep."

After this telephone call came the final message, following which Miss Tevis walked to her room and shot herself. This was about 8 o'clock on Thursday night, some time after the broker had telephoned.

It is admitted by intimates of the young man, who seemed to have made such a favorable impression upon the girl, that he did call her some time before she committed suicide—the first call since he had called on her at her sister's home five days before. They denied that he had met her more than twice to their knowledge—once in a public place and later in the same day at her sister's home.

They denied also that the young man had attempted to sway the girl's affections, and declared that he had no intention of marrying her and had never even given Miss Tevis the impression that he was thinking of marriage. This young man, whose father is a stockholder in breweries, in the Hudson Trust Company and owns several valuable saloon and hotel sites in Manhattan, would not receive visitors yesterday at his home, nor would any of his friends or relatives admit that he was at home.

It is admitted by friends of the saloon man's son that he might have used his middle name in meeting new acquaintances and these friends refer to some of the incidents of his life as "escapades." But they declare that he is absolutely blameless. He is reported to be only 21 years old and to have attended several schools.

Mrs. Talbert left early yesterday for Kentucky with the body of her sister, and it was not known at her house at 110 East Fifty-fourth Street when she would return.

CONSTANTINE WANTS MISSION SENT HERE

TO BE A DEMOCRATIC KING

CABINET IS GOING TO RESIGN

Prediction Is That Some Constantinists May Exile Themselves to Placate the Allies.

LUCERNE, Dec. 12 (Associated Press).—Preparations have been virtually completed for the departure of Constantine and his family for Venice Tuesday on the first stage of their journey to Athens. The royal baggage, consisting of 220 heavy trunks and boxes, was taken to the railroad station this morning. The special car in which the royal party will travel will be attached to the regular train. At first it was thought that only ordinary accommodations could be obtained.

Constantine and his family posed today for a group of newspaper photographs. It was said that these are the last to be taken in Switzerland.

The members of Constantine's household are still bewildered by the unexpected refusal of the Greek Government to allow Professor Georgios Streit and M. Papparagopoulo, advisers to Constantine, to return to Greece. Today they expressed wonder as to how the situation would end, and whether other followers of Constantine now in Greece would be exiled.

It is freely predicted among the Greeks here that M. Gounaris and other Greek statesmen of the former Constantine régime may find it advisable to leave Greece voluntarily in the interest of amicable relations between Greece and the allied nations immediately after Constantine reaches Athens.

Constantine and his consort, Sophia, according to members of their household, are expected to take a leading part in urging reforms in Greece. It is said that an endeavor will be made by them to be more democratic than they were before they were sent into exile. Constantine, it is said, will probably urge legislation for improved labor conditions, agricultural reforms and a betterment of the situation of the poor, while Sophia hopes to head a movement for woman suffrage.

Constantine has asked the Greek Government to send missions to the United States, Great Britain and France to place the Greek situation in the right light before the world. It is said that he still hopes that the Allies will continue to give financial support to the Greek army in Angora. One of his purposes in proposing to go to the front immediately is declared to be an endeavor to show the Allies his personal influence with the army.

It is not unlikely, according to Greek newspaper men here, that the Athenian press will urge the Government to try to float a loan in the United States, and that to this end one of the leading Greek financiers will be sent to America to sound out the bankers there.

LUCERNE, Dec. 11.—At last Constantine has received the summons for which he has been so eagerly waiting. It came in a long cable from Athens signed by Premier Rhallis, containing details of the result of the plebiscite, followed by this invitation: "In view of this enthusiastic general mandate which the Greek people have given you, there devolves upon the Government the happy duty of submitting to your Majesty a petition to return to your country and resume the exercise of your high functions."

ATHENS, Dec. 12 (Associated Press)—Athens today was flying the flags of all nations. The final details for the reception of Constantine and his family have been arranged. The royal family will leave Venice Wednesday on board the Greek cruiser Averoff, which will be met Sunday off the Island of Milo by Prince George. Constantine, it is expected, will arrive in Athens Sunday afternoon and, escorted by cavalry, in an automobile or a chariot, will proceed to the old palace, from the balcony of which he will read a message to the people.

The Cabinet will resign and a new one, which also possibly will be headed by M. Rhallis, will be named.

M. de Billy and Earl Granville, respectively the French and British Ministers, have not yet received instructions to leave Athens.

It is said to be among the plans to borrow money in the United States to keep Constantine on the throne.

Princess Anastasia (formerly Mrs. William B. Leeds of New York) has moved from the Tatoi Palace to the palace of Prince Nicholas in the centre of Athens.

The newspapers of Athens are occupied with articles concerning the financial crisis, and in this connection frequently mention the name of Princess Anastasia.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—The Temps in an editorial today regarding the Near Eastern situation says:

"We must achieve peace in the Near East. If peace cannot be made without modifying the Sèvres Treaty, then let us modify it immediately. Constantine, excommunicated by the Entente Governments, is returning to Athens in spite of them.

"Great Britain and Italy, one of them holding Constantinople and Cyprus and the other occupying Rhodes, are awaiting developments with confidence as to the future. France, however, is not privileged to wait under cover. Alone, engaged in war against the Turks, her millions being spent and her soldiers being killed, she must find a solution without delay."

MILAN, Dec. 12.—The Italian Government has issued instructions for troops along the route to render royal honors when Constantine and his family pass through Italy.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 11.—As a result of anti-Constantine demonstrations, which have culminated in disturbances, the Allied police have forbidden the playing of the Venizelist anthem in theatres and other public places in Constantinople. Severe penalties are provided for infractions of the order.

SOVIET SPEAKS FOR GREECE.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The Russian Soviet Government has suddenly taken part in the Greek troubles by sending a strong note of protest to Great Britain, France and Italy against their "brutal interference in the affairs of the Hellenic people," according to a Moscow dispatch to The Daily Herald.

The Soviet does not threaten any action on behalf of Greece, but it predicts that the Greek laboring masses "will soon free themselves from the unsolicited tutorship of imperialist powers."

M. Tchitcherin, the Bolshevist Foreign Minister, in a note, as quoted by The Herald, says the Soviet Government has learned that Great Britain, France and Italy have warned the Hellenic Government that in the event of the restoration of Constantine they will make reprisals against Greece, presumably in the shape of a diplomatic boycott, an economic blockade, or other punitive measures.

"The Soviet has no sympathy with monarchies or kings," Tchitcherin is reported as saying, "but it has a good deal with a people which, like its own, has resolved, though in an inadequate manner, against the policy of war for conquest imposed upon it by an imperialist régime with the aid of foreign bayonets."

Talk by Wireless Phone From London to Geneva

GENEVA, Dec. 12.—Wireless telephone messages from England were plainly heard in Geneva today, when William Marconi gave a demonstration.

The newspaper correspondents attending the Assembly of the League of Nations were especially invited to the demonstration, and understood quite clearly messages spoken by Lord Burnham and Lord Riddell from Chelmsford, County Essex, England, 500 miles away.

JAPANESE STUDENTS PROTEST TO WORLD

Urge American People to "Reflect on Their Course" Regarding Anti-Alien Law.

TOKIO, Dec. 12.—A large mass meeting of students, members of the Students League of Japan, was held here today in Uyeno Park. A resolution protesting to the world in the name of "justice and humanity" against the anti-Japanese law in California was passed. The resolution called on the American people to "reflect on their course."

The speakers, who were chiefly students and journalists, declared that while the world recognized Japan as a great power, America treated the Japanese as an inferior race.

A similar demonstration to that of today was held yesterday. The object of the meetings was to arouse public opinion. Thousands of handbills announcing the demonstrations were distributed by persons in automobiles.

TOKIO, Nov. 1 (Correspondence of Associated Press)—Resolutions "welcoming" a cancellation of the Gentleman's Agreement between Japan and the United States, provided that some sort of a substitute could be agreed upon free from discrimination, were adopted at a joint meeting today of the Japanese Peace Society and the American Peace Society. This action was the result of three meetings of the two societies.

It was asserted in the resolutions that, in the opinion of the two societies, Japan had kept the Gentleman's Agreement both in spirit and in letter.

The resolution declared also that the two societies would welcome the adoption of any measures by internal legislation in the United States or by convention that would promote the standard of living and social condition of Japanese in the United States so as to prepare them for assimilation as citizens of the American commonwealth. Confidence was expressed that any conditions that might arise between the two countries would in the end be settled on a satisfactory basis of humanity, reason and justice.

The Japanese Peace Society and the American Peace Society were established for the purpose of promoting friendship and peace between Japan and the United States.

JAPAN WANTS BRITAIN TO DROP SUPPORT OF US

Copyright, 1920 by The Chicago Tribune Co.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The Central News Agency carries a dispatch from Tokio today which states that Baron Sakamoto advocates a renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, but insists upon deletion of the cause which exempts Great Britain from supporting Japan in case of trouble with America.

A leading official in the British Foreign Office stated today that this demand had not been made as yet, but said it had been hinted at and considered. Should the demand be made formally, he said, it would result in refusal by Great Britain to renew the alliance.

In this connection The Daily Herald said editorially today that Great Britain "is not perturbed over the American naval program, but secretly welcomes it as an asset in the coming struggle between the East and the West in which she is sure to be on the side of America."

SUES WOMEN FOR SLANDER.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Dec. 12.—Seven suits for $10,000 each have been started in the Supreme Court by Mrs. Dora Schwartz of this city against seven members of the Poughkeepsie Hebrew Ladies' Aid Society for slander. The suits are the outcome of a mass meeting held in Columbus Institute after the suicide of Chewa Levine Louwisch, bride of the now missing Rabbi Joseph Louwisch, former head of the Hebrew school.

Mrs. Schwartz, at whose home the bride once stayed, charges that at this meeting the defendants referred to her as a murderess. Summonses were served upon each of the defendants on Saturday night. John E. Mack, who has been counsel for Dr. Louwisch, is the attorney for the complainant.

The defendants are Ida Lippman, Eva Prutinosky, Elsie Stein, Mary Taud, Ida Levine, Hode Gellert and Jennie Worona.

Mrs. Louwisch stayed for several days at the home of Mrs. Schwartz before the time when Dr. Louwisch had his marriage annulled, charging free love and Bolshevistic beliefs on the bride's part.

OBJECTS TO LEAGUE ARMY.

Soviet Sends Protest to Poland—Says Also Zeligouski Is Aided.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Soviet Russia protests against the sending of troops of the "so-called League of Nations" to Vilna, declaring that it will serve only to prepare a new attack upon Russia, according to a Riga dispatch to The Daily Herald.

The protest, says the dispatch, is contained in a note from Adolph Joffe, the Russian peace delegate, to M. Dombski, who represented Poland in the peace negotiations, in which it is stated that the Soviet possesses "concrete and incontestable evidence" that Poland is furnishing men and munitions to General Zeligouski, "who otherwise would not be able to retain Vilna."

M. Joffe's note adds that parts of the armies of General Balakovitch and General Petiura have arrived in Vilna, creating a grave menace to the neighboring Soviets, and holds Poland responsible for Zeligouski's actions.

BIG POWERS SWAY WORLD COURT PLAN

POLES TO CONTROL DANZIG

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Dec. 12 (By Telephone to Paris).—Plans for the Court of International Jurisdiction have been completed by Commission No. 3 of the League of Nations Assembly, and will be presented to the Assembly early this week. The report says:

"The proposal for compulsory jurisdiction in international relations is not accepted. It is urged that such a principle could not possibly obtain unanimous support among all the members."

The proposal of the International Labor Office that there be established a separate court to deal with labor questions is rejected. The report provides that the jurisdiction of cases should be based on agreement between the parties in special conventions for given cases or general conventions for cases falling under general groups. It is left for the separate nations to decide whether any given case embraces issues of national independence or national honor.

May Extend Jurisdiction by Treaty.

The committee decided that members may enter into treaties, if they wish, giving to the court complete jurisdiction if any or all or the cases fall under the following five divisions: First, interpretation of treaties; second, any question of international law; third, the existence of any fact which if established would constitute a breach of international obligations; fourth, the nature or extent of reparations to be made for a breach of international obligation; fifth, the interpretation of a sentence passed by the court.

Two-thirds of the delegations represented here want the court to have the power of compulsory jurisdiction. Great Britain and Japan, as mentioned in a previous dispatch, have been most ardent opponents of this decision. In the commission representatives of Britain and Japan pointed out that the world court plan must receive a unanimous vote. They could not vote for compulsory jurisdiction, and therefore if the world court was to be established by this Assembly, it must be without compulsory jurisdiction.

The case provided a most striking illustration of the effect of the unanimity rule. It is generally admitted that the court as it will be constituted will be little more than an abritration tribunal, although the machinery will be such that it could be changed into a court having compulsory jurisdiction whenever the League wishes. In this respect it will differ from The Hague court.

Polish Army Control of Danzig.

Poland seems to have gained her purpose of having military control of Danzig. This has long been opposed by the Germans, who constitute a majority of the population of Danzig, and who, under the provisions for the government of the free city, are in control. The Council of the League announced today a decision that Poland seems to be the country best suited to secure the military defense of Danzig, and that the miliary advisers were drawing up plans to put that decision into effect. This can mean nothing else than that the Poles will have military forces in Danzig.

It will be recalled that when the Poles were fighting the Bolsheviki the pro-German administration of Danzig held up there munitions which the French were sending to Warsaw. Now it goes without saying that such an affair will not happen a second time.

The decision to let the Poles have the military protection of the port of Danzig creates an interesting situation. The city is governed by a council, a majority of which is composed of Germans, but at the same time it will be under the military control of Poland. Paderewski has been making a fight for this for six months, basing it on the ground that the treaty intended to give Poland the use of the port of Danzig and that Poland was not assured of that right as long as the city was in the hands of a German council. The League Council refused Paderewski's request at a meeting held last month but he has gone on until he has won his case.

The Poles will have a military force in Danzig for the theoretical purpose of protection, but it may be taken for granted that they will not allow a repetition of what the Polish Government regards as abuse of privileges under the treaty.

The Council today began a study of what sort of machinery to set up to carry out the provisions of Article CCXIII. of the Treaty, which gives the right to investigate to what extent Germany is observing her disarmament obligations under the treaty.

Tacna-Arica Crisis Continues.

GENEVA, Dec. 12 (Associated Press).—The Tacna-Arica case, which in the last forty-eight hours has developed a serious crisis in the League of Nations Assembly, was the subject of a long discussion at a special meeting of the bureau of the Assembly this afternoon. The Council of the League also discussed the recent developments caused by a renewal of the Bolivian demand for a hearing on the question by the present Assembly.

Leaders of both the Assembly and the Council have agreed that the case must not, if possible, be permitted to come before the present session. Bolivia is being urged to accept a compromise by referring the case to a special commission, which would report at the next meeting of the Assembly.

The representatives of Bolivia and Chile are maintaining silence, but it is learned that Chile probably would accept the proposal.

After the meeting of the Council, Paul Hymans told The Associated Press that everything was being done to induce both countries to pospone the case. He said it was hoped they would agree with the view of the great majority of the delegates that the case cannot be heard at this session. He did not believe that either country would withdraw from the Assembly, and declared reports to this effect to be premature.

Social Tension Over Dispute.

An indication of the feeling over the case is to be found in the fact that the representatives of Peru and Bolivia failed to attend a formal dinner given by the Chilean delegation last night in honor of the South and Central American States. Bolivia reiterates her contention that Tacna-Arica is her only outlet to the sea. The case is complicated, according to the delegates, by the discovery of valuable deposits of nitrates in the disputed territory.

The Assembly is deeply concerned over the situation, the seriousness of which there is no effort to conceal.

The fifth week of the Assembly is expected to begin with a big burst of speed in an effort to clear up the business and permit the delegates getting away before next Sunday. The debates on almost every question have been drawn out far beyond anticipations, but with the approach of two sessions each day, it is hoped that time will be found for all the delegates to deliver the speeches which have been tucked away in their pockets.

While the Assembly thus far has weathered its most critical phases, there is a feeling that the last week may develop a very dangerous situation.

One in Every 159 Works for Government; Commission Doubts Return to Pre-War Status

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—One person out of every 159 in the entire country was on the Government civil service payroll last July 31, the Civil Service Commission declared tonight in its annual report. The commission adds that of those estimated by the census as employed in gainful occupations in the country 1 in every 68 was a Government worker.

The total number of civil service employes last July, the commission says, was 691,116 and the Government was using them in approximately 1,700 different kinds and grades of work.

There were almost a million Government employes at the height of the World War, the commission asserts, and adds that pre-war figures of some 480,000 in 1916 would probably never be reached again. The commission declares that an "all rosy picture cannot be painted" of the Government's personnel situation.

A partial tabulation of the great army of Government employes fixes the average age at 28.4 years and the average salary at $1,176 a year, exclusive of the $240 yearly bonus which many of the employes receive. Due to the greater proportion of men in high or technical posts, the commission placed the average salary of men workers at $1,220 and of women at $1,047.

The commission's recommendation for placing all Postmasters under civil service is renewed. The President's order to this effect in 1917 has been supported by the public by "business men and others," the commission asserts. The order, which is still in effect, can be made permanent only by act of Congress.

M'CORMICK TO SEE A LEAGUE MEETING

FIRM IN 'BITTER-END' STAND

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Dec. 12 (by telephone to Paris).—United States Senator Medill McCormick of Illinois, a personal friend of President-elect Harding, arrived in Geneva at 1 o'clock this afternoon to study the assembly of the League of Nations. He will leave at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. His twenty-four hour study will form the basis of advice which he will go back to give to his colleagues as to what they should do because of what he saw the assembly do here.

The assembly was not in session today. However, Senator McCormick will have an opportunity to see it at work tomorrow morning for at least two and a half hours, if he regards it as worth while to miss his luncheon before taking his train for Vienna, where he will spend another twenty-four hours studying economic and political conditions in Austria.

Senator McCormick called on the French delegation today and saw M. Hanotaux. Later he saw A. J. Balfour, head of the British delegation, and dined with him tonight. Asked if he expected to see many of the delegations he replied that he would do so if they were in their seats tomorrow, when he would occupy a place in the press gallery.

Mr. McCormick was one of the irreconcilables in the Senate debate on the League covenant. He still is. He will be when he leaves Geneva tomorrow.

The Senator received a number of the American correspondents tonight. When asked what he thought of the League he referred the interviewers to the speeches he had made in the United States Senate. He said that he had no new opinion to express on the League and would not have any for publication tomorrow.

The furthest he would go was to say that he was not opposed to a "periodical assemblage of nations," but not under the present constitution. He dodged cleverly all attempts to make him say what some of his advisers have told him; namely, that so far as leagues of nations go it is this League or none. In other words, it is impossible at this time to form another rival association.

The Senator, when asked what the attitude of the Republican Administration would probably be toward the League, said, "Read Harding's speeches." When he was reminded that Senator Harding's declaration that he did not exclude the covenant of the League being changed so that America could enter it did not coincide with what he himself had said in the Senate, Mr. McCormick replied that he guessed Senator Harding could speak for himself.

"Anyhow," he said, "I don't wish to tread upon the sands of the future."

While refusing to be quoted the Senator certainly gave the impression of a man who had definitely made up his mind against the League and had come for the purpose of confirming that impression, for the doing of which he will find ample material in his twenty-four hours just as an advocate of the League would find ample material for confirming his view in twenty-four hours at Geneva. It takes longer than twenty-four hours to judge the month's work of the League Assembly, however acute the observer may be. But to talk with Senator McCormick is to be assured that twenty-four hours in Geneva will be ample for his purpose here. He came today opposed to the League. He is going away tomorrow opposed to it. He left America in the same frame of mind, and is going back there unchanged in his view.

WARNS OF MINORITIES HERE.

Copyright, 1920, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

GENEVA, Dec. 12.—Delegate N. W. Rowell of Canada, at a committee meeting of the Assembly today, warned the League of Nations that any attempt by the League to establish world-wide protection of racial minorities would meet with bitter objections from the United States, which would effectually bar America's entrance.

"The United States," he said, "would never consent to be bound by conventions giving special rights and privileges to racial minorities. The United States on a much greater scale than Canada is a melting pot where thousands of immigrants from all parts of the world are fused into an amalgamation.

"With hordes of Italians and Central Europeans pouring in, America could never guarantee the rights of the minorities. It is a country which must be assured that its immigrants may be fused within it in speaking and writing its language and by interesting themselves in internal affairs."

Mr. Rowell especially drove home the American antipathy against hyphenates.

A Japanese delegate said that an extension of the principle would break the American policy of Asiatic exclusion and maintained that all immigrants should be permitted to enter the United States and be assimilated.

NEW ENVOYS FOR BRUSSELS

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—The French Government is at loggerheads with the Reparations Commission, or at least with the French representatives thereon, who include the Commission's President, Louis Dubois. The difference of views is so marked that not only the French delegates to the Brussels conference of reparations experts which opens this week do not belong to the Reparations Commission, but they have received instructions quite opposed to those which M. Dubois and his colleagues advocated.

There is another significant feature of their appointment. Both of them, M. Seydoux, Under Director of Commercial Affairs at the Foreign Office, and M. Cheysson, Inspector of Finances, are simply official functionaries whose comparatively modest rank contrasts with that of the Belgian delegates, M. Delacroix, ex-Premier, and M. Theunis, former Belgian member of the Reparations Commission and now Finance Minister; with that of the British, Sir John Bradbury, one of the foremost figures in British national finance, and Lord D'Abernon, British Ambassador at Berlin, and with that of the Germans, Herr Bergmann, member of the Reparations Commission and von Havenstein, Director of the Reichsbank.

The two Frenchmen have evidently been selected to carry out the instructions of the French Government implicitly, and can be counted on to show no untimely independence. This is all the more surprising, because throughout the long months of laborious negotiation to settle the procedure by which it is hoped the reparations problem will be solved, it was always the French who insisted that the first conference at Brussels should be one of experts chosen from or by the Reparations Commission itself. Yet now it is the French who have abandoned that idea of their own accord.

What is the meaning of the change? According to the best informed writers in the French press, Premier Leygues and his advisors have swung over to the English viewpoint that there is more to be gained by free and open—if not precisely friendly—discussion with the Germans than by arbitrarily laying down conditions and insisting that Germany must obey them.

To begin with, neither the British nor Italians would follow France along those lines, let alone the difficulty of making Germany herself do as ordered.

M. Dubois, however, is trying to retain for the Reparations Commission the authority conferred upon it by the Peace Treaty, an authority which free discussion with Germany would tend to undermine. Hitherto the French Government has maintained the same viewpoint and tried to insist upon the strict letter of the treaty. That M. Leygues, whose character and past history stamp him as a man of compromises, should engineer this volte face in the direction of Lloyd George's policy of conversation with Germany, rather than coercing, may perhaps explain what has puzzled a good many people, namely: just how the British came to agree to the French demand that financial support be withheld from Greece if Constantine were chosen King. Lloyd George conceded that point to Leygues, while Leygues came into line with Lloyd George about the repartions, which were also discussed in London.

It remains to be seen whether the change will be greatly to the taste of the French Parliament, which was disappointed by the results M. Millerand achieved at Spa, and which has not hesitated to vote a resolution condemning conversation with Germany and advocating the treaty system of arbitrary fixation of the German debt by the Reparations Commission.

Meanwhile the latter has been so far unable to settle the total of France's demands. All that is known on the subject is that M. Dubois is dissatisfied with the evaluation of the total damage given by the various ministerial departments, which is said by Sauerwein in the Matin to amount to the prodigous sum of 230,000,000,000 francs gold—700,000,000,000 paper francs, or upward of 3,000,000,000,000 marks at the present rates of exchange.

If the Matin writer is correct there will be a lively time at Brussels, for the amount he mentions far exceeds anything put forward before, and it is likely to raise a roar of protest not only from the Germans, but the Belgians and Italians, too.

SAY BANKER CONFESSED.

Hartford Police Assert He Admitted Taking $8,000.

HARTFORD, Dec. 12.—Raymond R. Healey, former Vice President of the United States Bank of this city, has confessed, according to the police, that he appropriated more than $8,000 of the bank's funds for his own use. He was removed as Vice President last Friday.

The police said he admitted defalcations and he was locked up. President Enders declined to make any statement. Healey was released late tonight when a bond of $500 was furnished by a friend.

Healey came to the United States Bank last April from New Britain, where he had been treasurer of the New Britain Trust Company.

UNVEILS BISMARCK'S FEUD WITH KAISER

CHANCELLOR FORESAW RUIN

"The Longer the Catastrophe Is in Coming the More Terrible It Will Be," He Wrote.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—"I see great perils arising for Germany and, indeed, for the whole of Europe. The longer the catastrophe is in coming the more terrible it will be." These are among the last sentences in the long-awaited third volume of Bismarck's memoirs, the remarkable prophecy which the man of blood and iron made when about to lay down his pen after having surveyed the momentous political age of which he himself had been the most conspicuous figure.

This important volume of history cannot yet be obtained in published form. The legal ban which the ex-Kaiser managed to have placed upon it still holds good, but the Vossische Zeitung publishes a long summary of and extracts from it.

Bismarck first of all depicts Prince William as an admirer of everything Bismarckian, but youth and age were not long in falling out. The first chapter tells a curious story of William's disease of "swelled head." In the year before his grandfather died the Prince drew up a "proclamation" addressed to the leading statesmen and Princes throughout the country. It was to be opened when he ascended the throne, "so that they might at once know his wishes and what he advised before he began to command."

The Prince showed the document to Bismarck, who said: "May I humbly advise your Royal Highness to commit it immediately to the flames?"

The most interesting part of the volume is that which takes up the story of the gathering storm in January and February, 1895, some weeks before the pilot was dropped. Bismarck opens this part of his recital by telling the story of the stormy scene between him and the Kaiser in the Castle of Berlin. Tempers had risen on both sides till at last the Chancellor put the direct question: "It appears, then, that I am in your Majesty's way?" "The Kaiser," adds Bismarck, "was silent, and that meant 'yes'."

But Bismarck was apparently determined not to go without making an effective exit. At meetings of the Cabinet he found the Ministers one by one turning against him. "Why?" he asked one of them. "Well," was the reply, "something has got to be done to please his Majesty," to which the Chancellor maliciously answered that he was glad to know that the Empire was now as strong as it was weak when he took up the reins in 1862.

About the middle of March the quarrel became hotter, mainly on account of Bismarck's receiving Ministers and party leaders without consulting the monarch. On one occasion, when that was being discussed, the Kaiser aired his then favorite wish to pay a visit to the Czar. Bismarck had evidently been waiting for this. He warned his Majesty against the visit, and took up a portfolio which he said contained, in a message from Prince Hatzfeld, the German Ambassador in London, very uncomplimentary judgments passed by the Czar on the Kaiser.

The Kaiser commanded the Chancellor to read the message, but Bismarck refused. Then William snatched the portfolio from Bismarck's hand and read the comments himself, turning very pale and evincing uneasiness as he did so. The Kaiser and Bismarck then broke off their conversation and the former, "as was not usual, carelessly extended to me his hand, with which he was holding his helmet." Later the Kaiser received from a German consular agent in Russia a report which indicated the approaching mobilization of the Czar's army.

The Kaiser turned angrily on Bismarck to know why such important information had been withheld from the knowledge of the Crown, and "the insults of the Czar," added point to his Majesty's language in the angry, insulting note which he sent to the Chancellor.

Bismarck declared that no such report had reached the German Foreign Office, but the book contains no information as to the contents of the report which the Kaiser received, nor are the Czar's remarks about "Dear Willy," of his later correspondence revealed in the volume.

Further conversations about Russia only tended to deepen William's wrath, and the old sore point as to whether Ministers should report over the Chancellor's head directly to the Kaiser increased the royal hostility.

When at last the tempest broke the Kaiser sent the chief of his civil Cabinet to Bismarck with instructions to bring back the Chancellor's resignation. He took a long time to draw it up, and eventually William dispatched his Adjutant with a message that "his Majesty would wait until 2 o'clock for the document."

Here Bismarck gives the now famous document in which the Kaiser conferred upon the outgoing Chancellor the title of Duke—a document which became public by reason of the indiscretion of some one the day after Bismarck's death. The honor was, of course, refused.

Once the resignation had been signed and accepted, the man of blood and iron was hustled out of the Chancellor's palace with unseemly haste. He says that while his servants were still packing up his belongings the lackeys of his successor "occupied the stairs, doors and passages of the palace," and part of the palace was already taken possession of by the new Chancellor, General von Caprivi, before Bismarck left it.

The last chapter of the book is devoted mainly to a sketch of William II. He had, says his famous Chancellor, Frederick II.'s craving for show, Frederick William II.'s love for "tall soldier fellows," Frederick the Great's thirst for glory, Frederick William IV.'s dreaminess and weakness and the vanity and sensitiveness of Frederick III. "Only from one of his ancestors did he inherit nothing—from his grandfather, William I.," concludes Bismarck.

In the last pages he sharply criticises von Caprivi for the exchange of Zanzibar for Heligoland and for the nonrenewal of the Russian treaty.

A. J. A. DEVEREUX STRICKEN.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 12.—A. J. Antelo Devereux, noted polo player and horseman, was stricken with paralysis while riding to hounds at the weekly Cheshire hunt on the estate of W. Plunket Stewart at Unionville yesterday. He was rushed to his farm house near by and is now in bed under the care of physicians.

A blood clot which formed on Mr. Devereux's brain after he was thrown in a steeplechase over Foxhall Keene's estate near Baltimore, Oct. 30, is responsible for the stroke, according to his family physician, Dr. W. H. Nix of Unionville. Mr. Devereux was thrown so heavily at that time that the ligaments of his neck were badly torn, and it was at first believed that he was paralyzed. His left arm and right side of his face are paralyzed. Dr. Nix was unable to say what the outcome of the stroke would be.

Blue Law Advocates Are Foiled at Wilmington

WILMINGTON, Del., Dec. 12.—The first effort in this section of the country to secure enforcement of at least some of the ancient Sunday Blue laws failed here today. A committee of members of the Ministerial Association were informed by the Police Department that no arrests would be made for violation of the ancient statutes without the orders of the Police Commission. S. K. Smith, President of the commission, declared himself unalterably opposed to the movement.

SAYS EX-KAISER LOOKS HERE FOR AID

YEARNS FOR WORLD AMITY

Believes Hatred Bred by the War Will Be Most Easily Forgotten in This Country.

Copyright, 1920, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

BERLIN, Dec. 12.—Along with millions of ordinary Germans and the entire German industrial, financial and political leadership, William Hohenzollern, once the German Kaiser, looks toward America for aid which will help Germany to regain her place as one of the world's great nations.

This information came to The Tribune correspondent directly from Castle Doorn, where the former Kaiser is watching at his stricken wife's bedside.

The bearer of this statement was Dr. von Dryander, formerly the German court chaplain and a boyhood friend and instructor of the former Kaiser. Dr. von Dryander returned to Berlin yesterday, when Holland's visé on his passports expired. He intends returning immediately, and was loath to talk about the Hohenzollern family until he was questioned regarding the truth of certain Dutch reports.

In the hope that he could controvert certain rumors about the former Kaiser's failing health and morale, Dr. von Dryander gave this interview:

"The hatred caused by the war will be most easily forgotten in America, in the former Kaiser's opinion. He has frequently remarked that he looks forward to a reconciliation between Germany and America. He believes America will help Germany economically and that Germany will give America the benefit of its scientific and cultural studies, and that both nations will profit from the renewed friendship which the former Kaiser hopes will grow.

"He feels that certain of the former enemies of Germany desperately are trying to continue to foster this hatred among their people, and a campaign of vilification still is continuing about him and about Germany.

"It is a sore spot with him that British ministers of the gospel attacked him from their pulpits, but the former German ruler is above all small hatreds.

"In a real Christian spirit the former Kaiser is hopeful of a reconciliation among all nations.

"William Hohenzollern always stood for peace. When history has had the chance to judge calmly it will tell the truth about his work toward peace. And today he believes every good citizen should work for international peace and unity."

The former court chaplain then described the daily habits and plans for the day's work of the former Kaiser.

"His hair has turned slightly grayer than when I last saw him," he said, "but otherwise he is not changed. He is hale, hearty and in fine physical condition. His habits are regular. He rises early and he works, reads and studies. He is studying principally history and archaeology."

When asked if the former Kaiser felt any war guilt, Dr. von Dryander replied:

"I wonder if the Entente's statesmen of 1914 sleep as well nights as the former Kaiser does?"

GERMANY AGAIN TOLD BY ALLIES TO DISARM

Powers Will Make No Exceptions in Favor of Defense Organizations.

BERLIN, Dec. 12 (Associated Press).—The Inter-Allied Military Commission has repeated its demand for the immediate disbandment and disarming of German defense organizations and requested immediate information as to what measures Germany intends to take with regard to the demand.

The notification of the commission was in reply to a note from the German Government on Dec. 9 with reference to disbanding the Einwohnerwehr. The commission declared that it did not recognize any ground for special treatment regarding the Bavarian and East Prussian Einwohnerwehr.

A semi-official note concerning the demand says the allied reply was received at the Foreign Office Sunday evening. It adds that the rapidity with which the reply to Germany's note of Dec. 9, which declared that Germany had never recognized any obligation to disband defense organizations which had no military character, was answered indicates that the commission acted on instructions previously given, as the German Government's note could not have been communicated to the allied capitals in so short a time.

In view of the vital importance of the question to Germany the semi-official note says the allied Governments themselves should consider Germany's argument and that it is hoped they will take into account existing conditions. The German Government, it asserts, will take the necessary steps through its Ambassadors.

URGE GERMAN UNITY.

But Democratic Party Leaders Denounce Monarchist Agitation.

NUREMBERG, Dec. 12 (Associated Press).—Agitation for restoration of the monarchy was denounced today in the speeches of German Democratic Party leaders at the convention of the bourgeois political organizations here. Their attitude was that abandonment of the Republic at this stage would mark the beginning of the disintegration of the German nation.

Bavarian delegates, while supporting in theory the republican form of government, asserted there must be decentralization of the administration. In this connection Edward Hamm, Bavarian Minister of Commerce, said:

"We need a united German army. A united front in our foreign affairs and unity in taxation and commerce; but on the other hand, we must have decentralization of the administration."

Hugo Preuss, former Minister of the Interior, expressed the opinion that unity of the German administration and German ideas did not mean centralization to the detriment of the several States. He declared that the restoration of the monarchy was unthinkable, and that the salvation of Germany depended on the maintenance of a powerful democratic republic.

"What rage there would be in the United States," continued Herr Preuss, "if a foreign Power should send a special Ambassador to Texas or California! In internal affairs we must have liberty and freedom of thought and action, but in foreign affairs Germany must present a united front."

FINAL BLOW AIMED AT BRINDELL'S GRIP

Lockwood Committee Hopes to Cut Tie Between Labor Boss and Employers.

IRON ERECTORS COME NEXT

Legislators Will Inquire Into Restrictions Put Upon Builders.

Further revelations concerning the relations between the Building Trades Employers Association and Robert P. Brindell's Building Trades Council will be disclosed during the next two weeks by the Lockwood Committee investigating the housing situation, according to plans made yesterday by the committee.

Unless the tie that binds the two organizations is severed and the relations between them, which have an important bearing on the high cost of building, come to an end, the commitee feels that its work will have been in vain.

The Building Trades Council, comprising about 115,000 workingmen in the building trades, is a central body consisting of business agents or walking delegates from the various unions with the exception of the bricklayers, painters, plasterers and steel workers. It was formally organized last year by Brindell from the nucleus afforded by the Board of Business Agents, which had been in existence for many years in the building trades.

The Building Trades Employers Association, known in the trade as "Thirty-third Street," because of its location at 30 West Thirty-third Street, is an organization of employers in 32 trades connected with building.

Brindell Changed System.

Up to the time Brindell took hold of the affairs of the workingmen, each group of employers banded together as a trade association made an agreement with the group of workingmen in the same field and wages varied greatly. Brindell changed all that and arranged that standard wages should be paid journeymen and helpers in all the trades and for this purpose he negotiated an agreement between the Building Trades Employers Association and the Building Trades Council. Supplementary agreements between the trade groups and employe groups were also made.

In some cases, as brought out before the Lockwood Committee, the agreement was used as a club to force employers outside the association to join it under pain of having their workingmen withdrawn by the union. Employers who agreed to use none but members of the unions in their trade helped to form a closed organization, which made it impossible for men not in the Brindell council to obtain work.

It has also been shown that employers used the mutual agreement to increase exorbitantly the cost of construction work.

The committee cannot understand the apparent inactivity of prominent personages in the American Federation of Labor in not putting down with an iron hand grafting labor leaders whose parasitical proclivities have been known to the rank and file of unions, and concerning whose lavish expenditures gossip has been rife for a long time. These labor leaders, according to information in the hands of the committee, have virtually permitted employers to assume the attitude of padrone over the members of the unions, charging exorbitant prices to builders for the labor of the men over and above the wages actually paid. In return for such permission the labor leaders have been confirmed in their power by the employers.

Employers have been known to make gifts to the labor men on one pretense and another. These men, some of them high up in the councils of the American Federation of Labor, have consolidated their power by "deals" with equally prominent and powerful factors in the federation, so that their combined votes at a convention might successfully dominate the affairs of nearly four million workingmen of the United States.

Iron Erectors Next.

When the committee meets tomorrow it will go into the activities of the Iron Erectors' League and the National Erectors' Association. The league is the local association of employers putting up iron and steel work on buildings and the association is the national body. According to testimony before the committee, New York is the only city in the country in which builders are not permitted by the association to put up their own steel, but are compelled to have it erected by the members of the league.

The bitter warfare waged between employes in the iron and steel erection industry and the national association concerning the use of union labor will figure prominently in the testimony in the next few days. The iron and steel employers, following the example of the U. S. Steel Corporation, have always stipulated that iron and steel be put up under "open shop" conditions. Steel contractors who sought to do otherwise were informed they could not purchase steel, it was said by a witness before the committee.

United States Senator William M. Calder, Chairman of the Senate Reconstruction Committee, spoke to Mr. Untermyer yesterday and afterward said that his committee would gladly co-operate with the Lockwood Committee.

BERLIN DANCER A SUICIDE.

Copyright, 1920, by Chicago Tribune Co.

BERLIN, Dec. 12.—In the suicide of the Spanish dancer, Malvina Vivian, Germany loses her most daring woman gambler, and Europe loses one of her most notorious and most artistic personalities.

Her last act was typical of her. Having put prussic acid in a glass of champagne, she toasted every one in the gambling hall of the Casino at Meran (in Italian Tyrol), drank, and then fell dead across a table, surrounded by merrymakers.

Malvina Vivian was a fisher girl whom a rich German bought for 1,000,000 pesos and took to Paris, where she was trained as a dancer. She later became a sensation in Berlin theatres. Her rich German friend provided her with a palace, and she became the richest and most prosperous artist in Germany. Gambling caused her downfall.

Last Spring she became involved in a burglary, having employed a professional Berlin thief in order to obtain jewels with which to pay off her gambling debts.

Freed, but still suspected, she went to Meran, where she lost 400,000 marks and all of her friends.

WOULD BAR DISPLAY OF FOREIGN FLAGS

SPEAKS AT CHURCH MEETING

President of Marquette Club Quotes Washington's "Place None but Americans on Guard."

"Has the time not arrived when the peace and welfare of this country demand that except for official use no flag shall fly here but the flag of the United States?" asked Ambrose O'Connell in an address yesterday morning at a breakfast of the Women's Auxiliary of St. Nicholas School Association held in the parish hall of St. Nicholas Church, at 135 Second Street.

The breakfast followed the annual mass of the organization in the church. The celebrant was the Rev. John A. Nageleisen, the pastor. Mr. O'Connell is President of the Marquette Club of New York City and also President of the Iowa Society.

"If you fly the foreign flag in this country you are compelled to fly the American flag with it," continued Mr. O'Connell. "And from what I have observed that is apparently the only reason some people ever fly the American flag. Anyone who thinks as much of another flag as he does of his own is not an American and America cannot trust him."

Mr. O'Connell blamed most of the wrongs of the present day on politicians. He quoted George Washington's words, "Place none but Americans on guard tonight." "If Washington were in New York today I believe he would utter the same words again," said Mr. O'Connell.

The speaker argued that this right to display other flags was a leading factor that keeps our melting pot from melting.

"If you should take a stroll on the Bowery or a walk up Fifth Avenue at certain times you will find enough foreign flags afloat to almost make you wonder whether you are on the streets of Cairo or the sidewalks of New York," Mr. O'Connell continued. "Foreign flags are the rallying point for foreigners. They tend to keep alive and transplant to America the jealousy, the rivalry, the race hatred that for centuries have been the sources of war and bloodshed of the Old World."

FINDS DRUGS SHARPEN EARS

Special to the New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 12.—Dr. David I. Macht of the Johns Hopkins Medical School, who is conducting research work in pharmacology, has discovered drugs that, when used in just the proper doses and at the right time, will increase the sensitiveness of the human ear and thus enable an individual to hear over a wider range.

Quinine is one of the drugs that, in small doses, increases acuity. Antipyrin pyramidon, also in small doses, had that effect. Acetanilid and salol, administered separately, impaired hearing, but a combination of the two was found that increased acuity.

Many ways have been suggested in which the "dictaphoned" ear may be used for eavesdropping and other purposes to the advantage of the user, as for example in the detection of burglars.

It Is the Most Wonderful of all Phonographs. They Can Play It as a Musical Instrument

If You Are Six—

YOU will be peering up the chimney awaiting the rotund little gentleman who has been foremost in your thoughts for the past month. You are eagerly looking forward to thrilling new toys and to the shining, mysterious tree. But most of all you will want music—just the music the Vocalion can give you. How you will love the Vocalion Record of "The Night Before Christmas," and the beautiful Christmas carols that mother sings and has taught you!

Ask Santa for a Vocalion, too!

If You Are Eighteen—

THE thrill of presents given and received—and parties! Probably you will entertain at home—good music for dancing will be indispensable. The Vocalion and the Vocalion Record are famous for dance music. Steady, rich, powerful and full of "snap," the Vocalion plays Fox-Trots, Waltzes and One-Steps that bring you to your feet and inspire you to do your best. Favorites from the latest musical comedies and revues—the popular music that young people love to sing and dance to are always available.

If you want perfect dance music, ask those who care to give you a Vocalion for Christmas!

For Those Grown Older—

THE happiness of listening to music's best in the quiet of your own living-room; the joy of giving to your loved ones the things they want most. And surely a phonograph—the Aeolian-Vocalion, which is something more than a phonograph with its wonderful playing device; with its entertainment for every hour of the day; with its powerful influence for culture and happy home life—is what they will want most!

Give those dear to you a Vocalion!

Style 1495
Gothic Windsor

Period Vocalions from $300 Terms as low as $15 monthly

First—Its tone is more genuinely musical than that of any other on the market. Great musicians have pronounced this so, and your own ear will tell you so when you hear it.

Second—It has a great advantage that no other phonograph possesses. This is the Graduola, which makes it possible for anyone to join in the playing of the music, singing with the singer, playing the violin or 'cello, or leading the orchestra with expression, tone color all one's own. A fascinating, instructive feature is the Graduola. To be used or not, as you wish. But why have a phonograph without it?

Third—The appearance of the Vocalion is so superior; its cases are so tasteful, so artistic, that it helps to furnish and beautify your room—it looks what it is—the Phonograph of true and lasting quality.

And it costs no more than any good phonograph. Two of the favorite models, in fact, styles not to appear in the 1921 catalogue, are now radically reduced in price. One, the "430" (with Graduola), which was formerly $165, being now but $135; and the dainty "310," formerly sold at $135, is now marked at $110.

MUSIC

By Richard Aldrich

The Harvard Glee Club.

While New York has been eliminating the music of Palestrina and his fellows, and the choral music of Bach and Brahms from public concerts, by eliminating the Musical Art Society, Harvard College has discovered it and has been making it popular through the agency of the Glee Club. That organization has seen a great light under the inspiration of Professor Archibald T. Davison of the Music Department of the college, and has turned from the traditional "college songs" to music of a very different sort.

What it has been doing in this direction was illustrated in the concert it gave yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall. The program comprised unaccompanied ecclesiastical music of the Roman school by Palestrina, Allegri and Lotti; a chorale by Bach; a setting of an Irish folk song; a madrigal by Thomas Morley; three choruses from Rubinstein's "Biblical opera," "The Tower of Babel"; Colridge Taylor's setting of "Drake's Drum"; an arrangement for male chorus by W. Frank Harling of Duparc's song "L'Invitation au Voyage," called in its new form "Dreamland"; four of the "Liebeslieder" by Brahms, and the chorus, "Hallelujah, Amen" from Handel's "Judas Maccabaeus."

The program itself is remarkable enough for any college organization to undertake; still more remarkable was the beauty and finish of the performance, the understanding of the music, the evident assimilation of its spirit, that these young men and their admirable conductor showed from beginning to end. It was choral singing of a remarkably fine kind, not merely a praiseworthy attempt by a lot of college youths; it was an achievement worthy to stand by itself and of a distinction that puts the chorus among the best.

The singing was musically intelligent, and showed a discriminating feeling for style and for differences of style. The tone of the chorus is rich and full. In pianissimos there is a feeling of mystery. In passages of fortissimo the musical quality is excellent. The ensemble was highly finished. There were care and significance in the phrasing, and in the contrapuntal pieces the voice parts were clear in their blending. Unusual pains had evidently been taken with enunciation. The ancient ecclesiastical pieces were impressively sung. An effect of crescendo in Lotti's "Crucifixus" was subtly wrought. It was perhaps inevitable that the Latin should have been pronounced as it is in academic circles, including Harvard, rather than as it is pronounced in the Roman Catholic Church. There was in certain passages of this music a curious staccato effect called for by nothing in the text or the music, perhaps due to an excess of zeal in making the syllables clear.

The Irish folk song, "Has Sorrow Thy Young Days Shaded," was arranged for tenor solo, sung with the right simplicity of style by J. F. Lautner, with a humming accompaniment by the chorus. There was a fine vigor in the singing of Bach's chorale, spirit in Thomas Morley's madrigal "My Bonnie Lass;" picturesque vigor in Coleridge Taylor's setting of "Drake's Drum." Duparc's song "Invitation au Voyage," loses in its effect by transference to a chorus; nor is it strange that an accomplished master's handiwork should not sound best as he himself left it.

Brahms's "Liebeslieder," composed for mixed voices, undoubtedly lose something also by their transference to a male chorus. The performance of them was not so successful in all respects as most else on the program. There was something too much of that staccato effect above noted in places where all should be of the greatest smoothness.

There were immense vigor and spirit in Handel's chorus, and the dramatic touch, which is something more than vigor and spirit. It was heartily applauded, and indeed it was evident throughout the concert that the music and the performance deeply engaged the interest and the sympathies of the listeners.

The chorus, which numbered about sixty, was picked from the entire Glee Club of one hundred and thirty or so. This sort of thing has been going on at Harvard College since the Spring of 1919, where it has enlisted a degree of interest unexpected, at least by some, not only among those who sing, but also among a large proportion of the undergraduates who listen. It would be hard to overestimate the value of the movement as a factor in the work of the music department, and hence in contributing to the liberal culture which the Harvard authorities long ago recognized as inherent in music by establishing that department.

Verdi's "Don Carlos," an opera practically unknown to New York, though it had a few hearings here over fifty years ago at the Academy of Music, is announced for its first performance at the Metropolitan on Thursday evening of next week, Dec. 23. Signor Martinelli will sing the title rôle of the Spanish prince, son of King Philip II., with an "Oedipus complex" for a youthful French mother-in-law, while Signor de Luca will have the important part of the Marquis de Posa, made famous in Paris by the great baritone, Fauré.

Miss Ponselle will be the heroine, Princess Elizabeth of Valois, and Mme. Matzenauer the Princess Eboli, who sings the familiar air, "O Don Fatale." Besides Mr. Didur as King Philip, the cast also includes the Misses Dalossy and Sundelius, Messrs. Bada and Gustafson, and Mr. Papi will conduct. The opera is in four acts and nine scenes, newly designed by Joseph Urban.

Giulio Setti conducted the Metropolitan chorus and orchestra last evening in the familiar and impressive "Manzoni Requiem" of Verdi. It was, as in many former seasons, a performance in which the opera forces vied with their audience in enthusiasm, and was maintained on a high plane also by the soloists, who were Mmes. Destinn and Gordon, Messrs. Chamlee and Rothier.

MISS ANGLIN IN GREEK PLAY.

Margaret Anglin, by arrangement with Walter Damrosch and the New York Oratorio Society, will give a performance of Euripides's "Iphigenia in Aulis" at the Manhattan Opera House on the night of April 4. This will be Miss Anglin's first appearance here in this play, which she produced at the Greek Theatre in Berkeley, Cal., during the Panama-Pacific Exposition of 1915. The music, written by Walter Damrosch, will be interpreted by the Symphony Society Orchestra under the direction of the composer.

Miss Anglin's engagement in "The Woman of Bronze" will be interrupted for one night so that the Greek play may be offered. During her engagement here two seasons ago Miss Anglin appeared with Mr. Damrosch at Carnegie Hall in the "Electra" of Sophocles and the "Medea" of Euripides.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Coo Coo Cottage," a comedy by Myron C. Fagan, will be presented at the Princess Theatre on Monday night, Dec. 27. The cast will include Robert McWade, Willis P. Swetnam, John Daly Murphy, Thais Magraine and Maidel Turner.

William H. Pringle has been engaged for "The Passing Show of 1920," coming to the Winter Garden.

There will be four matinees of "Miss Lulu Bett" during the first week of that play at the Belmont Theatre. They will take place on Dec. 29, 30, 31 and Jan. 1.

"The Little Guignol" will be opened at 72 Washington Square South early next month. The plays of the Grand Guignol of Paris will be presented in English.

Jane Richardson will leave the cast of "Pitter Patter" when that production ends its run at the Longacre on Jan. 1. She will be seen later in the season in another musical piece.

Joseph Schoengold, son-in-law of Jacob Adler, will be seen at the Jewish Art Theatre in "One Life for Another" next Friday.

TWO ORCHESTRAS PLAY.

Serato Returns With Philharmonic, Kerekjarto With Symphony.

The Philharmonic Society gave the first of three Beethoven festival programs yesterday before a large audience in Carnegie Hall, an assisting guest being Arrigo Serato, lately returned from abroad, who was heard in the master's violin concerto. Mr. Serato played with an Italian's feeling for melodic line and with a tone of much power, if not of utmost sensuous beauty. Mr. Stransky conducted also the "Coriolanus" overture and the Fifth symphony.

At the Symphony Society's second concert in a popular series at the Lexington yesterday, Willem Willeke made his bow as leader of his fellow-players, while the solo performer was the young Hungarian violinist, Duci de Kerekjarto. For his first appearance with a local orchestra, the ardent youth had chosen Mendelssohn's concerto, which he gave with rare zest in more rapid passages, and somewhat gropingly in those parts calling for a mature style of elegance and repose. Christiane Eymael also appeared, singing the "Ocean" air from Weber's "Oberon."

Savel Zilberts, a Moscow musician, new to this country, conducted his own arrangements of traditional airs from the Jewish ritual yesterday afternoon at the Hippodrome, the solo parts chanted by Cantor Abraham Hyman, and the responses for choir by a professional chorus. Mrs. Amalia Zilberts was heard in an air from Tschaikovsky's "Pique Dame."

Viola Cole Audet, a pianist of Chicago, and former writer on music in Montreal, was a débutante in recital at the Princess Theatre yesterday. In her program were two "Sarabandes" of Brahms, said to have been "found during the war," an "Impression" by Grovlez of "Westminster Abbey" and Leonard Borwick's piano version of Debussy's "Faun."

Frederic Warren opened a second season of Sunday afternoon "ballad concerts," transferred this Winter to the Longacre Theatre, where yesterday's varied program included folk songs of Tuscany for Mildred Graham and George Reardan, others, Czecho-Slovak and Hungarian for Ruano Bogislav, and violin solos for a young Chicago artist, Amy Neill.

COHAN IS ABBOT AGAIN.

George M. Cohan was reinstalled as Abbot of the Friars' Club last night at a dinner given in his honor in the Forty-eighth Street Clubhouse. Mr. Cohan, who resigned his membership in the Friars during the actors' strike, rejoined the club several weeks ago. John J. Gleason, the retiring abbot, last night turned over a silver gavel to Mr. Cohan as the symbol of his office, and the returning leader was warmly greeted by a gathering of about 600 Friars.

It was announced after the dinner that $100,000 had been subscribed to pay off the club's indebtedness.

Mr. Cohan, in taking office, reviewed his reasons for quitting the club during the strike, and touched on the present campaign of the Actors Equity Association in behalf of the Equity shop.

"I resigned from the Friars' Club because it had changed character," he declared. "Politics were creeping into it. When I resigned it was because I was fighting for my life, and for the business that it had taken me all my life to build up. I believed then that I was right, and today I know that I was right. The Actors' Equity Council has proved that I was right by coming out in favor of the thing that they were after all the time—the closed shop. If the actors and actresses of America want the closed shop they'll get it, but let the Equity Council put it before them in its right name, and tell them exactly what they're voting for. All that I ask is the right to go on earning my living in the theatre without being dictated to by the Council of the Actors' Equity Association."

Actors Start Membership Drive.

The Catholic Actors' League held its first public meeting of the season last night at the Hudson Theatre, and launched a drive to increase its membership from 6,000 to 10,000. Addresses were made by George M. Cohan, Wilton Lackaye, William A. Brady, Justice Victor J. Dowling, Frederick H. Tims, and the Rev. Martin E. Fahy. Brandon Tynan, head of the league, presided. An entertainment preceded the addresses, with Raymond Hitchcock, Tom Lewis, Jane and Katherine Lee, William J. Kelly and others on the program.

MUSIC NOTES.

The Brooklyn Orchestra Society, assisted by Reinald Werrenrath, baritone, will give a concert at the Academy in its home borough tonight, under the direction of Herbert J. Braham.

Handel's "The Messiah" will be sung tomorrow evening in Carnegie Hall by the Oratorio Society of the New York Christian Science Institute, conducted by John Warren Erb.

George Meader, tenor, will assist in the Beethoven Association's program at Aeolian Hall tomorrow evening in observance of the 150th birth anniversary of Beethoven.

Joseph Schwarz, a Russian baritone arriving this week, was born in Riga and has sung in opera at Berlin with Jadlowker and at Vienna with Caruso.

THE SCREEN

One of the pre-eminent motion pictures of the present cinematographic age is at the Capitol this week. It is most inappropriately entitled "Passion," and has been imported from Europe, having originated in Northern Germany, by Associated First National Pictures, Inc. The Polish actress, Pola Negri, plays its leading rôle, and its director was Ernst Lubitch, who is said to have a reputation as a cinematician of the first rank abroad.

According to report, the Continental name of the picture was "du Barry," and this title might well have been retained, for it comes as close to giving a key to the story as any that comes to mind. The story is that of Louis XV.'s mistress in her environment, and this environment, the life of the day, with its individual figures and its human masses, at least as they are popularly imagined, is the real material of the narrative. Du Barry herself is only a part of it all, and so are the others, especially the King and Armand de Foix, who, with the woman between them, form the three principals of the plot. It is about these three, the toy of erratic destiny, the mad King, and the humble first love of the du Barry when she was only Jeanne, the milliner's apprentice, that the action centres, but they are merely the centre of action that radiates in all directions and reaches through the Court of Louis and the seething life of Paris, from the omnipotence of the fat Bourbon tyrant to the overwhelming might of the frenzied revolutionary mob.

It is in building this story of pre-revolutionary France, reaching its peak in the revolution, that Mr. Lubitch has done something notable. The affairs of Mme. du Barry, Louis and Armand by themselves are simply sordid, with Armand's part in them dignified somewhat by a touch of tragedy, and any director who let them stand out from their background would have had merely a sordid tale to tell. But Mr. Lubitch has had the skill to weave them into their setting, make them a part of all that is going on, and, while keeping them in the centre as objects of focused interest, he has never permitted them to hold the interest exclusively. So his picture has dramatic sweep as well as localized intensity; it lives as a human document; and it satisfies historic curiosity. How far it departs from actual history is immaterial. So far as the present writer is able to judge it has caught the atmosphere and meaning of its time, and historical fiction has accomplished its object when it does this.

It is also as a cinematician that Mr. Lubitch and whoever may have been responsible with him have won distinction. The settings seem truly of the Paris of the latter eighteenth century, and the costuming and habits of the people portrayed are harmonious with them. And few spectacles, if any, have surpassed the scenes of the street crowds and revolutionary mobs, which increase in number and importance as the story hurries to its final scene—du Barry at the guillotine. The French Revolution has never been so vividly pictured, probably, as in this photoplay. What is was, as ugly as it was, and as human, is forcefully presented, which means dramatically.

But all that Mr. Lubitch and his associates behind the camera did could not have made "Passion" the living thing it is without its cast. Seldom has a photoplay been as excellently acted. First among the players is Pola Negri. Here is one of those rare persons with screen personality. Her moving photograph is stamped with individuality. And largely because of her definite pantomimic ability, or whatever distinctive motion picture acting may be called. It is not physical beauty that wins for her. She is lovely in many scenes, it is true, but some of her features are not beautiful, and she makes no apparent effort to pose becomingly without regard to the meaning of her performance. She is expressive. That is her charm. She makes du Barry real, as fascinating as she has to be, with as much of the appearance of dignity as she must have on occasion, and as contemptible and cowardly as she was. She actually wins sympathy for a woman who cannot at any time be admired. This is an accomplishment.

The other players in the cast are not named, but whoever they are they play right up to Pola Negri, especially those who impersonate Louis XV., Armand de Foix, the Duc de Choiseul, the Comte Jean du Barry, and Paillet, the cobbler. Also many in the large assemblage of people brought into the picture contribute importantly to its success.

"Passion," therefore, may be written down as one of the pre-eminent pictures of the day. Its shortcomings are the shortcomings of the photoplay of the current period, with its lack of color, its subjection to the literal rather than the imaginative camera, and its dependence upon "words, words, words." In "Passion" the photoplay about reaches its limit of excellence, and reveals its limitations. And the excellence and the limitations are together a guarantee of something greater than the photoplay to come. Meanwhile, let "Du Barry," as it must be thought of, be enjoyed.

"Spain" was the subject of E. M. Newman's Traveltalk at Carnegie Hall last night.

In an editorial in the Boston Herald of Nov. 25, D. W. Griffith's production of "Way Down East," now at the 44th Street Theatre, New York, is referred to as "One of the Unexampled Wonders of the 20th Century."

IT IS NOW THE UNANIMOUS OPINION THAT "WAY DOWN EAST" IS THE GREATEST THEATRICAL SENSATION IN THE WORLD'S HISTORY.

To miss "Way Down East" is to miss one of the biggest events of modern times.

"Way Down East" is presented at the 44th St. Theatre EVERY AFTERNOON and EVERY EVENING (Including Sundays) at 2:15 and 8:15. All seats are reserved.

First "Lost" Advertisement

On June 28, 1660, there appeared what was probably the first "lost" advertisement published. The "Mercurius Publicus" had this distinction when King Charles advertised the loss of his dog, which was returned to him through the insertion of the announcement.

The most effective present-day medium for "Lost" advertisements is The New York Times. Household pets, jewelry, money and many articles of value through association or intrinsic worth are returned, sometimes within 24 hours after an announcement appears in The Times Lost and Found columns.

AGREE ON TERMS OF BASEBALL PACT

CLUB OWNERS MUST RATIFY

DRAFT QUESTION HELD UP

Smaller Organizations May Settle This as They Wish at Chicago Session on Jan. 10.

When official representatives of the two major baseball leagues and committeemen from the minors can sit down at the council table together to consider matters of such importance that the whole future of the game depends upon the decisions reached and arise from said session radiating universal smiles and contentment, such a consummation is not only devoutly to be wished but is worthy of extended comment. Such an event occurred yesterday at the Hotel Commodore, where the committeemen of the National and American Leagues, six in number, and another half dozen from the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs, the ruling body of the minors, met to hear and consider the report of the special committee of three appointed on Saturday afternoon to draft a set of regulations designed to serve as a covenant for the regulation and government of the game.

The report as made by George Wharton Pepper, John Conway Toole and J. C. Jones, the last named being a St. Louis lawyer as well as a baseball magnate, survived several hours of discussion practically intact, which of itself is noteworthy as indicating that nobody was there in a hair-splitting frame of mind. As it stands and as it is printed below, it will, without question, be ratified by the National League tomorrow at its annual meeting, which is to be held in this city, and by the American League at its annual session in Chicago on Friday. It will, thereupon, take its place, as far as the big leagues are concerned, as the new constitution of professional baseball.

Minors to Settle Draft.

The minor organizations face a more complicated proposition. The draft considered yesterday will be laid before not only each league, but each club of the twenty-seven leagues involved, for consideration and for an ultimate vote, pro or con, in the course of the National Association's annual meeting in Chicago on Jan. 10. At that gathering the decision will be formally reached whether the minors shall acquiesce and make it a tripartite agreement, or decide to go it on their own course into strange and unfriendly morasses. Their representatives, present at yesterday's session, will urge upon them the advisability of accepting the fruit of the cogitations of most of the best minds in organized baseball, as represented in the code unanimously approved yesterday at the Hotel Commodore. The minors' governing body will express its assent or dissent at a joint meeting of majors and minors to be held on Jan. 12, probably in Chicago.

Such controversy as arose yesterday, and it was so nearly amicable as to be wholly unworthy the name of dispute, centred around the proposition of the drafting of players. This possible bomb was drenched, however, by putting the matter distinctly up to the minor leagues for their approval or the reverse. Opposition on the part of the new International League and the American Association to the revival of the drafting arrangement under the former terms, or other terms approximately like them, was voiced, as had been anticipated. There was an occasional Class A league voice raised against the plan, too, but any tumult was averted by the acceptance of a provision by the joint committee that the draft be made optional with the different leagues. That means, speaking generally, that any minor league accepting the draft principle would not only be subject to drafting from above, but would be able to draft players from leagues of a lower classification, whereas a league rejecting the draft would be exempt from its benefits as well as its liabilities.

Seeking Higher Figure.

It is understood that even the leading protestants, the International League and the American Association, have no material objection to the draft in principle, except the very material objection that the old $2,500 rate did not bring them money enough when a crack player was drawn from their ranks.

The tentative draft of the new agreement, as made public last night, follows the lines laid down in forecasts almost to the dot. Judge Landis is named as First Commissioner, and provision is made for the process by which his successor shall be named. An Advisory Council, to consist of the Commissioner and the Presidents of the major leagues, is provided for, with the Commissioner having the deciding vote in case of disagreement. The council of three will have power to frame rules for the world's series, to determine controversial questions affecting the relationship of clubs and players, and to settle all matters in which contracts are involved.

In outlining the duties of Judge Landis the agreement places upon him the task of investigating " either upon complaint or upon his own initiative any act or practice alleged or suspected to be detrimental to the best interests of the national game of baseball, with authority to summon persons and to order the production of documents." Provision is made for imposing penalties for refusal to comply with the Commissioner's orders in such cases.

After investigations, the Commissioner shall determine what preventive, remedial or punitive action shall be taken against major leagues, major league clubs or individuals, as the case may be. In the event that a major league or major league club be found guilty of conduct detrimental to the game, the Commissioner may impose a fine not to exceed $5,000, and in the case of a club punishment may be extended to include temporary deprivation of representation in joint meetings held under the agreement. In the case of an official or employe of a major league or major league club, the punishment may extend to suspension or removal and a player may be declared by the Commissioner temporarily or permanently ineligible to play with any club which is a party to the agreement.

MAJOR LEAGUE AGREEMENT.

Agreement between the National League of Professional Base Ball Clubs and each of its eight constituent clubs, of the one part, and the American League of Professional Base Ball Clubs, and each of its eight constituent clubs, of the other part.

Article I. The Commissioner.

Sec. 1. The office of Commissioner is hereby created.

Sec. 2. The functions of the Commissioner shall be as follows:

(a) To investigate, either upon complaint or upon his own initiative, any act, transaction or practice charged, alleged or suspected to be detrimental to the best interests of the national game of baseball; with authority to summon persons and to order the production of documents; and, in case of refusal to appear or produce, to impose such penalties as are hereinafter provided.

(b) To determine, after investigation, what preventive, remedial or punitive action is appropriate in the premises, and to take such action either against major leagues, major league clubs or individuals, as the case may be.

(c) To hear and determine finally any dispute between the major leagues which may be certified to him for determination by the President of either major league.

(d) To hear and to determine finally any dispute to which a player is a party, or any dispute concerning a player, which may be certified to him by either or any of the disputants.

(e) To formulate, and from time to time announce, the rules of procedure to be observed by the Commissioner and all other parties in connection with the discharge of his duties. Such rules shall always recognize the right of any party in interest to appear before the Commissioner and be heard and the right of the Presidents of the two major leagues to appear and be heard upon any matter affecting the interests of the major leagues, or either of them.

Sec. 3. In the case of conduct detrimental to baseball by major leagues, major league clubs, officers, employes or players, punitive action by the Commissioner may in any case take the form of a public reprimand. In the case of a major league or club, the Commissioner may impose a fine not exceeding five thousand ($5,000) dollars for any one offense. In the case of a major league club, punishment may extend to temporary deprivation of representation in joint meetings held under this agreement. In the case of any official or employe of a major league or of any major league club, punishment may extend to suspension or removal. For such conduct, a player may be declared by the Commissioner temporarily or permanently ineligible to play for any club which is a party to this agreement.

Sec. 4. In the case of conduct detrimental to baseball by organizations not parties to this agreement, or by individuals not connected with any of the parties hereto, the Commissioner may pursue appropriate legal remedies, advocate remedial legislation, and take such other steps as he may deem necessary and proper in the interests of the morale of the players and the honor of the game.

Sec. 5. The Commissioner shall hold office for seven (7) years and shall be eligible to succeed himself. His compensation shall be fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars per annum.

Sec. 6. The first Commissioner under this agreement shall be Kenesaw M. Landis. Upon the expiration of his term, or upon his resignation or death during his term, his successor shall be chosen by a vote of the majority of the clubs composing the two major leagues. In the event of failure to elect a successor within three (3) months after the vacancy has arisen, either major league may request the President of the United States to designate a Commissioner, and the person when thus designated shall thereupon become Commissioner with the same effect as if named herein.

Article II. The Advisory Council.

Sec. 1. The Advisory Council is hereby created, to be composed of the Commissioner and the President of each of the major leagues. In case of a division of opinion within the council the decision of the Commissioner shall in all cases be controlling.

Sec. 2. The Advisory Council shall forthwith submit to the major leagues the following proposals for adoption: (a) Rules to govern the playing of the world series games. (b) Rules to regulate all other contests between the major leagues and all matters in which the major leagues have an interest. (c) Rules to determine the relationships between players and clubs, and between clubs, in all cases which concern players or their contracts, a standard form of player's contract, and such other formal documents as may from time to time be deemed desirable.

Sec. 3. The Advisory Council may from time to time propose to the major leagues amendments to any of the foregoing rules, regulations or standard forms.

Sec. 4. The Advisory Council shall recommend to the major leagues from time to time the clerical and administrative expenditures necessary and proper for the discharge of the Commissioner's duties.

Article III. The Secretary-Treasurer.

Sec. 1. The Commissioner shall appoint a Secretary-Treasurer, who shall hold office during the pleasure of the Advisory Council. His duties shall be such as the council shall from time to time determine. His compensation shall be fixed by the council subject to the approval of the major leagues.

Article IV. Uniform Rules.

Sec. 1. Any rules, regulations or standard forms proposed as above by the Advisory Council shall, upon formal acceptance by the major leagues, become binding upon them, and shall not thereafter be amended, except by the concurrent action of both major leagues. The authority of the Commissioner to determine finally a disagreement between major leagues shall extend to the case of a disagreement over a proposed amendment.

Sec. 2. Amendments to rules, regulations or standard forms shall, after they have become operative, be subject to further amendment only as provided in Section 1 of this article.

Article V. Joint Meetings.

Sec. 1. At all joint meetings of the two major leagues, and of their constituent clubs, the Commissioner shall preside.

Sec. 2. Upon all questions of an interleague nature, or in any matter coming up in a joint meeting of the two major leagues, the roll shall be called, and after voting by clubs in each league, if there shall be a division, then the American League shall cast one vote and the National League another vote. Should these two votes be at variance, then the Commissioner shall cast the deciding vote. There shall be no appeal therefrom.

Sec. 3. Joint meetings of the major leagues and of their constituent clubs may be called by the Commissioner upon reasonable notice, and shall be called by him upon such notice whenever he is thereunto requested in writing by the President of either of said leagues.

Article VI. Finances.

Sec. 1. The expenses of the Advisory Council, including the salaries of the Commissioner and of the Secretary-Treasurer, shall be paid by the major leagues, except to the extent that funds sufficient for the purpose are derived from games conducted under the auspices of the council.

Sec. 2. The major leagues, and each of their constituent clubs, shall upon the demand of the council contribute, share and share alike, to meet any deficiency of revenue remaining after the application to expenses of all funds properly applicable thereto.

Article VII. Submission to Jurisdiction of Commissioner.

Sec. 1. The major leagues, and their constituent clubs, severally agree to be bound by the decisions of the Commissioner, and the discipline imposed by him under the provisions of this agreement, and severally waive such right of recourse to the courts as would otherwise have existed in their favor.

Sec. 2. The form of player's contract to be proposed to the major leagues by the Advisory Council, and all contracts between major leagues or clubs and their officers and employes, shall contain a clause by which the parties agree to submit themselves to the discipline of the Commissioner, and to accept his decisions rendered in accordance with this agreement.

Article VIII. Duration of Agreement.

Article IX. Limitation on Amendments.

Sec. 1. Each of the parties hereto subscribes this agreement in consideration of the promises of all the others that no diminution of the compensation or powers of the present or any succeeding Commissioner shall be made during his term of office.

Oxford-Cambridge Harriers Selected for Cornell Race

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The line-up of the British cross-country team which will meet the Cornell runners at Rochampton on Dec. 30 was announced today. It is made up of Cambridge and Oxford distance runners, all of whom have contributed star performances this year, and represent the pick of England's cross-country runners. The team was announced as follows: Oxford, E. A. Montague, N. A. McInnes, W. A. Grave and R. B. Sutton; Cambridge, W. R. Steagrove, W. T. Marsh and E. H. Anderson. Of these Montague is best known to American track fans. He was a member of the Oxford-Cambridge team which went to America for the Penn relays last April. Montague was beaten by Gordon Nightingale in a sensational finish in the three-mile race.

Comment on Current Events in Sports.

It is thirty-one years since Walter Camp selected his first All-American football team, and even now, thirty-one years after, the great indoor amusement still flourishes. Mr. Camp is still selecting his mythical elevens, but each year he has a host of co-workers who, from coast to coast and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, offer their All-American or all-sectional selections for the edification of the public.

It is significant to recall that Mr. Camp's first team, that of 1889, was made up wholly of Harvard, Yale and Princeton players. In those days there were few other teams to which he could turn for all-star material. But the modern critic who essays the formidable and fascinating task of selecting such an eleven finds that his territory is tremendously enlarged, the number of eligible players greatly increased and the difficulty of the task unbelievably complicated by the mushroom growth of modern football.

Instead of three teams, as was the case in 1889, the All-Eastern eleven, as selected by THE NEW YORK TIMES in yesterday's issue, had on it players from eight colleges—Princeton, Harvard, Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Dartmouth, Boston College, Penn State and Washington and Jefferson. On the second team were representatives of three other teams—Yale, Lafayette and Brown. And in addition to these eleven teams there were dozens of others that had to be studied closely from all angles, lest a real star be overlooked or an injustice committed.

There is, of course, no way of knowing whether injustices have crept into the selection despite the most earnest efforts to avoid them. The tendency in announcing an all-star selection is to apologize beforehand for any inaccuracies or bad judgment that may be present, for the compiler of such mythical aggregations knows better than any one else that just exceptions may be taken to his verdict. Fortunately, the public now seems to realize fully that such selections are but a matter of opinion and gives them an amiable reception, however much it may disagree. The old-time fan who wrote burning and indignant letters to the editor is apparently fading away in the past. He has been succeeded by the enthusiast who senses some of the difficulties in the path of the ambitious critic.

In this connection it should be remarked that the various all-star selections varied more widely from one another this year than in many seasons. Last Fall there were from six to eight players who were selected by both Walter Camp and most of his newspaper confreres. With the exception of Keck, Lourie, Urban and Woods, this condition did not obtain this Fall. Broadly speaking, there are two explanations for this wide divergence. First, most of the writers did not, of course, see in action all of the good players in the East. Second, even when they did see the same men play, they differed in their judgments as to comparative ability. And when the doctors disagree, it is apt to be rather painful for the patient, who in this case is the player that was possibly overlooked or placed in lower rank than he deserves.

BASEBALL

In the new order of things in professional baseball, a burden is placed on the Commissioner, Judge Landis, which no other heavily weighted man in public or private life need envy him. Upon him will rest the responsibility, not only of cleansing baseball, the ousting of the chaff from its comfortable resting place amid the wheat, but of keeping it clean thereafter. According to the agreement reported yesterday to the conferring clans in the Hotel Commodore, the task is imposed upon the new executive of " investigating, either upon complaint or upon his own initiative, any act or practice alleged or suspected to be detrimental to the best interests of the national game of baseball, with authority to summon persons and to order the production of documents." The Commissioner is also equipped with weapons to make his power respected in the way of punitive provisions.

It is thus manifest that upon the energy, acumen and earnestness of Judge Landis depends the success of the renovating movement in the great sport of the American nation. He will, to be sure, have behind him the whole-hearted determination of the overwhelming majority of the owners, managers and players that the gambling blight and its attendant unspeakable evils shall disappear forever, and should be able to count upon their sparing no pains to assist him in the crusade. His own qualifications for the task appear to be superb. It will be utterly essential, however, that not only his own two wary eyes, but a million other optics, sweep the horizon constantly in search of weeds that must be uprooted.

In other words, the health of baseball cannot be consigned entirely to the care of one man, no matter how able and eminent, because in the nature of things he will be unable to safeguard each point of possible contagion. The burden will be imposed upon all denizens of the baseball world, high and low, owners, managers, players and fans, to keep their faculties constantly awake to the danger of renewed efforts on the part of the sure-thing maggots to find a snug pasturage in the folds of the organized game, and to do their utmost to aid the newly constituted authorities in their efforts to make the cleaning process not only thorough but of perpetual effect.

BICYCLING

New York's second six-day bicycle race of the current indoor season has passed on, with records for attendance and gate receipts trailing in its wake, and the promoters hesitate in their count of shekels to dream about the third of the series, which is to be held next March. While outsiders look upon these long grinds with considerable amusement and regard the New Yorker pityingly as he enthuses over this form of entertainment, the metropolitan dweller takes his place inside or outside the wooden saucer and waits hours for the thrilling sprint.

The six-day race, through a steady process of elimination, has become an exclusive New York institution. It has been tried on Chicago, Boston, Kansas City, Newark and other cities, and its success, or lack of success, in these cities is patent from the simple fact that the promoters will not go back. Meanwhile the metropolis of the nation appears ready to accept all the six-day racing that may be offered. Two grinds proved successful last Winter when held three months apart, and within the last three weeks Fire Department officials have been called upon several times to order doors barred against thousands who longed to view the spectacle of a week-long race.

Just why thousands will remain until 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning gazing intently on a group of men pedaling their weary way, or speeding in the quest of the elusive lap, is something for the psychologist to answer. Each succeeding race knocks out some of the theories which seemed to explain the peculiarity in the past. These persons are not cycling enthusiasts, as little attention is paid to the numerous cycling events inside or close to the metropolitan district during the open season. They are not particularly interested in certain personages awheel, as was demonstrated last week when most of the riders were total strangers here who had made no great reputations abroad. It cannot be said that the crowds were drawn to a cheap form of amusement, as the prices for the Garden race last week surpassed all figures of the past, and the attendance did likewise.

No longer is it possible for the homeless one to spend most of the week at the Garden on one admission ticket, a common occurrence in the early years of six-day cycling here. The big arena is cleared daily while the race is on, and the euthusiast promptly hies himself to another waiting line, purchases another ticket and goes back, if he is not particular about going home. The idea that one race was all that the six-day fan desired in one year's time has been dissipated, as have most of the other theories about this freak of the sport calendar.

One generation of six-day riders which included Clarke, Rutt, Root, Fogler, Moran, the late Floyd McFarland and others, has passed along. A new one comes on with its Goullet, Madden, Magin, Hill, Kaiser, Eaton and others. This crowd incurs the displeasure of the N. C. A. and is barred from Garden competition, requiring a new set of riders for the usual December grind. The new group comes on and outdraws the greatest fields of the past. Whatever the complexion of the race, whether the cyclists battle on even terms or laps are stolen with frequency, the crowds swarm to the wooden saucer.

Sport usually provides some positive reason for its success or failure, but the whys and wherefores of the six-day race become more and more mysterious as the years roll on.

BOXING

When Frank Moran toppled England's heavyweight champion, Joe Beckett, in defeat in two rounds, he demonstrated beyond question the absolute unfitness of the Briton for consideration as a prospective contender for the world's title. There doubtless will be no further talk of the Englishman's visiting this country in quest of ring honors and the financial return which goes with them. Beckett today is not comparable to some of the insignificant American heavyweights. To attempt a match against Champion Dempsey, Fulton, Wills, Brennan or any of a host of others of lesser ability would be but courting a fatality. Old Jim Savage, out of the ring these many years, could probably jump back into pugilistic harness with two weeks' notice and give Dempsey a more serious argument than could Beckett.

The Frank Moran known to the American boxing public is not a ring man who impresses, excepting in one particular—he is game. His unlimited, dogged courage is the only attribute which has kept him active in the ring to this date. Of science or cleverness or speed Moran knows nothing. He makes not even a pretense at ring knowledge other than to lash out comparatively wildly with crushing blows. He is of the type which absorbs a blow for the opportunity of landing one, and in this he is dangerous. But there have been numerous occasions when Moran absorbed blows by the dozen, waiting for the chance of retaliation which he never did effectively utilize. Fulton battered him into a helpless mass in New Orleans, and Willard, when champion, gave Moran a decisive beating at the Garden. Against other boxers Moran's indomitable courage and his punishment-absorbing faculties have carried him along, but he has never attained rank as a really topnotch heavyweight. This but accentuates the inferiority of Beckett, who holds the British title.

The London triumph of Moran was significant in another respect. It causes speculation as to the ability of Carpentier, who is matched against Dempsey for the world's title bout. The French boxer knocked out Beckett in one round, and the inclination, despite Beckett's assertion that he was "filling in," was to hail Carpentier as a marvel of speed, ring science and hitting strength. This appraisal has suffered seriously, however, since Carpentier's victory over the sluggish Beckett. The first shock to the Carpentier reputation came in the bout against Levinsky, when Americans had a chance to see for themselves. Moran's quick, clean-cut victory over Beckett demonstrates clearly that it is not necessary to be a ring marvel to topple the British champion, whose only pugilistic attribute appears to be physical bulk. A comparison of the two performances naturally ends in the question: "How long will Carpentier stand before the annihilating Dempsey?"

Beckett, before the Moran bout, was contemplating a visit to this country. He wanted, it was reported, more worlds to conquer. If he is properly guided the Briton will remain in England, where there seems little likelihood at present of his encountering any dangerous native contention.

BILLIARDS

Willie Hoppe's superiority as a master of balkline billiards was never more clearly demonstrated than during the final round of the national championship tournament at the Hotel Astor last week. In the past he has invariably far outclassed his rivals and in so doing showed that he was in a class by himself, but the contrast between the finesse of play has not been as forcefully outlined.

In ball to ball billiards, or, in other words, as a shot maker, Welker Cochran and Jake Schaefer, the players who opposed him, proved almost the equal of Hoppe, but that is not the real foundation of balkline playing. It was in position play that the contrast was greatest. In this all-important essential Hoppe far outclassed his two rivals. Hoppe was always looking ahead, as a balkliner should. He knew with an impressive degree of accuracy where the two object balls would rest when he had finished making the point immediately before him. He knew, too, whether he would then be in a position to get the balls out of balk and still continue scoring.

To accomplish these things as Hoppe did second ball play was a leading factor. It is simple enough to stroke the first object ball so that the player will know where it is going to come to a stop, but it is quite another matter to figure just where the cue ball is going to hit the second object ball, whether it will be on the inside or the outside and with what speed. Hoppe's second ball playing was almost perfect, and had it not been for the adverse atmospheric conditions that prevailed throughout most of the matches, there is little doubt that his runs and his averages would have been greater. These conditions militated against the best billiards being played and, of course, seriously affected the playing of Cochran and Schaefer as well.

The contrast in delicate work was particularly marked in the control the players were able to exercise over the balls when they were in the corners. In the open Cochran and Schaefer played just as brilliantly as did the champion, but when it came to the extremely fine work required in governing the action of the ivories in close manipulation there was no comparison. Hoppe proved in this work that he is in a class by himself.

Years ago Hoppe so far outclassed all other players in this country at 18.1 balkline that the game virtually became a dead one in the United States. Few balkline players were willing to match their skill against Hoppe's at this style of play. They realized it was a useless task. A similar condition is rapidly developing at the somewhat easier game of 18.2. Fans go to see championship matches now not because they think Hoppe's opponents have a real chance of beating him, but simply because they are of the opinion that Hoppe has never been forced to extend himself to the limit and they think there may be a chance of some one making him play at top speed.

The one hope now seems to be that Edouard Horemans, the Belgian who has come here to play Hoppe for the world's championship at both styles of play, will be able to amass, while here, the high runs and averages he made while paying in Eulrope.

POLO

When America and Great Britain cross mallets next June for the polo championship of the world both countries will be represented by the cleverest, hardest hitting and riding players available, and both teams will be well mounted, which insures a series of games that are expected to compare favorably with any others that have been played in the past on England's celebrated Hurlingham field, the scene of many memorable polo encounters.

That neither British nor American polo authorities or players possess any great overconfidence is best demonstrated by the thoroughness of the preparatory campaigns mapped out for both teams. British ponies expected to be used in the international matches have been in training or at finishing schools for more than a month, while a consignment of fifty American ponies leaves here for England in a day or so aboard a vessel specially equipped for their safe transport. This will afford plenty of time in which to insure the acclimation of our mounts.

As regards players, the Americans may have somewhat the better of it as to keeping in trim, for nearly all of the selected men expect to play either in Florida or California this Winter and will leave for England early in April to continue practice there. In other years Britain's players have spent the Winters in Southern Europe or in tropical places where Winter polo is possible, but this year they will start on open practice as soon as weather conditions permit, which, in England, may not be much before the American players arrive there.

Although the names of various players have been given as the ones selected to fill certain positions and substitutes also have been named, still it is more than probable that when the two teams line up on June 18 next there will be certain changes from the list as already announced, but, with such a galaxy of stars to select from as L. E. Stoddard, T. Hitchcock Jr., J. Watson Webb, Devereux Milburn, C. C. Rumsey and Earl W. Hopping, it is not difficult to arrange several combinations which might be counted upon to uphold America's honor abroad most satisfactorily.

As to ponies, while America is to be represented by what are supposed to be the very best polo mounts in this country, still there is a chance that our opponents may have a shade the better of us in this respect, though not enough materially to interfere with our chances. In the lot of American ponies are some equal to those to be found anywhere and, as a rule, most players rely chiefly on one or two pet ponies for the major part of their playing and hold the others in reserve, so lack of many supermounts on the part of the American team is not such a great disadvantage after all. As regards the players, no team could be gathered that might be depended upon to play harder than will our mallet wielders to uphold our prestige overseas and bring back the coveted trophy.

POMERENE TAKES ANTILLES STAKES

HAVANA, Cuba, Dec. 12.—The Antilles Stakes, carrying a net value of $2,120 resulted in a victory for Pomerene, second choice, which defeated Different Eyes by a nose. Osgood was third. The six furlongs were covered in the fair time of 1:16 2-5.

Pomerene was fortunate in getting a fast sendaway. Pomerene and Right Angle ran heads apart to the stretch turn, where Right Angle quit. Pomerene went into an easy lead, but, in the last sixteenth, Different Eyes came with a rush and just failed to get up, being beaten by a small margin. The start was very poor, Redland and Liberty Bond being left at the post.

Guardsman scored easily in the opening event, leading All Smoke to the finish by two lengths. Nobleman was third, a length back. Pie won the second race in a drive by a neck, with Gus Scheer second, two lengths in front of White Crown. Sister Susie had little opposition in the third event, winning in clever style by two lengths. View was an easy second, while Zindo was third, four lengths back. Natural won the fourth by a nose. SHERMAN IS FIRST IN HANDICAP RUN

J. Sherman of the Morningside A. C., aided by a handicap of 3 minutes 30 seconds, raced to victory yesterday in the weekly handicap road race of the Harlem and Heights Athletic League, held over a course of about four and one-half miles, starting and finishing in front of the Comet Club's headquarters, in West 126th Street. The Winged M wearer, breaking trail for the greater part of the distance, finished with a lead of about 30 yards on L. Pollack, Glencoe A. C. C. McCann, another Morningside runner, was third, about 30 yards back of Pollack. The victor's time was 25 minutes.

A field of fifteen competitors started in the grind and all finished. The runners with the limit handicap of 3 minutes 45 seconds were headed by Pollack for about three-quarters of a mile, when Sherman moved into the van, and assumed the task of setting the pace. From this point to the finish Sherman held the lead, fighting off all challengers by ambitious harriers to dislodge him. Pollack spurted in the last mile in an effort to change the result, but Sherman retained enough reserve successfully to defend his position, despite his rival's strong closing burst.

Sol Silverstein, Glencoe A. C. harrier, carried off the fast-time laurels. Silverstein started with a handicap of 1 minute and finished fourth, in the actual time of 22:44. The team prize went to the representatives of the Glencoe A. C., who underscored the Harbrook Heights A. C. team by the margin of 19 to 36.

Victor Voteretsas, sturdy Harlem distancer, started in the field as an independent runner, off the 45-second mark. He finished in eleventh position. Because of the fact that he was not a registered member of the Harlem and Heights League, however, Voteretsas's performance was not officially recognized.

ROSS'S TRAINER IS HURT.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 12.—H. Guy Bedwell, trainer for the J. K. L. Ross stable, was injured today on the Ross farm near Laurel when his pony reared and fell backward, pinning Mr. Bedwell between the horn of the saddle and the ground.

Dr. N. B. Stewart of Laurel, who was called, said that Mr. Bedwell's abdomen and leg were badly bruised, but that his injuries probably are not serious. Late this evening it was said that the trainer was resting comfortably.

The animal which threw Mr. Bedwell was a former polo pony, said to have been bought in New York by the veteran horseman, who admired its high spirit. Although a five-year-old, the animal has at times become so intractable that only Mr. Bedwell has been able to manage it.

Mr. Bedwell found it easier to ride the frisky animal with an old-fashioned Western cowboy saddle with a high horn, and to this fact is attributed his failure to land safely when the pony reared and fell. He attempted to leap from the saddle toward his left as the pony rose in the air, but his mount fell in the same direction and the trainer was unable to roll clear of the saddle horn.

BENTLEY AT THE TOP.

Versatile Oriole Leads International League Twirlers.

The official pitching records of the New International League, made public yesterday, indicate clearly that the prowess of Jack Bentley, the Orioles' slugging first baseman, extends also to the confines of the box, for Bentley stands at the head of the array of twirlers who worked in any considerable number of complete games in that circuit. He pitched in 22 games and completed 15 of them, tallying 16 victories against 3 defeats, for an average of .842.

Craft of Toronto deserves at least honorable mention for his achievement in putting 8 winning games on his record without undergoing defeat, but he had no such arduous campaign as McCabe of the Bisons, who occupied the mound in 37 battles and emerged from the fray with 22 victories and only 6 beatings recorded. Werre, also of the Buffalo team, won 10 and lost 3 in the season's course.

Shea of the Maple Leaf staff had a notable year. He took part in 43 games and finished 25 of them. His 27 victories and 7 defeats gave him an average of .794. Kneisch of the pennant-winning Orioles won 11 and lost 4 for a mark of .733.

Holy Name Beats Newburg Five.

In a basketball game that was close enough to provide excitement throughout its course, the Holy Name Big Five defeated Newburg yesterday afternoon at the Manhattan Casino by a score of 35 to 28. At half time the Holy Name team was leading by 14 to 12. McDermott and Garland starred for the victors and Schilling and Pinkney did particularly excellent service for Newburg.

HEMINWAY TWICE VICTOR AT SQUASH

Only three matches were played yesterday afternoon in the continuation of the national handicap squash tennis tournament, under auspices of the national association at the courts of the Harvard Club. One of the matches was a third-round encounter between E. H. Heminway of the Harvard Club and his clubmate, G. G. Zabriskie. Heminway, conceding Zabriskie four aces, won in two straight games, 15—8, 15—6, without having greatly to extend himself.

Heminway had more trouble winning his second round match yesterday from E. P. Pierce, another Harvard Club player, with whom he started even. Heminway captured the opening game handily enough, at 15—12, despite the fact that Pierce was close upon his trail all the way. But the second game was able to score. Pierce set the game ball hard, and there were numerous long rallies. In many of their innings neither was able to score. Pierce set the pace at 13, and, in the extra points, the outcome was in doubt up to the last stroke, Heminway finally winning at 18—17.

In the only other match of the afternoon, R. H. Monks, who is one of the best of the Princeton Club's Class B players, conquered his fellow-Princetonian, Jarvis Cromwell. This match was also decided in straight games, though both of them were stubbornly contested. Cromwell had an advantage of two aces over Monks in the handicapping.

The summaries:

First Round—R. H. Monks, Princeton Club (plus 4), defeated Jarvis Cromwell, Princeton Club (plus 6), 18—14, 15—9.

Second Round—E. H. Heminway, Harvard Club (plus 4), defeated E. P. Pierce, Harvard Club (plus 4), 15—12, 18—17.

Third Round—Heminway defeated G. G. Zabriskie, Harvard Club (plus 8), 15—8, 15—6.

THE REAL SITUATION IN FRANCE.
A great deal has been written on the subject of the military strength of France and her aspirations. This subject is taken up by a distinguished European publicist in the December CURRENT HISTORY MAGAZINE, and is treated from knowledge and familiarity with the situation. It is an important contribution to current history. This is one of forty features in the December number, profusely illustrated, on news stands. —Advt.

FRANK TROEH HEADS AMATEUR MARKSMEN

WARD HIGH AMONG PROS

Frank M. Troeh of Vancouver, Wash., is the leading amateur trapshooter of the country, according to the bulletin just issued by the American Trapshooting Association giving the ranking of the ten high men in both the amateur and professional classes for the season of 1920. The professional class is headed by Guy Ward of East Alton, Ill. Troeh's average of .9752 was high for both classes, exceeding that of Ward by a narrow margin. Ward's average was .9726.

The records of the association indicate that 10,000 trapshooters participated in one or more of the 499 registered tournaments during the last season, which came to an official ending on Nov. 25 and 26 with the tournament of the Houston Gun Club at Houston, Texas. The complete records of the A. T. A., continuing the standing of the marksmen beyond the first ten, will be published early in the new year.

In the list of ten leading amateurs it is interesting to note that eight of the ten claim a residence west of the Mississippi. The East is represented only by Fred Harlow of Newark, Ohio, who is No. 2 on the list, and by Mark Arie of Champaign, Ill., who is tied for third and fourth places with C. A. Gunning of Longmont, Cal.

Frank Troeh made good his rightful claim to the leading position by his records in tournaments contested in all parts of the country. He shot at 8,880 registered targets and broke 8,660 of them. In addition to this victorious showing in the United States, Troeh won the English clay bird championship at the Middlesex Gun Club's grounds in London last July, when he was abroad with the United States Olympic team of trapshooters.

Record Average for Three Years.

In 1918, Troeh shot at 6,845 targets for an average of .9762, and in 1919 at 6,745 targets for an average of .9762. For the last three seasons his grand totals are: Shot at, 22,470; broke, 21,900. This gives him a grand average for the three consecutives seasons of .9746, a record which has never before been equaled.

Fred Harlow of Newark, Ohio, the 1920 champion of that State, who is second on the list, was No. 1 in 1916 and No. 3 in 1917. His average in 1916 was .9771 on 2,010 targets, and in 1917 it was .9729 on 2,030 targets. In 1918 and again in 1919 he did not shoot at enough registered targets (2,000) to qualify for an official average, but in 1918 he averaged .9506 for 750 targets shot at, and in 1919 his average was .9564 on 850 targets. He has, therefore, been knocking around the top for some years past.

Mark Arie of Champaign, Ill., and C. A. Gunning of Longmont, Col., are tied for third and fourth places, both having an average of .9681. Arie is not only the 1920 State champion of Illinois, but also the winner of the Olympic world's championship at Antwerp, which title he annexed at the Olympic games last July. He also held the Illinois championship in 1917 and 1919, or three times out of the last four tries in open competition.

Gunning Colorado Champion.

C. A. Gunning, who stands tied with Arie for third and fourth places, is the 1920 Colorado State champion, having won that title at Greeley, in the State shoot-off June 18-20 last, with a score of 292 out of 300, against the 291 scored by R. A. King of Delta, Col., who had previously held the Colorado championship in 1915, '16, '17 and '18. In 1913, Gunning won the Interstate Association's Western Handicap at Omaha, with 100 straight from nineteen yards.

Among the professionals are three who have averaged 97 per cent. or better. Guy Ward of East Alton, Ill., leads with an average of .9726 on 6,425 targets. J. R. Jahn of Long Grove, Iowa, is second, with .9711, and Jay R. Graham of Ingleside, Ill., third with .9701. Jahn has shot at 5,360 targets and Graham at 5,520.

The ten high amateurs and the ten high professionals for 1920, with their complete records, are as follows:

A field of nine distance runners, with but one exception members of the home club, started yesterday in the seven-and-one-half-mile invitation road race held over the Mohawk Trail in the Bronx under the auspices of the Mohawk A. C. James McGuinness, after leading the pack practically from start to finish, flashed home a winner in 40:28. As he raced past the judges McGuinness was leading Fred Travalena, a clubmate, by a margin of more than 250 yards. Travalena's time was 41:25.

Max Silver, track Captain of the Mohawk A. C., announced after the race that the organization would conduct an extensive invitation race next Sunday, and, at the same time, a separate race for members of the club. The distance in both races will be about five miles.

James McGuinness, Mohawk A. C., 40:28; Fred Travalena, Mohawk A. C., 41:25; S. Weiss, Mohawk A. C., 41:28; J. Warose, St. Anselm's A. C., 42:30; M. J. Dwyer, Mohawk A. C., 42:29; W. Boak, Mohawk A. C., 44:54; E. Naylor, Mohawk A. C., 45:03; J. Reno, Mohawk A. C., 46:02; J. Russo, Mohawk A. C., 46:03.

SCHAPIRO WINS AT CHESS.

Morris Schapiro, star chess player at Columbia University, made an auspicious début yesterday in the annual championship tournament of the Manhattan Chess Club by winning his first game from A. Hallgarten.

Hallgarten started with the queen's pawn opening. Schapiro obtained the upper hand when he won a rook by means of a complicated combination which enabled him to lay a trap. The game lasted forty moves. Hallgarten made amends by winning his second game from O. W. Field.

David Janowski of Paris opened his account with a brilliant victory over R. Pokorny, and Alfred Schroeder defeated L. W. Palmer. R. T. Black scored at the expense of G. E. Northrup, and the game between G. J. Beihoff and Dr. E. Sokal was adjourned.

Dodge Is Elected Captain of the Cornell 1921 Eleven

ITHACA, N. Y., Dec. 12.—Wilson S. Dodge of Cleveland, Ohio, left tackle of the Cornell football team, today was elected Captain of the 1921 eleven. Dodge, who has been a member of the varsity team for two years, is 6 feet 5½ inches in height, and is said to be one of the tallest men in college football ranks.

The election of Dodge shows a reversal at Cornell of Coach Dobie's policy of the past season, which has been against a captain for the football team.

N. Y. A. C. SHOOT IS WON BY DONNELLEY

A small field of gunners made excellent scores in the week-end shoot of the New York Athletic Club at Travers Island yesterday. The high scratch prize was won by Ben L. Donnelley, the former Chicago champion, who is now shooting regularly over the Winged Foot traps. He took the cup with the excellent total of 97 out of a possible 100 targets. The race for the high handicap prize ended in a tie between E. M. Alexander and G. F. Hutchings. Each had full scores of 100 targets. On the shoot-off the prize was taken by the first-named gunner.

The weekly leg on the Buermeyer Cup, a fifty-bird scratch shoot, ended in a tie between A. E. Ranney and B. L. Donnelley. There also was a handicap special won by R. F. Rice. In the Tournament Cup race R. L. Spotts ran straight, and T. H. Lawrence turned a similar trick in the shoot for the Byronel prize. Straights in the President Cup shoot were made by A. E. Ranney and B. L. Donnelley. R. F. Rice ran straight in the shoot for the Lyon prize.

AICKELIN BIKE WINNER.

Eugene Aickelin, New England Wheelmen cyclist, showed the way yesterday in the twenty-eight-mile invitation scratch race conducted by the New England Wheelmen, over a course which started at 181st Street and Jerome Avenue and proceeded to Hartsdale, N. Y., and returned to 161st Street and Grand Concourse. Aickelin, getting through a pack of thirty-five rivals early in the chase, set the pace over the greater part of the journey and finished a winner in 1 hour 27 minutes 50 seconds. As he completed his ride Aickelin enjoyed a comfortable margin on E. C. Bendi, Unione Sportiva Italiana rider, who finished second. T. R. Urbach, New England Wheelmen, third.

The victory of Aickelin aided materially in bringing the team prize to the New England Wheelmen. The organization's combination, with riders finishing in first, third, fifth, sixth and tenth positions, returned the low winning total of 25 tallies.

Eugene Aickelin, New England Wheelmen, 1:27:50; E. C. Bendi, Unione Sportiva Italiana, second; T. Urbach, New England Wheelmen, third; R. Zimmerman, Acme Wheelmen, fourth; F. Osterhammel, New England Wheelmen, fifth; W. Auff, New England Wheelmen, sixth; A. Decresendo, Unione Sportiva Italiana, seventh; J. Pefiso, Unione Sportiva Italiana, eighth; P. Lacetti, Acme Wheelmen, ninth; N. Duberg, New England Wheelmen, tenth.

WILL PAY CYCLISTS TODAY.

McNamara and Egg to Receive $1,800 for Garden Sprint Victories.

The cyclists who competed in the late six-day bike race at Madison Square Garden will be paid off this morning at the Garden, according to an announcement yesterday by John M. Chapman, one of the managers of the race. Chapman stated he would begin the work of paying the riders at 11 o'clock this morning. Information on the amounts the cyclists will receive was not available, but Manager Chapman declared that throughout the week $6,000 had been offered in "primes" for independent sprints. In the riding for this additional cash the team of Reggie McNamara and Oscar Egg was the most successful. They pedaled to $1,800 worth of sprint victories.

Promoter Tex Rickard and Manager Chapman have signed contracts for races to be held in the Garden next March and December. The dates of the races have not been determined. Chapman, as representative of the Cycle Racing Association, has been appointed to manage the next two races and has been delegated by Promoter Rickard to sign representative fields for the two grinds.

The European riders, or a majority of them, will begin the journeys to their respective homes abroad Wednesday. Manager Chapman plans to make arrangements with the most formidable of the array of foreign riders to participate in the next two races at the Garden.

STECHER AND LEWIS IN BOUT FOR TITLE

Heavyweight Wrestlers Will Meet on Mat Tonight at the 71st Regiment Armory.

The ownership of the world's wrestling championship title will be fought out tonight at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory in a finish match of Legs vs. Arms. On the cards the struggle is between Joe Stecher, present holder of the title, and Ed (Strangler) Lewis. But as the champion depends upon his nether extremities, in a crushing scissors hold, to win, and the Strangler banks on the powerful headlock which he achieves with his upper tentacles, Legs vs. Arms is the true way to characterize the contestants.

Stecher has won over Lewis in the past, and decisively, although in their memorable bout of last year Joe had to struggle through three fierce hours of sensational grappling before he could pin his opponent's shoulders to the mat. In that match Lewis frequently used the deadly arm vise of the headlock, and two minutes before the champion won the decision he had Stecher staggering and groggy. And then Stecher managed to wind his legs about the Strangler's body in the vicious scissors hold and accomplished the throw of his adversary which gave him the victory. Can the champion do it again this year?

Lewis believes—and says—that Stecher is not going to repeat. The challenger has further perfected the grip on the cranium since last year. Every match he has been in so far he has won with it. A few weeks ago he beat Zbyszko with it. The giant Pole showed all the skill he had, and it was considerable, but finally the unrelenting, remorseless tightening of those arms of steel about his head were too much for him, and he had to give way. Zbyszko is quoted as having said after the match that Lewis's headlock was unbelievably deadly. And as the outcome of the little affair between Lewis and Stecher last year proves the crushing, conquering power of the titleholder's scissors—well, boys, it's going to be one famous struggle, that's all.

Stecher came on from his ranch in Nebraska about a week ago and has been training ever since at Bothner's gymnasium, where Lewis has also been training. Not that the Westerner is ever really out of practice, for this master of the mat game lives the ruggedest sort of outdoor life all the year long. Stecher is a great believer in the outdoor regimen to keep a man in condition. And that is why the giant may have been seen almost any day the last week hiking about Central Park, breathing in gallons of ozone, and getting the last "pink" to his condition.

Under the rules, it will be a finish test. The wrestlers are to catch as catch can, so that when all is over and done there can arise no question as to the superiority of the winner, whichever one it shall prove to be. It will make no difference whether the match consumes five minutes or five hours, it will go on until Referee Bothner proclaims one or the other the winner—until he awards the victory to Legs or to Arms. It is going to be a match to arouse the mat fans, that is certain.

On the armory card also for tonight is scheduled the first appearance on the professional mat of Nathaniel G. Pendelton, holder of the amateur wrestling title. Pendleton, who is a college graduate and a member of the New York Athletic Club, took part in the Olympic Games last Summer at Antwerp. The American got to the wrestling finals, and won the referee's decision over Roth, the Swedish representative. The judges, however, overruled the award. Manager Curley has Pendleton's permission to choose any one he likes for his opponent.

ROBINS SOCCERS WIN.

While the protest of the New York Football Club in connection with the first soccer cup match with Robins Dry Dock was sustained by the American Football Association, it was effectually overridden in the replay at New York Oval yesterday, when the ship repairers from Brooklyn notched a victory by the decisive score of 3 goals to 1. The defeat of New York advances the dockers to the fourth round of the tourney.

A most remarkable shot by Page, the Robin's left back, who met the ball about midfield, with a drop kick brought in the first goal of the game after ten minutes of play. The ball headed straight for New York's goal posts and, completely deceiving the custodian, entered the net by dropping just under the cross bar. McDonald of New York, equalized off a pass by McGreevey ten minutes later.

The Robins took the lead half an hour from the start when Ratican scored from a mixup. With five minutes to go, Hosie landed a long shot from thirty yards out. New York pressed strenuously throughout the second period, but without avail.

The lineup:

Brownlee	R. B.	Kelly
Beardsworth	R. H. B.	Bell
Clarke	C. H. B.	Bustard
Sundberg	L. H. B.	Bleich
McKelvey	O. R.	McDonald
Sturch	I. R.	Phillips
Ratican	C.	Hardy
Hosie	I. L.	Mackie
Irvine	O. L.	McGreevey

Tebo Yacht Basin soccers took the lead in the New York State Football League yesterday by defeating the Brooklyn Football Club by 6 goals to 2 at Todd Field, after leading by 1—0 in the first half.

Edmondson scored in a clean breakaway ten minutes from the start. Brooklyn tied the score soon after change of ends, when McChesnie found Tebo's net and then assumed the lead with T. Whalen's successful effort. After that the Brooklyns went completely to pieces, having no less than five goals scored against them in the space of ten minutes. Fryer converted a corner kick by Puxty, Pepper, former Bethlehem star, and Edmondson added one apiece, after which Mitchell turned in a pass by Pepper. With help from Edwards, Mitchell shot the last goal.

Two thousand spectators, watching the Metropolitan League game between the Tyrconnel Celts and Calpe-Americans at Taft's Oval, in Brooklyn, became restive five minutes from the end, as two of the opposing players stopped a bit to discuss a difference of opinion. Referee J. Cunningham thereupon called the game, and awarded it to the Celts, who were leading by 3—1. The Calpe-Americans led off when Roden, the Celts's fullback, turned the ball into his own net. Soon after, Roddin in the forward line equalized. Hackett scored twice for the Tyrconnel Celts in the second period.

A hard-fought National League soccer game at Olympic Park, Paterson, between the Paterson Football Club and the Federal Shipyards, ended in favor of Paterson by 4—3. At half time, the home team was leading by 3—1. Burns shot two of the goals for the winners. M. Jameson, S. Jameson and Brierley scored a point each for the Federals.

The drawings for the fourth round of the annual cup competition of the American Football Association were announced yesterday by Andrew N. Beveridge, the secretary. The schedule calls for four games, the winners of which will enter the semi-finals. Games must be played on or before Dec. 26.

Bethlehem against Robins Dry Dock.
J. and P. Coats F. C. against Fore River F. C. or General Electric F. C.

ELKHART, Md., Dec. 12.—A purse of $800, contributed by Newark, N. J., boxing fans and friends of the late Ray McMillan (Mickey Shannon), was presented yesterday to the widowed mother of the boxer, who died from injuries received in a bout at Jersey City last Monday night.

EX-COLLEGE STARS BEATEN.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 12.—An eleven of former college stars, largely from Syracuse, was today beaten at Weiss Field before 5,000 persons by the Williams Athletic Club team of this city, 14 to 7. Excepting in the opening five minutes of play, when former Captain Robertson of Syracuse seized a fumbled pass and ran fifty yards for the only score tallied by the visitors, they were never dangerous. Their team game was crude, but Purdy of Brown and Higgins of Syracuse executed several clever forward passes. Delaney of Notre Dame and Calhoun of Michigan starred in the line for the collegians.

McCarthy to Lead Lehigh Eleven.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Dec. 12.—Raymond McCarthy, a junior at Lehigh University, has been elected captain of the football team for 1921. McCarthy comes from Easton and plays a guard position.

GARDEN MADE READY FOR DEMPSEY BOUT

Madison Square Garden is now being transformed from a cycling to a boxing centre. A force of carpenters and laborers is engaged on the task of eliminating signs of the late six-day bicycle race and making the famous old amphitheatre commodious for the accommodation of the Garden's boxing patrons. The work is progressing rapidly and is expected to be completed this noon. The cause for the speed in this particular instance is the importance of the occasion, for the laborers and carpenters are making the historic arena ready for housing the most important boxing bout since the Walker law re-established the sport here. Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, will clash with Knockout Bill Brennan of Chicago in a bout scheduled for fifteen rounds to a decision at the Garden tomorrow night.

Almost before the echo of the last pistol shot had died in the recesses of the big arena Saturday night, the laborers with their saws, hammers, crowbars and other implements of warfare were demonstrating just how effectively these tools could be used for destruction as well as construction. The saucer shaped cycling track was soon removed and with remarkable speed other evidences of the six-day grind disappeared. Before dusk last night the Garden flooring had been installed and the task of replacing the seats for boxing purposes was begun. Promoter Tex Rickard has gangs working in three shifts and expects the reconstruction work will be entirely completed this afternoon.

Both boxers have about completed their strenuous training work and will indulge in only light exercise in the time intervening until they enter the ring. Dempsey, feeling fine and fit after more than five weeks of intensive training, took things easy yesterday and did not go near the gymnasium apparatus on board the U. S. training ship Granite State, where the champion has been conditioning himself. The title holder early yesterday morning jogged for a short distance over the roads of Central Park, and on his return idled about his uptown apartment. After lunch he went away on a hike of slightly more than four miles and upon his return home lounged about the apartment. The champion declared himself in excellent shape and announced that he will engage in only light gymnasium work today and will be idle tomorrow, awaiting the gong which will send him against Brennan Tuesday night at the Garden.

Brennan, likewise, did little work yesterday, although he journeyed to Grupp's Gymnasium, where he engaged in limbering-up exercises and calisthenics. The challenger declared himself satisfied with his condition and his appearance reflected a satisfactory physical state. Brennan appears improved in physical appearance and expects to be faster against Dempsey than ever before in his ring career. The Chicagoan has been devoting considerable time to developing his punching power and his delivery.

The Garden presented a busy scene yesterday, when Promoter Rickard and his staff of assistants worked throughout the day on detail work in connection with the bout. Ticket sellers were in their booths as on week days and the distributers were on duty from 9 in the morning until 5 last night. Promoter Rickard himself stepped into the arena to view the progress of the work of transforming the Garden into a fistic centre.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Such doubt and disappointment as prevailed last week in the financial community arose mainly from the fact that the tension on credit had appreciably relaxed, that the urgent Wall Street liquidation to escape disaster had apparently ended with November, that even the large speculators for the decline had begun to repurchase securities and merchandise, and yet that prices continued to fall rapidly on the Stock Exchange. The immediate necessities of the money market may have had some hand in this. Payment this week of fully $600,000,000 on the income taxes, coming together with heavy short-term borrowing by the Government and preceding by only a fortnight or so the troublesome year-end settlements, would under any circumstances prevent such aggressive support of other markets as would require the use of credit.

If the financial markets had merely stood still as a consequence of this condition, they would have repeated the attitude taken in a busy December money situation on many previous occasions. But the character of the weakness in last week's markets has made the matter more perplexing. Events of the past two years have proved plainly enough that prices are largely a result of the buying and selling community's imagination, which may carry them and for a long time hold them at a level which the result shows to have been unwarrantably high. The same imagination may carry prices unwarrantably low.

It will sometimes be useless even to talk of intrinsic values or the supply-and-demand situation when supply which would ordinarily be only normal is made excessive by the necessities of holders and demand is influenced by a fixed idea of consumers as to the level of prices, above which they will not buy except for actually pressing needs. The interplay of these two forces is visible in many of our markets; notably in wheat, whose apparently senseless alternate ten-cent advances and ten-cent declines cannot be explained in any other possible way. But large movements on the Stock Exchange are more complex, and it is not at all surprising that last week's action of prices should have caused some new views of the general situation.

It is not only the teaching of all experience, but particularly the lesson of the last twelve or thirteen months, that the stock market, however its day-by-day fluctuations may be influenced by momentary causes, gives as sure a forecast nowadays as it ever did regarding the financial and industrial future. It is not always easy to infer precisely what shape the fulfillment of the forecast will assume, but at least the trend of coming events and the general nature of the resultant situation will be indicated. We know now that the great November collapse on the Sttock Exchange in 1919 correctly foreshadowed the tightening of credit and the severe preliminary reaction in commodity markets which came in the next four or five months. The attempt at renewal of stock speculation for the rise last March might be regarded as an advance notice of the attempt by merchants and producers in the later Spring months to hold back their goods and put prices up again after the first reductions. The second and very violent decline on Wall Street last April—not followed by any sustained recovery and leading to unmistakable embarrassment of speculators who had bought stocks a month before—was the market's warning of what was destined to happen with industry and industrial prices in the Autumn.

There is nothing occult in this prophetic faculty; it simply means that business foresight, financial experience and personal knowledge of conditions below the surface are reflected in the investment market because that market is governed by the genuine purchases or sales of people who can see what is actually happening in trade. That is why it is now being asked uneasily what the present stock market foreshadows.

It is difficult to draw any other inference from its general character than that recovery from the existing trade reaction will be more slow and the period of business unsettlement and depression more prolonged than was very lately hoped. The economic readjustment has assumed a scope which nobody predicted, even those who were most skeptical over the inflated prices of merchandise twelve months ago. Bradstreet estimates that 60 per cent. of the rise in average commodity prices in this country between July, 1914, and the early months of 1920 has been canceled by the decline of the past nine months. It is true that the highest average of this year was nearly 140 per cent. above that of 1914 whereas the advance up to the armistice month was only 116. The markets were confronted not only with the actual wartime rise of prices, but with the monstrous inflation on a credit basis after the war was over. The present month's average is only back at that of December, 1916, which was 57 per cent. above July, 1914. Nevertheless, even this partial readjustment has profoundly unsettled trade and industry; the unsettlement being apparently proportioned in its severity and duration, not only to the actual fall in prices but to the recklessness with which credit had been abused in 1919.

Thanks largely to the Reserve Board's timely warnings and restrictions, we have escaped the great financial crisis, but to suppose that the markets and the business community could escape also a great part of the distress and forced liquidation which used to follow one of our old-fashioned panics was to indulge in a delusion unwarranted by experience. As in the case of the "after-panic readjustments," our economic position will be infinitely stronger and safer when the process is completed. There is, however, no warrant for thinking it completed as yet; apparently many months will pass before the tied-up credit, the "protected holdings" of commodities and securities and the [illegible] return of [illegible] values can be reasonably anticipated. Pre[illegible] what form will be taken by industrial and financial developments in a period of the sort can never be surely prophesied. That depends not only on actual conditions below the surface in the existing credit market, but on the attitude of consumers during the next few months, the movement of foreign trade, the course of legislation and the character, prospective or actual, of the harvests. It is these economic obscurities and uncertainties which the Stock Exchange is indicating. It will be even more quick, however, to indicate trustworthy evidence of a coming change for the better.

The Railroads Under the New Law

Their Improved [illegible]

IN A SPECIAL PAMPHLET we discuss the question of rate increases, property values and capitalization, margin of earnings beyond interest requirements, how the Transportation Act affects both the small earner and the large earner, and the provision under that Act for the consolidation of railway properties into a limited number of large systems. The Pamphlet is accompanied by a Trunk Line Railway Map showing in distinctive colors the main lines of the more important systems, and the different railroad rate zones as defined by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Oklahoma Oil Production

The average daily production of the Oklahoma oil fields for the month of October was 316,340 bbls. from a total of 49,966 wells, or an average of a little over 6.3 bbls. to the well. This State continues to show a steadily increasing production, as many of the older districts are showing up with deeper sands. This deeper drilling has proven the salvation of Oklahoma, and the State still holds its commanding position as an oil producer.

The Hewitt pool in Carter County, while recently reporting a slight falling off in daily production, is no doubt the most important and successful development in the past year.

ONLY PIPE DEFIES RECENT STEEL CUTS

RAILS NOT SO BIG A FACTOR

B. & O.'s 85,000-Ton Order May Foreshadow 1,500,000-Ton Demands by All the Roads.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 12.—The United States Steel Corporation's unfilled obligations decrease, during November, of 815,371 tons, represents about 61 per cent. of the corporation's capacity for the month. The shipments may be estimated at 89 per cent. of capacity, against 87 per cent. in October and 85 per cent. in September. The difference between the shipments and the decrease in unfilled obligations in November represents the net bookings, which thus appear to have been about 28 per cent. of capacity—with cancellations allowed for, the total November bookings were somewhat in excess of 28 per cent. of capacity. Considering conditions, the showing is a favorable one for the Steel Corporation, in that it booked new business in excess of cancellations. Independents probably booked scarcely any new business and had many cancellations.

The monthly report on steel ingot production prepared by the American Iron and Steel Institute shows an output in November by the thirty companies reporting of 2,638,670 gross tons, this comparing with an output in each of the three preceding months of almost precisely 3,000,000 tons. About 15 per cent. of the productive capacity does not make monthly reports. Since the corporation had at least as large an output in November as in the immediately preceding months, the November decrease was on the part of independents', and, allowing for a decrease on the part of those not reporting, the month's decrease in the industry as a whole was about 15 per cent. With the Steel Corporation's output undiminished, the independent production declined about 28 per cent. As the decrease in independent mill operations has been continuous, the present independent rate is still lower, probably about 50 per cent.

The difference is due almost wholly to the fact that the Steel Corporation adhered to the Industrial Board prices while the independents quoted much higher prices, and when the pressure for deliveries disappeared had little business on their books.

Sheets Prices Fall.

In the past week sheets have been added to the list of finished steel products in which the independent market has declined to the Steel Corporation level, prices being uniform in both markets at $3.55 for blue annealed sheets, 10 gauge; $4.35 for black sheets, 28 gauge, and $5.70 for galvanized sheets, 28 gauge. Pipe alone now presents two markets. The demand has been excellent to date and the independents are still able to maintain their list prices at about $7 a ton over the Steel Corporation list.

The merchant pig iron market remains stagnant. After the first of the year a resumption in buying is expected, though on a hand-to-mouth basis. Foundry iron is quotable $2 lower in the week, $35, valley, Bessemer remaining quotable at $35 and basic at $33. The spot coke market is quite as stagnant, and very few transactions have turned up, and these at $7.50, while some slightly inferior grades of coke have been offered at $6 without finding takers. Buying in spot foundry coke continues to slow down. The spot market is quotable as follows: Furnace, $7@$7.50; foundry, $8@$8.50. The scrap market has undergone a further decline. Dealers would pay $15 to $16 for heavy melting steel, delivered Pittsburgh district, for putting into yard against the eventual development of considerably higher prices. Dealers expect scrap to sell at between $20 and $25 on the next rise.

Rails Not the "Only" Factor.

That the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad is buying 83,000 tons of rails is going the rounds of the press as if this represented a great deal of activity in steel generally. Such a tonnage for the Baltimore & Ohio would hardly suggest more than, say, 1,500,000 tons of rails purchased by all the roads, and that is probably about what is to occur. Such a tonnage is about equal to the annual tonnage of tin plate, a light commodity compared with rails, to half the tonnage of wire rods and structural shapes made in a year, while in three years the production of merchant bars has been four times 1,500,000 tons. The old idea that rails are the great steel commodity dies hard.

Chain remains quotable at 7.25 cents, base, but a reduction is expected to be made by the leading chain interest, others following suit, and some announcement is likely in the near future. There is no demand to speak of at the moment.

Some of the spike makers have come down to the Steel Corporation price of 3.65c on the standard railroad spikes, and this figure may now be quoted as the general market. The Steel Corporation price is made by the Illinois Steel Company, the corporation not making spikes in this district, but the 3.65c price is Pittsburgh basis. The equalization of the market it likely to be followed by the placing of two or three railroad orders for a total of a few tens of thousands of kegs, which have been in the market for some time, awaiting a satisfactory price. On small spikes in general the basis price is now 4.50c—particularly small sizes, higher. Some producers are quoting 5-16 inch at 5.25c, base.

While the regular or official quotation on structural rivets is 4.50c, with boiler at 4.60c, there is considerable shading. A 4.35c price, done some time ago on a large lot, can now be done on a very medium sized order. A general reduction, however, to a level not above 4.00c, is expected eventually.

There is scarcely any business going in the open market in bars, shapes and plates. The recent reduction of the independent mills quite generally to the Steel Corporation level did not stimulate buying. It is a question now as to how long all the independents will adhere to the reduced prices. It has been a common view for some time past that whenever the independents come down to the corporation's level they next shade the prices.

Sheet Market Quotations.

The independent sheet market is now quotable at the Steel Corporation level, 3.55c. for blue annealed, 4.35c. for black and 5.70c. for galvanized, but demand is light. If sheet contracts made by the independents were of the same character as is common in various other finished steel products, tacitly understood to be subject to readjustment in case of declines, it would make a great difference whether all or only a few producers were quoting the minimum prices, for on this would hinge whether or not the customer had a good case for an adjustment. But with the contract that the sheet manufacturers have, the mill can only claim damages if the market declines.

Although the leading interest formally opened its order books last week, there is so much adjusting to do that the reporting of actual bookings is slow. On an average there will be carried over about three months of business into the new year; and as it is over seven months since contracts for the present half year were made, various customers find their requirements altered, as between the various products, so that they may take more of one product and less of another, in order to round out the period to July 1. The leading interest has an excellent order book in galvanized. The independent plants are operating very irregularly, some being in almost full operation while some are closed or nearly closed, and there is considerable variation from week to week. As a general average it is doubtful whether the independents are doing above 60 per cent. The leading interest operated 82 per cent. of its sheet mills last week, on an average, being still short of steel at some points. In November the leading interest had the heaviest shipments of sheets since last March, due in part to the movement of stocks held back by car shortages and embargoes.

Tin Plate on $7 Basis.

Some of the independent tin plate mills are understood to have made some first quarter sales lately, all the business being on the $7 basis. It is reported that some tin plate is available at a lower price, but this is probably only in odd lots from stock. The market as a whole is neither above nor below the standard $7, which was reaffirmed by the leading interest last week when it opened its order books for the first half of the new year. The booking of contracts is proceeding more in keeping with the record of ordinary times than like the rush to cover that characterized the openings of a half year and a year ago, respectively. As about three months of business, on an average, will be carried over Jan. 1, the contracts will really be for only half of the half year, some deliveries on new contracts being scheduled to begin late in March and some in April. The leading interest operated on an average of a trifle more than 80 per cent. of its tin mills last week, the shortage of steel continuing, and seem to be doing no better this week. In the last three weeks some independents have almost run out of business, at least two large plants being closed last week, with another large plant operating as low as 5 per cent. of capacity. However, one large independent is operating nearly full, so that a fair guess would be that on the whole the independent tin plate mills are operating at less than 60 per cent.

MAY PREPAY CABLE REPLIES

A ruling on the question of prepayment of replies to cable messages from this city has been obtained by the Merchants' Association, as a result of an inquiry addressed to the six cable and wireless companies operating out of New York. In a letter S. C. Mead, Secretary of the association, asked whether "it is the uniform practice of cable companies in New York not to permit the sender of a message from New York City to a foreign country to provide for a paid reply, either with or without specifying the number of words to be included in the reply message."

A denial came from the companies, and George Clapperton, Traffic Manager of the Commercial Cable Company, added:

"Senders are discouraged from sending prepaid reply messages to countries suffering from political unrest for the reason that they may fail to get a reply and be unable to obtain the return of the prepayment. In countries where there is political disturbance the telegraph administration of those countries give notice that messages are only accepted at the sender's risk and that no inquiries can be answered. This is provided for in the internationatl convention and service regulations. Senders will find no difficulty in sending messages reply prepaid to countries where there is no disorder, nor will any commercial cable office decline to accept a prepaid message if the sender insist that it be accepted at his risk."

HYLAN APPEALS FOR FRANCE

Mayor Hylan issued a proclamation urging a generous response by the people of the city to the appeal for funds by the American Committee for Devastated France to aid in the rehabilitation of the sections of that country ravaged by war. The proclamation, in part, follows:

"The American Committee for Devastated France finds its humanitarian work has grown beyond its resources. The committee, composed largely of New York men and women, has worked for more than three years in the war-ruined regions. It has brought hope, opportunity and a fresh start in life to more than fifty thousand inhabitants. Of this number 10,000 are little children, who have been provided with medical care, schools and the necessities of life.

"The work of the committee must be carried on, for there are still tens of thousands of citizens to be saved for France. New Yorkers fought to save France during the World War. Let us continue to stand by her to rehabilitate the devastated regions. Our Christmas will be the happier when we have done our part to uphold New York's reputation as the most generous city in the world.

SAVES $2,912,465,898 ON WAR CONTRACTS

Special to the New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The contractual obligations of the War Department at the time of the armistice have been scaled down to the point where the sum of $473,415,993.94 has been approved for payment in partial and final settlement according the announcement made tonight by Secretary of War Baker. The War Department claims to have effected a net saving of $2,912,465,898.85 in cancelling outstanding obligations of contracts and claims settled from Jan. 1, 1918, to Nov. 1, 1920.

The War Department claims the board, which has been handling this work, has just submitted to Secretary Baker for transmission to Congress, a report dealing with the status of the work as it stood on Nov. 1, 1920.

"The tremendous contractual obligations resting on the War Department at the time of the armistice," said Mr. Baker's statement, "placed upon the War Department Claims Board a task of gigantic proportions. When the board was first organized, it was confronted with more than 30,000 claims, a docket which would stagger any court. Of these claims on June 30, 1920, approximately 2,400 were still unsettled, on Oct. 31, 1920, there were but 604 claims outstanding.

"When the work of settling the claims against the Government first started forty-two claims boards were organized, thereby decentralizing the work, but these boards were controlled in principle and policy by the War Department Board, whose final approval was requested for each adjustment. A gradual contraction of this organization has been made until at present there remains only the War Department Claims Board, in which all contractual claims arising as a result of the war are adjusted.

"In a great majority of the cases disposed of the claimants have accepted the settlements tendered by the adjustment board, a number of claims were rejected as being without merit and in a few instances the contractors have insisted upon greater sums than could be allowed and may be expected to take their cases to the Court of Claims.

"The principal significance of this great work of settlement, it should be particularly noted, is that each of the 30,000 claims was a potential lawsuit, many of them involving large sums of money as well as novel and difficult problems of law and accountancy. By the prompt action of the War Department in releasing funds justly due, the solvency of numerous enterprises was maintained.

"There was boundless opportunity for dangerous delay by the Government and for overreaching demands by the claimants, but instead of a hopeless mass of litigation that might have resulted, the American business men all over the country met with the designated Government agencies and reasoned out their accounts between them. The adjustment thus accomplished without recourse to litigation, with protection for the interests of the United States, with equity to the contractors, constitutes the greatest episode of its kind in business history.

"On June 30 all subsidiary claims boards, including the Board of Contract Adjustment and the Board of Appraisers were definitely merged into the War Department Claims Board and Colonel John A. Hull of the Judge Advocate General's Department placed in charge. Colonel Hull was particularly qualified for this work, having had extensive experience in handling claims and having been in charge, from its inception, of the reparations and claims service in France.

"While greatly handicapped by the lack of funds for administrative expenses, this board with its highly trained and specialized personnel is working through the remaining cases as rapidly as can be expected.

"It is each week disposing of matters which if subjected to ordinary solution by litigation would require months and years for adjustment. From June 30, 1920, to Nov. 1, 1920, awards of $38,433,000 were granted on claims amounting to $268,721,000; a net saving of $230,278,000. These contracts were therefore settled at the rate of 14.3 cents on the dollar. The cost of operation of the Claims Board since June 30, 1920, with reference to the claims considered was twenty-one one hundredths of 1 per cent. The total net savings effected by final payments approved in canceling outstanding obligations of contracts and claims settled from Jan. 1, 1918, to Nov. 1, 1920, was $2,912,465,898.85, and the amount approved for payment in partial and final settlement $473,415,993.94."

The Banking Situation

THE rapid changes in commodity prices, the industrial readjustments, and financial disturbances incident to the periods of war and reconstruction have provided a severe test for the credit and banking resources of this country.

It is a matter of national congratulation that our banking system has successfully met that test and occupies today an intrinsically sound and strong position. The combined resources of all banks in this country, exclusive of Federal Reserve banks, are in excess of fifty-three billion dollars. Approximately one-third of all the gold coin and bullion of the world is held in the United States, and underlies our credit structure.

It is also a matter of national congratulation that our banks, as a whole, accumulated ample reserves out of their earnings during the five years of prosperity we have just enjoyed—with which they have been able to more than meet the conditions due to the decline in commodity and security markets.

In the readjustment period since the Armistice, as during the war, the Federal Reserve System has functioned constructively and conservatively. It has met the problems of the hour in a manner to serve and protect the best interests of the nation. Credit has been liberally extended, but without impairment of reserves. And if the readjustments which the existing situation require are left to the orderly operation of economic laws, they will be made safely and to the ultimate welfare of the country.

As a member bank of the Federal Reserve System, this Company has met the essential requirements of its clients. In the working out of the constructive business program the country now faces, this Company, with its trained organization of five thousand members; its capital, surplus and undivided profits of more than $60,000,000; its resources of more than $800,000,000; and its world-wide banking facilities, is prepared to render the fullest measure of service.

NEW YORK'S Volunteer Fire Department

THAT New York's early Volunteer Fire Department should have so commanded the admiration of Europe is not strange. Into its creation were flung the energy and enthusiasm of rich and poor alike. The names of founders and directors of the Bank of the Manhattan Company appear on page after page of its annals—John Watts, Walter Bowne, Jacob Sherred, John Bogert and scores of others. It was this same spirit of creative enthusiasm which stirred the men who founded the Bank and who played such a notable part in the affairs of the Nation and its commercial and industrial development. And today, in that same spirit, the Bank is bending its huge resources to the service of those men whose initiative and courage in the development of business commands for America the respect of the world.

POSTAL SERVICE HAS $17,270,482 DEFICIT

CLAIMS GREAT PROGRESS

He Attacks Unions of Employes, Charging They Tend to Demoralize the Efficiency of the Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Operation of the United States Postal Service for the fiscal year 1920 resulted in a deficit of $17,270,482, the second largest in the history of the service, Postmaster General Burleson shows in his annual report today to the President, in which expenditures of the Post Office Department are placed at $454,322,609, and revenues at $437,150,212. The Postmaster General charges Congress with direct responsibility for the deficit, explaining that the expenditures included approximately $33,202,600 paid as a war bonus to postal employes, and stating that but for this there would have been a surplus of $18,427,917. Mr. Burleson says he declined to approve the bonus action of the legislative department, adding that he had offered suggestions of another plan for compensating the employes which would have served the purpose without at the same time giving a blanket increase in pay to "thousands who were already amply compensated."

"For reasons that can be readily understood," he continues, "the legislative department rejected these suggestions made by the Postmaster General, and hence is directly responsible for the deficit which inevitably followed the indefensible action.

"The Postmaster General feels constrained," he adds, "to point out that if a prompt halt is not called and such a policy is persisted in there will be a deficiency for the next fiscal year of approximately $36,000,000, and the postal establishment will cease to be self-supporting, as it should be, and will become a constantly increasing burden upon the general Treasury."

Reference is also made to the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission granting the railways additional pay aggregating $8,103,889 for carrying the mails. This served likewise to offset increases in postal receipts, Mr. Burleson declares.

Outlines Progress of Service.

In his discussion of his administration of the postal service, the Postmaster General says:

"The present postal administration has been one of continuous and permanent progress and improvement. Nothing has been left undone that was within the authority of the Postmaster General to do to effect readjustments in the interests of the people as a whole and not in that of any special class.

"The air mail service, which has been operated successfully since its inauguration, May 15, 1918, has been extended across the continent and collaterally and further extension by contract service inaugurated.

"The parcel post service, both domestic and international, has been greatly extended and facilities for handling parcels improved, 260 foreign countries and colonies now being reached by this service.

"City delivery service has been extended, the established service in all the larger cities materially improved, and the Government owned motor vehicle service, inaugurated in 1914, has been established in 163 cities.

"The railway mail service has been operated with increased efficiency under the space system, facilities for the handling of mail improved and the service firmly established upon a scientific basis.

"War conditions have been overcome in the foreign mail service, which has been brought back to normal and is rapidly improving.

"The money order service and the postal savings system have rapidly recovered from war conditions and are in most satisfactory operation.

"The rural mail service was extended during the fiscal year to more than 600,000 additional persons and the facilities of the service systematized and improved.

"There has been still further improvement in the registry and insured parcel post systems and the methods of handling dead letters.

"A large number of important improvements have been made in the mail equipment shop, facilitating the work, adding to the compensation and the comforts of the employes and at the same time lowering, by efficient methods, the unit cost of production.

"Salaries of employes in all grades have been increased and working conditions and conveniences improved wherever possible."

Assails Employes' Organizations.

Attention is again directed by the Postmaster General to the growth of organizations among the postal employees and he urges that steps be taken to "curb the malicious and pernicious influence" of these organizations upon the postal personnel. He says they have operated to "interfere to a considerable extent with the efficient conduct" of the service, adding that "much of the so-called 'demoralized postal service' and 'dissatisfaction' exist only in the minds and imaginations of paid agitators of these organizations who instill and hammer these doctrines into the minds of the employes through the medium of their publications."

"The avowed purpose of these organizations," continues Mr. Burleson, "is not solely to advance the social and economic welfare of their members, but to exercise a coercive influence upon the department to compel submission to their demands."

The postal service head declares the use of the strike against the Government by an "outside" organization is a menace to the welfare of the Republic, as it not only results in a divided allegiance, but engenders dissatisfaction, discontent and unrest and in the lowering of efficiency.

"Postal employes have become bold because of this affiliation, and have within recent years threatened to strike," Mr. Burleson adds. "In one case they actually did so by tendering their resignations and leaving in a body. In this case they were promptly indicted and prosecuted in the Federal courts.

"While strikes in the postal service may be averted for the time being, yet they will come, and the public will then be brought face to face with a most serious situation—one which will be a menace to our Government."

Mr. Burleson also recounts in his report the development of the foreign mails service, of which a feature is the transpacific, South American and Mexican services. He says that in the last fiscal year the number of countries and colonies reached by American service was increased from 45 to 200 and that more rapid transportation was given because of a rehabilitated merchant marine service.

With respect to South America, the Postmaster General says there is still room for improvement through the medium of faster sea transportation, especially to Argentina, Brazil and Paraguay. Similarly, he says, mails to the west coast of South America are moving better than hitherto as they now are transported without transhipment, but the complaint of slow sea service again is noted.

Better Service to Mexico.

Mail facilities to Mexico continued to improve during the year so that mail service "at present is on the whole better than at any time since 1914," Mr. Burleson says. The New York-Vera Cruz service has been operated regularly on a bi-weekly basis by way of Havana and Progreso.

Turning from the general administrative work to detailed matters, the head of the department says that the receipts from postage on mail aggregated $391,552,205, a decrease of 1.76 per cent. from last year. Of the total amount, $38,060,795 was derived from mailings on which the postage was paid in money. He points out that the total postage bill was equivalent to $3.65 per capita for the nation's population.

Parcel post revenues, Mr. Burleson estimates, aggregate approximately $150,000,000, or $10,000,000 more than in the previous year. Postage on second-class mailings produced $25,107,841, an increase of more than nine million dollars over 1919.

There has been an "immense increase" in the amount of mail handled free by the postal service, Mr. Burleson declares, adding that "the free mailings of members of Congress and the various establishments of the Government under the franking privileges" cost in handling and transportation approximately $9,400,000.

The volume of mail of all kinds likewise has increased, the report shows, and Mr. Burleson urgently recommends the establishment of greater plants, especially in New York and Chicago, where the situations are represented as particularly acute. One-fifth of all the second-class mail matter handled originates in New York City, and Mr. Burleson recommends the construction there of three great buildings, costing in the aggregate about thirty million dollars, together with a tunnel connection between them to expedite the handling of mails. He also recommends the construction of one large building in Chicago.

OUR SHIPS OUTNUMBER OTHERS AT HAMBURG

Ten of Them to Six British, but the Vast Harbor Is Almost Deserted.

HAMBURG, Dec. 12 (Associated Press).—Ten American ships were counted today by the correspondent in a general tour of Hamburg Harbor, as against six flying the British flag, four the French, four the Dutch and one the Japanese. The American vessels, most of which were unloading grain, were the Ipswich, Harry Luckenbach, Kerkenna and Curlew, all from New York; the Lake Ganado of Saginaw, the Chicomico of Seattle, the Belle and the Rose of Kearney, the Eastern Breeze and the Victorious of San Francisco.

The great harbor, which is capable of accommodating a quarter of the world's tonnage, is virtually deserted, but still it is showing slightly more life than six months ago, because of a renewal of American shipping through an arrangement of the United American Lines with the Hamburg-American Line, which is dredging, rushing repairs and building ships preparatory to a resumption of world trade in connection with American interests.

Small shipments of print paper, pasteboard, artificial flowers, pianos and other miscellaneous cargo, including airplanes, which the Entente is trying to prevent Germany from exporting, all awaiting shipment to the United States, are in the gigantic warehouses of the Hamburg-American Line.

An American ship, taking on an assorted cargo for South America, and a British ship, unloading beef from Buenos Aires, were the only two vessels at the Hamburg-American docks, where in the pre-war days daily were to be found twenty-five ships. Most of the shipping in the Free Port (the bonded warehouse district of the harbor) consisted of grain carriers. The Hamburg-American Line, owing to lack of ships, is doing an extensive Baltic trade with river barges drawn by tugs.

RIGHTS FOR POLISH JEWS.

The Jewish Morning Journal of this city yesterday received the following cable dispatch from its correspondent in Warsaw:

"Warsaw, Dec. 11.—The Polish Government today officially proclaimed the minority rights clause of the Versailles Treaty as part of the law of the land. This clause aimed to ameliorate the condition of the Jews in Poland.

"The Polish Government hitherto had only officially recognized the Versailles Treaty, but not the appendix to paragraph 93, which dealt with the rights of the minorities.

"This step by the Government followed a conference of officials including Prime Minister Vitos, Foreign Minister Sapieho and Vice Premier Ignatz Dashinsky. At this conference Dashinsky did some plain speaking about the present policy of the Polish Government.

"After the proclamation was issued, Dashinsky conferred for three hours with the Jewish deputies of the Polish Parliament, Hirshhorn, Farbstein, Shipper, Greenbaum, Hartglass and Diamond. Dashinsky told the Jewish deputies that the Government was ready to institute many reforms favoring the Jews.

"At the same time some of the Polish councilmen of the city of Warsaw made threats against the Jews of Poland, charging them with being responsible for the anti-Polish sentiment in America."

LAWS LESSEN AUTO MISHAPS

An investigation of conditions relating to the operation of automobiles in States near New York has shown, according to a statement issued yesterday by Colonel Edward S. Cornell, Secretary of the National Highways Protective Society, a decrease in the fatalities due to automobiles and in the thefts of motor cars, in marked contrast to conditions in New York.

Colonel Cornell declares that the automobile interests in this State have opposed any change in the laws, for fear of a decrease in their sales, while in other States, such as Connecticut, New Jersey, Maryland and Pennsylvania, the public has taken the initiative and laws have been enacted which protected the automobile interests and the public alike.

Colonel Cornell quotes from a letter from Frank A. Goodwin of Boston, the Massachusetts Registrar of Motor Vehicles, who gives figures showing a decrease in accidents and adds:

"If the politicians will let your new Secretary alone, in a very short time he will be able to get the support of the public, because as a rule the great public believes in right."

PLAN UNION FRIENDLY TO U.S.

Central Americans Here Say All Agreements Would Be Guaranteed.

The Comite Unionista Centroamericano, an organization composed of 2,000 citizens of the Central American republics living in New York City who are working for the union of the five small States into one republic, met yesterday afternoon at Broadway and 103d Street.

Manuel Urruela, President of the organization, pointed out that the purpose of the alliance of the five republics was not to oppose the United States, as has been stated by some newspapers, but to further friendly intercourse between this country and the Central American States.

He said the organization would request the United States Government to withdraw American marines from Nicaragua because the new republic would be based on law and order and would guarantee all previous agreements made by the five constituent States. The organization also discussed sending letters to American labor organizations to promote interest in and friendship with laboring men of the Central American States.

BOARD DELIVERED 1,180 SHIPS IN 1920

ENORMOUS TONNAGE BY 1922

American Merchant Fleet Expected to Surpass All Countries Combined Except England.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—With completion of the Government shipbuilding program by 1922 the United States probably will have as much ocean-going tonnage as all the other countries combined, with the exception of Great Britain, according to Chairman Benson's annual general report, made public today. The financial report was given to the press last week.

At the end of the last fiscal year, the Chairman said, American merchant ships, Government and private owned, numbered 3,404, of 16,918,212 deadweight tons, not including more than 2,000,000 tons of shipping on the Great Lakes. The net program of Government-owned ships, Admiral Benson said, contemplated the construction of 2,315 vessels of 13,675,711 deadweight tons, and at the end of the last fiscal year 2,070 ships, aggregating 11,622,361 deadweight tons, had been completed.

In the course of the year 1,180 finished ships of 6,379,823 deadweight tons were delivered, exceeding all records. They were built without overtime or other aids to rapid production, Admiral Benson said.

"The shipyard worker of the United States has developed an expertness which has raised the efficiency of the various crafts to a high plane, and production has kept pace accordingly," Admiral Benson said. The industry had expanded its force of 50,000 skilled mechanics to one of 385,000 men, available to the private shipyards, he added.

"The credit for the accomplishment of the aims of the Emergency Fleet Corporation is therefore due to these men, who have surpassed all previous performances in the shipbuilding of the world," he said.

American vessels are now sailing in 229 separate services. They carried 44.6 per cent. of the nation's foreign commence last year as compared with 9.7 per cent before the war, the report said.

The Government fleet in operation June 30 consisted of 1,294 steel vessels plying to all quarters of the globe, including 508 to Northern Europe and 126 to Southern Europe. In the trans-Pacific service there were 163 vessels, and in the South American 138.

Forty-one direct service lines have been established to South and Central America from nine ports on the Atlantic Coast, four on the Gulf and two on the Pacific Coast.

To cope with the formidable problems overseas, Admiral Benson said, the European organization of the Shipping Board, with headquarters in London, was established in June, 1919. Prior to its creation board vessels in European ports had been attended entirely by the agents of the managing companies, the report said, who "either through inefficiency, indifference or dishonesty allowed American ships to be mishandled and subjected to delays and exorbitant charges."

The new organization, through its control over movements, charter, cargoes, bunkers, supplies, repairs and similar matters, the report explained, had reduced the average turn around of board vessels from 25.4 days for Great Britain and 19 days from the Continent in September, 1919, to 19.2 days for Great Britain and 11.3 days for the Continent in May, 1920. Costs have also been materially reduced, according to the report.

The board sold during the year 426 ships for a total of $279,914,594, including 131 new steel cargo vessels, thirty-four new wooden ships and thirty-three former German cargo ships.

Discussing the wooden fleet, Chairman Benson said the maximum number in operation was 240 during April. In June there were 170 at work.

The demand for tanker tonnage increased during the year. The Chairman said the board's ships were in constant service, chiefly between Mexican and American gulf ports and North Atlantic ports and American oil stations at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, Brest and Bizerta. On the Pacific the lines run between San Francisco and American foreign stations at Honolulu, Manila and Shanghai. Government tank steamers carried 3,641,362 tons of oil in the course of the year.

Nearly all seized German cargo craft have been sold or chartered with option to purchase, while all but eleven of the German passenger ships were disposed of in the course of the year. No disposition has been made, however, of the one Austrian vessel, the Martha Washington.

The Chairman urged that Congress provide machinery to adjudicate claims of other than enemy citizens against these seized vessels, in view of the delay in the peace treaties.

Describing the activities of the board's Department of Investigation, the Chairman reported that between April, 1918, and June, 1920, there had been 2,500 separate investigations conducted over the country. Operations had been coordinated, he added, with those of the Department of Justice, the Naval and Military Intelligence Services and other agencies of the Government in which there was joint interest.

WANTS IMMIGRATION CUT TO A FIXED RATE

TO INTRODUCE BILL TODAY

Proposed Restriction, However, Would Not Apply to Citizens of Countries on This Hemisphere.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Senator Dillingham of Vermont, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Immigration, will introduce in the Senate tomorrow a bill to limit the number of aliens of any nationality who may be admitted to the United States as immigrants in any fiscal year to 5 per cent. of the number of persons of such nationality already residing in the United States. The proposed restriction, however, will not apply to immigrants who are naturalized or native born citizens of countries in the Western Hemisphere.

France	8,601	5,916
Netherlands	7,147	6,008
Sweden	17,843	33,403
Switzerland	3,762	6,251
United Kingdom	89,188	128,898
Total N. W. Europe	182,850	337,602
Austria-Hungary	225,931	83,507
Bulgaria, Serbia, Montenegro	4,964	1,104
Greece	26,442	5,007
Italy	220,967	67,213
Russia	210,922	86,709
Spain	5,722	1,519
Turkey in Europe	13,930	1,611
Turkey in Asia	16,780	2,991
Total Southern and Eastern Europe & Turkey in Asia	738,607	256,469

The purpose of the Dillingham bill is to fix a definite limit to future immigration without discrimination as to countries or origin, and to prevent the admission in any one year of so great a number of immigrants of any nationality that their assimilation into the population of the country would be practically impossible. On the basis of the foreign-born population as shown by the census of 1910 it is contended that the 5 per cent. plan would limit the immigration from Southern and Eastern Europe and Turkey in Asia to approximately 256,000 persons annually, as compared with an average annual immigration from those countries of 738,000 in the five-year period, 1910-1914.

On the other hand, it is pointed out, the percentage plan would not reduce the normal flow of immigration from most of the northwestern countries of Europe, the average annual influx from such sources being only 183,000 in the five-year period, 1910-1914. Under the proposed Dillingham measure about 250,000 persons from the northwestern countries would be admissible annually. This is due to the fact that as a result of earlier immigration, a large number of natives of these countries are in the United States, while the number coming in has greatly decreased in recent years.

ASK VOLSTEAD ACT REPEAL.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 12.—Folowing the unexpected report of the Grand Jury yesterday, advocating repeal of the Volstead act and favoring legalizing the sale of light wines and beer as an aid in enforcing prohibition, prominent attorneys today held that the action of the jury in drawing up a petition urging Congress to modify the act will invalidate the eighty-five indictments for its violation brought by the jury after six weeks of work.

"I cannot understand how a Grand Jury can make public its findings as a jury," said Thomas A. Delaney, Federal Prohibition Director for Wisconsin. "It's certainly unusual and I am more than surprised."

Representative John C. Kleczka of the Fourth District announced that he would ask an immediate repeal of the Volstead measure. The jury in its petition to Congress said that bootlegging traffic was much worse than in the "wet" days and cited the example of lumber workers in the north woods who, they said, before the advent of prohibition got drunk for several days and returned to work. Now they take "moonshine," and need hospital treatment for several weeks after a debauch.

700 LIQUOR AUTOS SEIZED.

BOSTON, Dec. 12.—The statement that 1,800 persons had been arrested and 700 liquor-carrying automobiles seized by a flying squadron of eighty Federal prohibition enforcement officers since July 1 in their efforts to break up illicit transportation of liquor between New York and Boston was made today by William J. McCarthy, Enforcement Agent for New England. Closest attention is now being paid to Connecticut, Mr. McCarthy said.

Automobiles with special tank compartments for accommodation of liquor, piano cases, orange crates and furniture vans were mentioned by Mr. McCarthy as among the most popular ways of moving liquor. Tanks concealed within seat cushions and behind the upholstering of sedan cars have been discovered, he said. Most of the cars contain a gasoline tank of two compartments, one of which is filled with liquor, and women are said to be carried as passengers in an attempt to conceal the real errand of the automobiles.

Mr. McCarthy asserted that Springfield, Worcester, Lowell and Providence had been practically closed as avenues for liquor destined for Boston.

MADRID, Dec. 12.—The official posting of the names of candidates for the elections to the Cortes took place today. There was not the slightest excitement anywhere. How many candidates will be returned without opposition is not known, but apparently there will be about fifty.

The Republican newspaper El Pais today makes violent attack on the Socialists because of their attitude in not supporting the Republican candidates, even where Socialists are not standing. The newspaper says this probably will result in the loss of several seats to the Republican group, which in general upholds the Socialist program.

MEXICO PLANS TO AVERT SHUTDOWN OF MINES

Decree Reducing Taxes and Annulling Laws Restricting Imports of Materials Is Expected.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 12.—With approximately one-third of the republic's 3,500 silver and copper mines closed down because of the low market price of those metals, the Government this week will take emergency measures to prevent complete paralysis of the industry with the consequent throwing out of work of more than 500,000 laborers, according to a Treasury Department statement.

The action is expected to take the form of a Presidential decree reducing freight rates and Federal taxes and annulling laws restricting the importation of materials such as steel, powder, acids and tools.

During the past week, President Obregon has conferred with the Governors of Guanajuato, Zacatecas and Durango and has met delegations from the States of Hidalgo, Chihuahua and Coahuila, all of whom described the situation as grave, with the possibility that mine owners would be forced to close down all their properties.

Governor Madrazo of the State of Guanajuato declared here today that silver and copper mines in his State pay 700,000 pesos in taxes annually, and expend more than 4,000,000 pesos annually, and if forced to suspend operations the heads of 5,000 families would be without work.

Representatives of large mining interests have asserted that the present market price of silver of 58 cents per troy ounce renders operation of the mines impossible except at a loss of approximately 22 cents on each ounce, although Federal aid in the form of reduction of freight rates and taxes would make possible at least partial operation until the market ascends.

A delegation of miners from Pachuca, the most important mining city in Mexico, arrived in Mexico City last night bearing a manifesto which will be presented to President Obregon today, asking the Government to take over all the mines and operate them.

Reflecting on the delicate situation is the refusal of Mexico City bankers yesterday to accept silver deposits of more than 20 pesos. The Government is known to be coining only small amounts of silver.

NEW HAVEN MORTGAGES DELIVERED TO TRUSTEE

It Authorizes $95,000,000 of New Bonds—$80,000,000 for Federal Debt.

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 12.—The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad tonight announced that the first and refunding mortgage of the road has been executed and delivered to the Bankers Trust Company of New York, trustee. The mortgage is a first lien upon 422 miles of the company's lines, says the statement. This includes the main line from New York to Providence (excepting a $1,000,000 mortgage on the lines from New London to Providence, and the main line from New Haven to Springfield. It covers the perpetual operating rights over the New York & Harlem River road into the Grand Central Station and the perpetual rights to the use of the Grand Central Station and the South Station in Boston.

A total of not more than $95,000,000 of new bonds is authorized by the mortgage. Not exceeding $80,000,000 of the new bonds are authorized to refund the company's indebtedness to the United States Government, incurred during the period of Federal control. Not exceeding $15,000,000 are authorized to be issued for security to the United States for new loans that may be made to the company for equipment and betterments.

GERMANS WANT COTTON.

BREMEN, Dec. 12.—Rumors received here that the American Government may assist the cotton growers in the United States to hold their crops, and that the growers will limit their acreage next year are attracting much attention among Bremen cotton merchants.

A representative of the merchants told The Associated Press representative today that the output of German cotton mills was now about 50 per cent. of normal, but was greatly hampered by the fuel shortage.

The greatest activity in the cotton industry is in South Germany, where water power is available. Mill owners have pooled their interests and are operating a limited number of mills on full time rather than all of them on part time. The merchants say the mills have bought all the cotton needed for Spring and most of the supply necessary to cover their Summer needs. Consequently there are only a few emergency sales.

There is a general complaint among the merchants about the failure of the Americans to deliver cotton promptly because of steamer delays, which are alleged to be due to limited oil supply and defective machinery.

As the Bremen Exchange forbids dealing in futures and requires spot deliveries, merchants have been greatly inconvenienced by the failure of cotton to arrive at the time promised. They frequently must buy to supply orders with a loss in exchange and find themselves overstocked when the cargoes finally arrive.

Two bales of cotton sent by Mrs. von Roeder of Knapp, Texas, brought 1,800 marks at auction, which sum was turned over to the Bremen Children's Aid Society.

$3,125,000 VOTED FOR JEWISH RELIEF

MILLION GOES TO RUSSIA

Preliminary Plans Made for Campaign to Raise $10,000,000 for the Work in 1921.

The sum of $3,125,000, the largest ever appropriated at a single meeting by a strictly charitable organization, was yesterday voted for Jewish War Relief in Europe by the Joint Distribution Committee of the American Funds for Jewish War Sufferers, of which Felix M. Warburg is Chairman, at a meeting at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

The appropriations were made within less than twenty-four hours of the arrival of Lieutenant James Becker, Director General of the committee's relief work abroad, who rendered his report of conditions in Europe and of the results of a conference held in Vienna ten days ago of the committee's representatives from every part of Central and Eastern Europe and Palestine.

The committee voted the money which is to cover actual relief operations only until July 1 next without having the cash actually in the Treasury, but the members pledged themselves individually and collectively to the raising of the entire sum. Some of the men, in addition to Mr. Warburg, who made this pledge, were Louis Marshall, Dr. Cyrus Adler, Cyrus L. Sulzberger, Colonel Herbert Lehman, Arthur Lehman, Paul Baerwald, Dr. Lee K. Frankel, Dr. Julius Goldman, Colonel H. A. Guinzburg, Howard S. Gans, Mary Strauss, William B. Erdman, Rabbi Aaron Teitelbaum, Colonel Harry Plotz, Albert Lucas, Abraham Schepper, Morris Engelman, Stanley Bero and some fifty others constituting the committee.

The committee also made preliminary plans for the conduct of a national campaign during 1921 that will have for its objective a minimum of $10,000,000 to carry on relief work abroad.

Poland	690,000
Austria	200,000
Hungary	200,000
Palestine	400,000
Czechoslovakia	100,000
Lithuania	75,000
Rumania	195,000
Latvia	100,000

COCOANUT OIL IMPORTS RISE

Increase From 54,145,000 to 281,063,000 Pounds in Five Years.

Striking evidence of the place cocoanut oil has made for itself in the American market is shown by the fact that while average imports into the United States from 1910 to 1914 were 54,145,000 pounds, the imports for 1919 amounted to 281,063,000 pounds. During the war the manufacture of all types of edible oil products received a great impetus in the United States. In 1918 of the total consumption of cocoanut oil in this country, reckoned at 421,000,000 pounds, 13,000,000 pounds were used by the lard substitute industry, 62,000,000 pounds by the oleomargarine industry and about 116,000,000 pounds were sold under private brands for cooking oils.

Although by far the larger share of the imports of cocoanut oil into the United States is consumed by domestic manufacturers, this country has also become an important exporter of oil. Prior to 1919 exports were relatively unimportant, but in 1919 they suddenly expanded to 126,566,000 pounds. During the present year they have heavily decreased.

The rapid increase in imports of cocoanut oil and copra into the United States during the war was in large part due to the fact that the glycerine content of cocoanut oil is high, being about 13 per cent. Glycerine is a by-product of the soap industry. Before 1870 this by-product was allowed to waste. Since the beginning of the century the increasing use of explosives in mining and other industrial enterprises has greatly increased the demand. For the manufacture of munitions in the war large quantities of it became an absolute necessity.

From the viewpoint of the United States the most significant development of the last few years has been the rapid rise of the Philippine Islands in the copra and cocoanut oil industry, says a bulletin of the National Bank of Commerce surveying the trade. "The mill capacity of the islands is in excess of the present copra production there, and mill operators are seeking copra throughout the South Sea Islands. The United States imports more oil from the Philippines than from any other source.

"Ceylon leads in the production of cocoanuts. India and the smaller outlying islands are also important producers. These areas, together with British Malaya, produce about half of the total crop. In Ceylon alone almost 1,000,000 acres are planted to cocoanut trees, while in one province of India, Madras, there are nearly 800,000 acres. The Dutch East Indies are the source of great quantities of copra and oil. The area reported as in cocoanut plantations in 1919 was 58,000 acres, and the preceding year the total number of trees was estimated 108,000,000. The Philippine Islands are fourth in importance in the cocoanut growing industry. It is estimated that nearly 70,000,000 trees are growing on the 750,000 acres planted in cocoanut groves in the islands.

"The chief markets are the United States, the United Kingdom and France. Before the war Germany was the largest importer of copra. It is to be expected that the German manufacturers will make themselves increasingly felt in the market as Germany gradually recovers its economic strength."

PIG IRON FROM STEEL.

A new method has recently been developed for converting scrap or old steel back into pig iron, according to The Scientific American.

"Considerable has been said and written about making steel in the electric furnace, which is a development of the last four years," says the writer. "Not so much has been promulgated about making pig iron from steel in such a furnace. It is standard practice to make pig iron, from which all steel is originally made, by smelting iron ore in a blast furnace and thus reducing or converting it to metallic iron, so called, in the shape of pig iron.

"At times certain kinds of pig iron are hard to obtain as made by standard methods. This has been true lately in Canada and France. It was therefore necessary to make it by a new method, if possible.

"An electric furnace was used in France for the purpose of converting scrap steel back into pig iron, something never thought possible nor probable only two or three years ago. Scrap steel or borings or turnings are charged from the upper flat form into the top of the furnace. Electricity is conducted into this furnace by the apparatus suspended from the wall.

"When the crude steel is melted certain additions are made to it so as to increase the percentage of carbon, silicon, &c., and very soon after the mass is tapped out at the bottom in the shape of pig iron. It then flows into systematic molds made in a bed of sand. When cold it is removed and is called 'pig' iron because each section of iron is attached to the central larger section or trough much as pigs gain their sustenance from the mother sow.

"Many tons of such iron has been made in both France and Canada, and it is regarded as, or can be made, the finest pig iron of any."

Dr. Soule Declares Big Empire Could Be Reclaimed in the United States.

Dr. Andrew M. Soule, President of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, speaking at the recent National Drainage Congress in Atlanta, declared that there was from 80,000,000 to 100,000,000 acres of land in the United States too wet for cultivation, in swamps or subject to periodical overflow, which could be reclaimed by drainage. The problem, however, he added, was one that would rival the construction of the Panama Canal. This new empire, he said, would be greater than the British Isles and more than twice the extent of the State of Georgia. Dr. Soule, in part, said:

"The investigations made as to the extent and nature of the land needing drainage in the United States are but at the best reconnoissance surveys. In any event, we should have an immense tract of land which should constitute one of our greatest natural resources. The reclamation of this great area has properly been regarded as one of the greatest pieces of constructive work ever undertaken in the history of the world.

"The problem of draining 80,000,000 acres of land is so great a task that it is difficult to properly appraise the size of the undertaking. Expressed in another way, we have at least 125,000 square miles of territory that need drainage. There are but 120,000 square miles in Great Britain. There are less than 60,000 square miles in Georgia. Holland, far-famed for the nature and extent of her drainage works, contains but 12,585 square miles. Hence, we have in our undrained lands in the United States a vast new empire in suspense; a vast natural resource of limitless possibilities. When it is opened up and utilized as an asset, we will have added virgin soils of great productive power to our national resources, which are fully capable of sustaining for an indefinite period a population of 50,000,000 to 60,000,000 people. This is not in any sense an exaggerated statement, but a cold and logical co-ordination of indisputable facts.

"There is fortunately extant a living example of what drainage and irrigation have done in China. In the Province of Szechuan, known as the Beautiful, they are maintaining a population of 60,000,000 people on approximately 90,000 square miles of cultivated land. It is true that this State contains 181,000 square miles, but over half of it consists of rugged mountains, and is therefore of little value for agricultural purposes. The great drainage and irrigation projects in Szechuan were completed by Li Ping about 200 B. C. He had little beyond manual labor with which to accomplish this marvelous undertaking. The engineering skill displayed was of such a superb character that the original canals are in use today. If Li Ping could drain 90,000 square miles so successfully previous to 200 B. C., surely the task of draining 125,000 square miles should be easy of accomplishment to the energetic and highly trained people of the United States."

PLANS TO USE CHECKS ONLY

Rochester Company Eliminates Currency in All Its Business.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 16.—A large business house having headquarters in this city has undertaken to conduct its affairs entirely without the use of money. Instead of currency, it intends to use checks, trade acceptances and travel checks to make payments of every kind, including its payroll. As the concern deals with more than 800,000 individual customers, the result of the experiment will be watched with interest.

The company's reason for adopting this method is given as an effort to demonstrate a means of ending the epidemic of payroll robberies and "to show that modern business may be conducted most efficiently without the use of 'small change,' thus leaving the nation's money where it belongs, in the banks, to serve as the basis of credit."

The announcement says that even carfares, hotel bills and railroad fares for the company's force of several hundred salesmen and other sundry expenses are to be paid by checks. All petty items, even to one-cent postage stamps, will be paid for henceforth by check, and "no currency of any amount or denomination is to be carried in any form as company property."

To meet the payroll of its factory, the company has offered to each employe either a regular pay check or the option of receiving on pay day a deposit slip showing that his earnings for the week have been deposited to his credit in a local bank. This plan is expected by the house to prove popular with the thrifty class of employes, and to increase the volume of bank deposits. Executive employes who have no banking account have been advised to start one at once.

TRACTOR OUTPUT GROWS.

Eighty Manufacturers Made 164,590 in 1919.

Reports received by the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture from eighty manufacturers of tractors show that during the year 1919 they manufactured a total of 164,590, as compared with 132,697 in 1918. The output for the year would have been much larger but for labor troubles and the shortage of material. The report also gives the number of tractors sold in the United States as 136,162, while 19,693 were sold for export. There was a decided decrease in the number of tractors sold for export in 1919, as compared with the preceding year, which was 36,351.

In all, reports were received from 156 companies, but only eighty had manufactured machines during the year. It is believed that the total number of machines manufactured by those eighty firms represents at least 95 per cent. of the total tractor production in the country during the year. Following is a summary of the reports received from the manufacturers covering the period 1916 to 1919:

WESTERN VIEW OF TRADE SITUATION

Present Peculiar Conditions in the Grain Markets and in General Business.

ATTITUDE OF RETAILERS

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—For obvious reasons the course of retail trade is now being watched with the greatest interest. It is believed that the consuming public, whose absence has demoralized the wholesale markets, cannot be expected to return until retail prices have been marked down in comformity with the reductions of wholesalers. It is also felt that the labor problem, which is just now greatly complicated by wage reductions and partial unemployment while cost of living to the retail purchaser is still kept up, would be greatly simplified if actual living costs were to be reduced along with wages.

As yet the movement of retail prices, throughout the West as elsewhere, is irregular. On the whole, retail trade is just now fairly active, as is usual at this season. People seem to have considerable money to spend, but there is nevertheless a rather general disposition to give cash for Christmas presents, in order that advantage may be taken of an expected severe drop in prices after the holidays. In many lines, prices seem to have been cut to around replacement cost, but in others a great deal of reduction is still to be expected.

Many of them have heavy losses on goods now on their shelves and are loath to take them, and in addition they are demanding the wide margin of profit assumed to be necessitated by the original high cost of the goods. Good sirloin steaks can be obtained in any quantity at 20 cents per pound in some localities, while in others the price runs up to 45 or 50 cents. Beef prices are low, but not as much so as might be expected when the very low price of the animal is considered, due to the poor returns for slaughter house by-products. As for general business, the fact that it is gradually liquidating is shown by the reduced insurance which is now being carried.

The grain markets reflect the greatest imaginable conflict of opinion regarding prices. While the export demand for cash wheat continues at an exceptionally brisk rate, prices declined the last week, and after a drop of 19¾@20c from the high point, closed within 2¾@5c of the bottom, with net losses of 6@7¼c. It is estimated that hedges on probably 10,000,000 bushels of cash wheat were removed during the week, yet only overselling and profit taking prevented a still further decline.

General business conditions are regarded as far more important market influences than the ordinary run of grain news, and the action of prices indicates that this view is correct. The wheat market is in some quarters considered as struggling between a sensationally strong statistical position, with every indication of an acute domestic shortage before another crop is raised, and a very depressing economic condition. For the time being the latter has the most effect, but there are a great many experienced grain men who believe that sooner or later wheat will sell at much higher prices.

Were it not for fears of unfavorable financial developments, it is believed that possibly the market might commence to work upward at once.

But there is a decidedly nervous undertone, with a lack of confidence on the part of speculative buyers. News of a constructive character is lacking in coarse grains, which closed about the low point of the week with net losses of 4⅛@5⅝ cents on corn and 1⅝@2⅛ cents on oats. The supplies of corn and oats back in the country are extremely large, and while the producer has been holding for higher prices, there are many who are giving up such hopes, and the usual Winter movement of corn is believed to be getting under way as the result of inability to borrow more money from the banks.

From the larger viewpoint the only thing that can help country banks liquidate their loans is for farmers to sell part of their corn at once, which would result in a great amount of indebtedness being paid off. Under any conditions, however, that movement cannot assume large proportions until the last week in December, and the return of money to the country will not be on in volume until some time in January. Therefore the beliefs expressed by bankers of easier money after the turn of the year are hardly likely to be realized as soon as most people have expected.

Spain to Issue Treasury Notes.

MADRID, Dec. 12.—The newspapers announce the approaching issue of a large amount of Treasury bills, which they say probably will reach a total exceeding 400,000,000 pesetas. The bills will be at 5 per cent.

COMMODITY PRICES

A Week of Irregular Movements—Changes in Food and Metals Vary Widely.

Last week was marked by very great irregularity in the movement of prices on nearly all commodity markets. No group of staple products moved continuously in either direction throughout the week, many of them reversed their movements several times during the week, and net changes in prices for the week are opposite in products of the same group.

As against the decline of 6½ cents a bushel in wheat and 5½ in corn, oats ended the week at an advance of 1 cent per bushel and flour was 25 cents per barrel higher. Coffee declined ¼ cent per pound, while butter rose 2 cents a pound and eggs 7 cents per dozen; eggs ending the week at a higher price than any heretofore reached in 1920, a distinction reserved, up to this month, for the price of Jan. 9. Iron and tin declined sharply, whereas copper and lead closed higher.

Following are the cash prices for the principal commodities in the wholesale market at the close of business Saturday, a week before and a year ago:

CEMENT PRICE DROP CHEERS BUILDERS

PRICE REBOUND IS SURE

No Guage Upon 1921 Construction Program Until Far Into Spring—Oak Lower.

Building investors shaping their construction programs for next year upon price changing stipulations were encouraged last week by the announcement of a thirty cent drop in the price of cement according to the current Dow Service Daily Building Reports.

The delivered price for this commodity at the week end was $4.80 as against $5.10 a barrel, representing both a dealers' and a manufacturers' cut. The manufacturer cut his price twenty cents because producers in the mid-western section of the country lowered their price from $2.50 f. o. b. to $1.98 mill. The change in price of soft coal was ascribed as the reason for this cut in the Middle West.

While the soft coal situation has been easing up for some time there were cement authorities who believed that the cut in price of cement here while in part due to the more favorable situation with respect to fuel supply was in reality an attempt on the part of Eastern manufacturers to check the flow of mid-western cement into the eastern territory.

As for the dealers' cut, the slackening of demand for building materials of all kinds was ascribed as the reason for the additional reduction totaling thirty cents a barrel with the usual rebate of twenty-five cents a bag, four bags to the barrel, for empty cotton containers.

There is also some softening in the price of brick of a sub-standard quality, but the quotations were too scattering to warrant their inclusion in the basic price range which is $16 to $18 a thousand, wholesale, on which delivered prices would take the usual additional cost of haulage, handling and 15 per cent.

There are further price recessions in "B" grade clear quartered oak flooring which dropped from $325 a thousand feet, delivered, to $295. "A" grade dropped from $350 to $325. Maple flooring is off $5 a thousand feet. Ash has dropped $60 a thousand feet on one grade and stands firm in another. The same is true of plain oak lumber. Birch is off $20.

The fact that price reductions in some lines have taken place while others have held firm in spite of pressure and that certain building material manufacturers are becoming more willing to accept orders to carry them over the entire first quarter of 1921 are combining to bring out work in architects' offices that has been lying dormant for some time in anticipation that the waiting tactics would wear down the price supporters.

A slight change has therefore been noticed in the building material and distributing centres supplying New York and vicinity. It is not sufficiently sustained by contract award, however, to justify anyone in believing that it foretells the character or quantity of construction that will develop in 1921.

The fact that some of these projects, perhaps a slight majority of them, concern dwelling construction, either of the suburban type of large multi-family structures, like tenements or apartments, might lead to the assumption that next year's construction market would strongly tend in that direction, were it not for the fact that contract awards are not yet sustaining the inquiries in sufficient number to make the situation sufficiently general to be considered barometrical.

The upset condition of business in general, for example, has had a tendency to check commercial construction projects in favor of housing and work of such character, such as institutional building construction. There is also, probably for the same reason, a disposition to defer industrial expansion.

It is generally possible at this time of the year to trace the probable course and character of construction for the ensuing nine months, but the present indications suggest a timid advance into 1921 construction of all kinds covering a period well into February, March and April, when the building season can be considered to be definitely under way, and may be expected to come and go before the true character of next year's construction program can be reliably determined.

Building material prices therefore may be expected to work to more favorable levels as far as the prospective consumer is concerned, thus encouraging an increasing volume of moderate priced construction work.

In the meantime Winter weather conditions will affect manufacturing costs, reserve stocks and transportation so that as the building demand becomes stronger as the new year advances price stiffening may be looked for reaching a peak perhaps toward midsummer or early Autumn when building material producers will have had an opportunity to determine the proportion of the three to four year building construction backlog that is to come out in 1921-22.

The report of the United States Senate Committee on Reconstruction and Industry, of which Senator W. M. Calder is Chairman, dealing with the housing situation, will be out early this week and it is expected that the findings it will reveal will tend to put the public in a much more anticipatory mood with regard to lower building material prices.

This, coupled with the other investigations called to study the housing situation, is expected to have a further tendency to make the prospective builder hesitate until such time as he is convinced that prices have reached a bottom and his construction process will be comparatively free from interruption.

City Bank Club Fund $824,623.

Members of the City Bank Club during 1920 pushed their savings fund to $824,623. The club is an organization of the staffs of the National City Bank, the National City Company, and the International Banking Corporation. The fund, which is known as the City Bank Club Investment Fund, represents the savings of some 2,210 members. The amount at the close of this year shows an increase of nearly $200,000 over a year ago. Interest on the fund, which is handled entirely by the employes, has been paid at the rate of 8 per cent. yearly for the past several years.

Deny Germany Is to Call In Currency

Morton Lachenbruch & Co. say they have received word from the Disconto-Gesellschaft of Berlin denying that there is any truth in the rumors that the German Government intended to call in its currency for stamping. The cabled reply said that such a plan was discussed several months ago, but that it was abandoned as not feasible.

ASKS JEWS TO FARM MORE.

Urging larger and continuous Jewish interest and activity in American agricultural life, Nathaniel Phillips, President of the League of Foreign Born Citizens, in an address yesterday to the delegates of the Federation of Jewish Farmers of America at their second session of the convention at the Educational Alliance in East Broadway, asserted that while many sections of the nation reported a trend to the cities of Gentile agriculturists the ranks of the Jewish farmers showed steadily increasing numbers and greater individual and general prosperity.

"About twenty years ago," said he, "there were not more than 200 Jewish farmers in the whole United States At that period the total value of the acreage they then cultivated was estimated at not more than $40,000. Today there are more than 10,000 Jewish farmers in this country, and the value of their combined acreage is $50,000,000. Their farming equipment is worth more than $10,000."

Mr. Phillips declared that the Jewish people will be doing the best thing toward Americanization and toward becoming real Americans in theory and practice when greater numbers of them become producers by tilling the soil.

B. Zukermann, manager of the Jewish Peoples' Relief Committee, said the Jews in Poland were victims of injustice because their industry and success aroused envy among the less thrifty and idle.

FEAR POLITICS IN SCHOOLS.

Education Association Concerned Over Delay in Naming Examiners.

Fear that the delay in filling three new vacancies on the Board of Examiners by the Board of Education indicates an intention on the part of the board to disregard civil service regulations by the appointment of "favored" candidates was expressed yesterday in a statement issued by the Public Education Association.

The positions, which carry an annual salary of $7,700 each, were created by the board eight months ago and the statement asks why they have not been filled and also why there has been a delay in the reappointment of Dr. Walter L. Hervey as a member of the Board of Examiners, whose application has been before the Board of Education since his term expired on Sept. 27.

"Citizens of New York who are genuinely interested in the schools wish to be assured that in filling these posts every trace of political pressure or preferment will be excluded," the statement says. "The preservation of the morale and efficiency of the professional staff is fundamental to the welfare of the entire school system. The key to their preservation is the Board of Examiners. It is natural, therefore, that the public should be disturbed at the many rumors which convey the impression that the integrity of this board is at stake."

Sales First—then Commercial Independence

SALESMEN'S VACATIONS are over. Workmen's silk shirts must be exchanged for cotton jumpers. Manufacturers must again take up competitive sales strategy.

Every department of business must wake up—wake up some more—and then keep on waking up.

Production is no longer a problem. Jog-trot merchandising and distribution must go. The sales force faces the challenge of its history.

Winning Sales First

Long before the war, sales thinking ran along well-defined channels. Manufacturer, dealer and public all faced a gradually rising market.

The broad problems were clear. The man who bought heavily against future needs, in the main bought wisely.

Today we face a reverse sales situation. It calls for sales thinking based on a radical change in viewpoint. Mere sales push won't meet the situation. In a large measure the effectiveness of sales work is out of the hands of salesmen and in the realm of executive thinking.

Sales activity will be needed. Yes. But mental activity will be needed as never before in recent years.

The manufacturer is not alone in facing new problems. Retailers and wholesalers are in the same boat.

By hook or crook the manufacturer must put his distributing channels on a basis which will lighten their burdens.

The problem can be solved. It will be solved. And in its solving, advertising is destined to play a new role. It is destined to play its important part in turning the channel of public thought sharply aside into sounder conceptions—conceptions which will supplant stagnation with action.

Advertising must also build Commercial Independence

Advertising, however, should not be aimed wholly at winning immediate sales. Advertising should, and can benefit every department of the manufacturer's business.

Thus it can help bring about that highest state of business success, Commercial Independence—Commercial Independence in the manufacturer's relations with his customers, his dealers, his banks, his sales force, his manufacturing force—with every group of people who can directly or indirectly influence his peace of mind in a business way.

Many advertisers who enjoy large sales have won Commercial Independence in a very slight degree Some find it hard to borrow money from the banks. Some wrestle perpetually with labor turnover. Some cannot seem to get any but transient salesmen.

While meeting the immediate demand of "Sales First," we find that advertising can and must help in correcting these unhealthy conditions which lie close to the door of the chief executive.

Through injecting a new note of sincerity into his advertising, one advertiser found it possible to borrow money from bankers who before had refused help.

Many of our clients have been surprised to find that their general advertising has produced a flow of applications from strong salesmen employed elsewhere. Salesmen prefer working for a live, aggressive organization.

In 1917 a great advertiser did the impossible in a building way because builders wanted the name of working for him. They passed by other jobs to do it.

About Ourselves

WITH all proper modesty, we will say that we understand the fundamentals of marketing.

In a sales way, we are not prepared to think for the manufacturer. We are prepared, however, to think with him, and to construct with him.

Our advertising work in the past has grown out of the practical sales conditions then faced.

Our advertising work in the future will grow out of the practical sales conditions now developing.

We have a habit of going at things with thoroughness. We go into situations thoroughly, not for the sake of parade, but for the sake of speed in reaching sound conclusions.

The basic sales conditions to be met are far deeper than the merits of the product and the frame of mind of the public. They involve the thinking, acts and problems of the sales channels used for distribution—the thinking, acts and problems of the salesmen who act as intermediaries.

We believe there is a grip somewhere in the truthful story of every worthy product or service. We know of no short cuts to that grip. We depend on thoroughness to carry us to it.

If ever thoroughness and a practical sales sense were needed in advertising planning, we believe it is needed today.

Should you be interested in the character of our work and our ability to help you, we invite you to write or telephone.

Our Experience with Clients has shown that—

A sound service, properly advertised and schooled into the sales force, can place a Company in an outstanding sales position. Example: The Gargoyle Mobiloils Chart of Recommendations.

Even the most valuable and far-reaching service to the public is incomplete until you tell the public about it. Example: The investment advertising of The National City Company.

Through fair, informative statements, professional as well as public approval can be won for a proprietary article sold through the drug trade. Example: Packer's Tar Soap.

Well-devised advertising can upset trade traditions. The leadership of Djer-Kiss, now twelve years old, ends the tradition that five years of popularity is the limit for a perfume.

Experienced handling can give life and selling force to an apparently dry subject. Example: Columbia Trust Company advertising.

A business made up of a number of brands in scattered territories can be concentrated into a few strong brands—nationally sold. Example: General Cigar Co., Inc.—Robert Burns, Van Dyck, Owl, etc.

If trade respect and public appreciation have been properly won, quality standards may be safely maintained and charged for—even in a high raw materials market. Example: Crossett Shoes.

If you can make a sound thrift appeal, the public will read and act. Example: Advertising of Mercantile Trust Company.

Advertising can very quickly win jobbing support for a brand, in a staple line which jobbers once preferred to sell unbranded. Example: Mayo Mills Underwear.

An ethical theme in the advertising can establish a better basis of understanding between the public and the retail merchant, to the manufacturer's advantage. Example: Toledo Scale—"No Springs—Honest Weight."

With a superior product used in constructing other products, public reputation, has through advertising, proved the one thing needed to gain wide adoption by manufacturers. Example: Columbia Axles.

By skilful presentation, a little article can be made important and thereby quickly reach acknowledged leadership in its field — Wilsnap Dress Fasteners.
